Official Paper of The City.

FRIDAY, AUG. 11 1911.

The way certain ones at Washington favor putting off this tariff revision drives home the thought that they would sooner give the monopolies the benefit of the doubt than the people. Who, then, do they serve?

George W. Perkins, in arguing for the trusts, says "competition produces the two extremes—millionaires and paupers, while co-operation looks toward more stable conditions and a more equal distribution of wealth." We believe this is good socialist doctrine, and when the representatives of wealth take up the trite contentions of socialism the program of the latter must be at the door.

There are four big factors in the situation at Washington: The President, the Standpat Republicans, the Democrats, and the Insurgents. The President wants to be renominated and reelected. The Sandpatters don't care whether he is re-nominated and don't believe he can be reelected. They want to prevent downward revision. The Democrats want Taft re-nominated, but in such circumstances that he will be easy of defeat. The Insurgents want him defeated for re-nomination—Success.

President Taft once admitted the Payne-Aldrich Wool Tariff was "Indefensible." Now that the revision of that schedule is "put up to him" by congress he is thinking of vetoing it because the tariff commission has not had time to send in their findings on that schedule. What were the commission's findings on the Canadian Reciprocity tariff? Has anybody heard? None! Then why did he not vetoe that? Oh, yes, only farmers' interests involved—we see. Some difference when the woolen manufacturer, doesn't like it.

It is with regret that we again call attention to the spirit of hard words and hard feelings displayed at our elections. We do not care who the offenders were, whether friend or foe politically, those who resorted to unkind words and deeds are smaller by reason of such words or deeds in our estimation than they were before. We—the people residing in this city—School District—County—State or Nation, are one family, as it were, and what is good for one can hardly be absolutely detrimental to the other. We all share in a greater or a lesser degree with each other the common prosperity or the common misfortunes. Our laws and constitutions provide for elections which in themselves pre-suppose two things, viz: 1st Different candidates to be voted for and, 2d, Those elected by the majority shall rule for a given length of time. We believe that anyone who is an American citizen has agreed to accept these conditions and hence it seems senseless for anyone to become angry or frenzied over an election since every person has the one privilege of moving out of a community if he does not agree with its practices.

ADVERTISE

"Breathes there a man with soul so dead, who never to himself has said, 'My trade of late is getting bad; I guess I'll use a ten inch ad.' If such there be, go mark him well, for him no bank account shall swell; no angel watch the golden stair to welcome home a millionaire.

"The man who never asks for trade by local ad or line displayed, cares more for rest than wordly gain, and patronage but gives him pain. Tread lightly, friends, let no rude sound disturb his solitude profound; here let him live in calm repose, unsought except by men he owes, and when he dies, go plant him deep that naught may break his dreamless sleep; wherein no clamor may dispel the solitude he loved so well. And, that the world may know it's loss, plant on his grave a wreath of moss, and on a stone above, 'Here lies a chump who wouldn't advertise.'

"But he who hustles night and day to bring the trade along his way, and who indentifies his store with goods that bring a 'call' for more, shall never keep upon his shelves such goods; they almost sell themselves.

"So friend, if you are feeling glum because your 'biz is on the bum', don't moon around and think and think, but use a lot of printer's ink. That evil time will never rise, if you start now and advertise."—Ex.

With seven specific charges brought against him by Delegate Wickersham of Alaska it begins to look like Attorney General Wickersham was no greater a friend of the people than was Ballinger. It must be conceded either that Taft is not that consummate judge of human nature that some have tried to make him out to be; or he is a weakling, unable to do as well as he knows; or else, lastly, he is a hypocrite and only made believe he was a friend of the people to win his way to power when in reality his interests were all with the moneyed powers who now own and control him to their own advantage.

PICKLES IN A "PICKLE"

Mankato Free Press: The LeSueur News says: "Governor Eberhart broke the auto-speed law the other day because he 'had to catch a train.' There is a difference between being confronted with a great emergency like this, or stealing bread because you happen to be hungry. Dates for speeches must not be trifled with."

And Pickles, the policeman, who stopped the auto in its mad career, is now in a "pickle." He is suspended from duty, all because he was performing his duty like a police officer should.

JUSTICE OUTRAGED BY THE COURTS.

Ye who deprecate class consciousness and attacks upon the sacredness of the judiciary lend us your ears for a minute!

Last week two men, guilty of cheating you in the matter of fradulent customs returns, were arraigned before Judge Archbald of the United States circuit court of New York.

One of these men, Hugo Rosenburg of a big 5th ave. firm, was guilty of frauds estimated at $1,400,000. Said U. S. Dist. Atty., Wise of Rosenburg's case: "Prison terms are the only way to stop wealthy men violating the customs laws. This man jumped his bail of $10,000. I would rather be kicked out of office than recommend that he be let off with a fine."

Judge Archbald fined Rosenburg $25,000—1-56th of the money defrauded—and freed him.

The other man arraigned was Dionysius, a Greek, whose frauds amounted to $2,500. Judge Archbald did not fine him 1-56th of $2,500, but sent him to jail for three months.—Daily News.

TRUTH IN ADVERTISING

The necessity of literal, exact truth for successful advertising, was given a foremost emphasis at the meeting of the Associated Advertising Clubs of America at Boston the pastweek.

One speaker declared amid applause that a code of ethics for advertising could be made out of just one word, that word to be "Honest." To this, he said, might be added the Golden Rule.

The profession of advertising has within the past decade attracted the devoted energy of a host of the brightest men in our country. They have pretty thoroughly learned the principle that the only way to build a successful business is on the foundation of the satisfied customer.

The dissatisfied customer is not an asset. In fact, he is very much a liability. Any business man of keen perceptions would far rather that such a customer should never have entered his establihsment. The slight profit that may be made off the stuff be bought is far more than offset by the the left handed advertising that he supplies to his friends to vent his dissatisfaction.

The only way to secure a satisfied customer is to represent goods precisely as they are. If the goods have defects, and the nature and extent of these defects are fully explained by the seller, the customer is never dissatisfied. Often he rather enjoys the defects, as he feels that they do not injure the goods for his purpose, but have been the means of enabling him to make a saving in price. He boasts of his bargain to his friends, and points out the faults to show how essentially trifling they were, compared with the reduction that they made possible.

The customer would soon have discovered such defects, even had the seller remained silent about them. In that case, even if he bought the goods low, he would forever believe that he had been defrauded.

There are still so many cheats and shams in the world of trade, that the business man who makes his advertising an honest description of his goods just as they are, shines by contrast and wins a community of permanently satisfied customers.

THE POLITICAL ASPECT

Politically, Sen. La Follette's joining with the Democrats to reduce the wool and other tariffs that unquestionably oppress the people is a fine play.

Mr. Taft is just now enjoying some prestige by reason of the reciprocity triumph, while it is the general impression that La Follette's attitude his temerity to critise the couts With the wool and those other schedules put up to Mr. Taft, the whole country would be able to clearly see whether he is genuinely for reduction of the cost of living or a servant of the big interests.

We do not believe the country will accept his excuse that he cannot act before the tariff commission gets ready to report. The trend of events seems to be toward putting it up to Mr. Taft to fish or cut bait, and regular Republicans will be likely to say that his dilemma comes from flirting with Democrats.—Daily News

FOR MONEY OR FOR MEN?

Don't be misled by the plan to lease the Alaska coal-lands. Just remember that in order to use that coal the lessee must do these things:

Develop Controller bay into a true port.

Install a fleet of ocean-going steam ships.

Establish shipping points and facilities of distribution all along the Pacific coast.

Could you do that, Mr. Reader?

Could any person of your acquaintance? It is a rich man's proposition, isn't it? Yes, and more—it is a proposition only to be handled by one of two interests, viz.: The eight men who now control the great industries of the country (Morgan, Hill, Stillman, Guggenheim, Baker, Schiff and the two Rockefellers) or the people of the United States. So the question is:

Private monopoly or public monopoly—which?

There is no middle ground. To this have we come at last, the plain choice between organized dollars and organized men.

Every American citizen must decide, once for all, where he stands. He must be for money or he must be for men. Alaska coal is the crux of the conflict. Mysterious Providence has made that far northern territory the battleground whereon will be settled the question of the ages.

The fight is on. This nation has been irrevocably conquered for money or it shall be forever ruled in the interests of mankind.—Daily News.

Collier's Weekly has lately devoted considerable space to conditions in Minnesota. The article discussing the situation in the northern part of the state is in accordance with what the people of this section have advocated for several years. It is well for us to get an idea of what outsiders think of the situation in the state and Collier's has sized up the matte of state development accurately, as following editorial indicates:

> Of the total area of Minnesota, approximately half is still undeveloped. A large part of this undeveloped land is in the hands of speculators. Much of the land needs draining; without drainage there can be neither roads nor market facilities, nor continuous settlement nor schools. Minnesota owns nearly three million acres of swamp and school lands. By the sale of these lands to speculators, the state is not developed, but the would-be settler is exploited. Minnesota spends a large amount of money to advertise its resources. Yet when a stranger goes to Minnesota to buy a piece of land, he can find out little or nothing about the character of the soil, marketing conditions, road and school facilities, or the kind of social life that may be afforded in any particular locality. The state is at present selling its Lands for about $6 to $7 per acre, and on long time. In one country alone, which contains more than 800,000 acres of swamp lands, but 5,600 acres have been sold within the past three years, and one actual settler secured.
> Minnesota should remedy this condition. A complete soil, water power, mineral and social survey should be made as the first step toward refom. Then a certain area near to a rairoad that affords access to ready markets should be mapped out. Such drainage as may be necessary could be put in—roads built—a few acres cleared. In this way this country could be opened up to settlers and taken out of the hands of speculators. Every western state that does not expect to lag behind of the great onward march of the near future must take active steps by a careful watchfulness over speulators to save its lands to actual stettlers. The states that do this are going to lead in the development of the new west.—Roseau Region.

OUR WAY AND THEIRS

A great piece of legislation is demanded in the United States. No one has power to pass upon it but congress. Special interests send their trained lawyers there to work for it or against it. It fails or prevails, according to the will of less than 200 individuals in the house, less than half a hundred in the senate—a bare majority of both houses.

But in Canada?

There the whole people reject or pass it. It is discused in the open, at every crossroads and every fireside. Every citizen has his say and his vote.

We have no national referendum in the United States. We are afraid of it— would rather trust the few than the many.—Daily News.

SPECIAL SCHOOL ELECTION

The special school election held in this city last Friday brought out a heavy vote of both sexes. Dr. O. F. Mellby was chosen by a big majority. At the beginning of the campaign the candidates were Mrs. J. M. Bishop and Mrs. D. K. Bryant. Later Dr. Mellby entered the race, whereupon Mrs. Bryant withdrew in his favor. Each candidate had ardent supporters and the fight was a lively one.

The horticulturists of the Minnesota Experiment Station sugge the planting of radish-seeds along with slowly-germinating seeds, such as parsnips, onions, etc. The radishes quickly afford a line of green by which to guide the cultivator; thus enabling the cultivation of the slower crop to begin before its leaves appear—something which will 'count' in the size and quality of the crop. The radishes will be out of the way before their room is needed.

GARDEN AND ORCHARD NOTES FOR AUGUST

Locate vines of fruiting grapes, that you wish to move from the woods to that porch or arbor next spring.

Prune out old canes of raspberries and blackberries, And burn them. Thin the hills to three or four shoots. Cultivate, and add some manure to the soil.

Do not let any weed go to seed in the orchard or garden. It's easier to kill the one plant than the hundred coming from it next year.

August begins the apple and plum hravest. The grower who sprays his trees well this spring is enjoying a crop of clean, marketable fruit.

Keep all windfall apples and plums off the ground. They often have dropped because they are diseased or have insects in them. Feed to the pigs or burn.

Strawberry plants may be set this month, if the ground is moist and the weather cool for a few days. They are worth trying if you failed to set a bed this spring.

Notice the quainty of bright-berried plants growing wild, and mark a few of the most attractive plants to move into the home yard next spring. The high-bush cramberry and black haw are at their best now. Elderberries, red and black, are also fruiting well this year. Wild cherries, plums and apples are also fruiting well.

Grass, Weeds, and thistles along the roads should be cut down. See the good work along this line of G. W. Eastman south of the Greenwood cemetery and compare that with the careless, slovenly appearance of the road along the land of some of his neighbors. Well mowed roads are a good ad for the country. Take time to give a cleaned-up appearance to your surroundings. It pays.

Some "joy-rider" in a Ford car, unable to hold to the course, bumped into one of the angular steel uprights on the big bridge the other night and bent over the half of it an inch, buckling and twisting it at the same time. How the car looked after the mishap can only be guessed, while the driver is said to have spit blood all night. Maybe by and by we'll learn prudence.

Thief River Falls is now enjoying two very popular theaters, the Lyceum and the Grand. The manager of these theaters aim to get only the best and latest vaudeville attractions, and to show a class of pictures that will meet with the approval of the most critical. It's a cinch you havn't seen it all unless you take in both show houses.

At The Lyceum.

The first four days of the week "Cozy" Smith and her "Minstrel Boys" put on the best vaudeville act that has been seen at the Lyceum this season. During all four nights the theater was packed and it wasn't long before manager Morgan hung out the S. R. O. sign. The act consisted of singing and dancing by Miss Smith and her "boys," and was of a class that is rarely seen off the metropolitan stage.

Manager Morgan is booking more good attractions for an early date. He will soon have a change of pictures every night and, what is best of all, will soon have the theater air both disinfected and deoderized.

At The Grand

Reed and Ferguson have been, and aer still until after Sunday night, entertaining the people with a series of strictly highclass comedy sketches. For genuine entertainment they are hard to beat. They put on a new act every evening. Sunday night will be the big night when they will give two special comedy acts. On the same night will be shown 3000 feet of excellent picture film, and a popular illustrated song. Miss Theone Walker plays the piano and Maurice Giller does the singing. The price of admission remains the same.

Manager McQuery announces that for next week he will have some jolly dancers, and some mirth-manufacturing black-face comedians.

A mutual telephone company was organized last Saturday with 22 signers. Another meeting will be held September 2d, at the Flow school house. In the meantime efforts will be made to get more members and extend the line, if possible, into Thief River Falls.

A number of Germantownites attended the fair Thursday and were compelled to stay over night, and still we did not see the aeroplane go up.

Henry Dau returned from Dakota where he was employed last spring.

Carl Habedank celebrated his 60th birthday last Sunday.

Mr. Holmgren one of the pioneer settlers in the eleven towns, returned from Montana, where he stayed for a couple years. He has arrived at the conclusion that Minnesota is good enough and will setle here for good.

John Phillips made a trip to Crookston last week on business.

NEW SOLUM NEWS

* * * * * * * * *

Hawken and Karl Krogstad were around looking for hay-land Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Peder Sjalsvald spent Sunday at Stengelson's.

Messrs. Ole Sewalson and Oscar Ranum came over from Warren for an over Sunday visit with the home folks.

Ed. Erickson, who was stricken with an attack of appendicitis on July 24th, was seen among the boys again last Sunday.

But O you rubber necks! If you only had that sharp knife, somebody would have a sore nose, wouldn't they?

The dredge is now busy digging ditch No. 14. So now farmers take time to go over and take a look at the kind of job they are doing, and if not satisfied, get together and see to it that you get what they promised you at the ditch hearing in Warren last summer. Don't wait 'till it's too late, as the farmers generally do. As to the ditch, we think that it is not much more than an over-sized furrow. And besides that, we don't think that the water will run up hill, even if the ditch is dug by a dredge. But if that is the way it is supposed to be dug, and all concerned are satisfied, then it is all right—but it don't look good to the writer.

GREAT SURPRISE

A great surprise was given Rev. C. O. Christiansen of Warren at the home of Zacharias Shogren west of town last Saturday evening by members of the Norwegian and Danish M. E. church of that neighborhood. No less than fifty people gathered to show their appreciation of the work done in their midst by Rev. Christensen.

Short talks were made by Messrs. Eklund, Shogren and Ness and by Rev. Christiansen, and a handsome cash purse was made up and turned over to the Reverend gentleman.

Mr. Christiansen had expected nothing of the kind and desires thru the Press to publicly ackowledge his gratitude and thank the generous donors.

Miss Edna Wilson left Thursday morning for her home at Bemidji, after a pleasant visit with friends in this city.

COURT INVITING RESOLUTION.

Roosevelt Says Judges out of Date Should Resign to Make Way for Progress.

Lyons, N. Y., Aug. 8.—"It is simply nonsense to suppose that this country will tolerate permanently a line of action such as the court of appeals followed in declaring unconstitutional the workmen's compensation act" is the statement of Col. Theodore Roosevelt, made public here today.

Other quotations follow:

"Four federal judges have written that they agreed with me that the action of the New York court of appeals is so utterly reactionary as to be an invitation to revolution.

"My plea is that the court act with ordinary statesmanship; ordinary regard for the laws; ordinary regard for the constitution as a living aid to growth, not a straitjacket, and ordinary regard for the rights of humanity and the rights of civilization.

"No man who takes the opposite ground to that which I have taken in the article in question has any right on the bench, and it is a misfortune to have him there.

"Interpretation of the law must be made from duty to day and the interpretation of 100 years ago must not be held immutable.

"The Republican party was formed to protest against the very view the court reactionaries now insist we should hold."

These are extracts from correspondence between Col. Roosevelt and Editor Charles H. Betts regarding the colonel's criticism of the action of the New York state court of appeals in declaring unconstitutional the workmen's compensation act. Betts, who is the editor of the Lyons Republican and a member of the state committee, took the colonel to task for his temerity to critize the courts and received the above in reply.

NOTICE, NEW SCHOOLHOUSE

The County Board of Education will receive bids for the erection of a frame schoolhouse on Section 29, Township 157, Range 38. Specifications and plans may be seen at the Office of County Superintendent of Schools, Bemidji, Minn., Mr. H. Hanson's near or at Grygla, Minn., and at the Office of The Thief River Press, Thief River Falls, Minn. All bids must be received on or before noon of August 21st, by the Clerk of the Board of Unorganized Territory.—W. B. Stewart, Clerk.

MINNESOTA WILL EXHIBIT AS A STATE.

As a result of a conference held in Duluth last week, Minnesota business interests have "gotten together" to collect the finest and most complete exhibit of the products of the state which has ever been brought together. The exhibit will first be shown at the Northwestern Land Show which is to be held in St. Paul December 12 to 23.

After the land show is over the exhibit may be installed in one of the large railroad centers of the state for permanent display. Those who have determined on securing such an exhibit are members of a committee named by Governor Eberhart some time ago to see that the state is properly represented at the coming land show when six states to the west of Minnesota will make exhibits.

George Welsh, commissioner of immigration has been instructed to assist in this work, it being the belief of the board of immigration of Minnesota that the state will derive much permanent good from exhibiting at land shows and that a complete exhibit of the state's products should be secured perhaps, for a permanent display.

Besides agricultural products of the state the exhibits will contain one of the finest mineral displays ever shown. This alone will cost a big sum and is to be furnished by the steel companies of the Duluth district. The timber display will be another feature and will show not only native woods but finished products of the timber in a hundred different forms. The forestry department is working on this display.

An aquarium full of native fish; an aviary containing specimens of wild birds, together with a few deer and moose, will add to the interest of the exhibit. Commissioner Welsh desires to hear from anyone who has high class samples of Minnesota products.

WILL VIEW DITCH IMPROVEMENTS

State and 'Soo' Officials and Local Party Plan to see Drainage Project

Several of the State and some of the Soo Line officials have promised to be here on August 19th to spend three days in looking over the great work of drainage that is now under way in Pennington, Eastern Marshall and Western Beltrami counties.

A party of some 25 men will leave this city on the morning of the 19th and will spend two or more days in looking over the vast empire lying to the North-east of here and stretching out a distance of 80 to 100 miles all tributary to our city.

The primary object of the trip is to show the visitors what a relm of possiblities lies in the great untilled lands of this section. The secondary object may be that of interesting some of the railway interests in building a road thru this fertile but as yet largely un-cultivated territory.

The trip will be made in autos from here and it is expected that a large number of local business men will want to take this opportunity of going in good company to look over one of the most promising territories in the state today.

MINNESOTA'S FAIR AND EXPOSITION

An Outline of What the Men Behind the Fair Are Working For.

Secretary J. C. Simpson, the other officers, and the directors of the Minnesota State Agricultural Society are working to make this year's fair greater in every way than any of its predecessors. Some of the objects which those in charge are working unremittingly to attain are:

To make the Minnesota State Fair and Exposition one of the greatest educational institutions of the state.

To make it a place where all classes and conditions of people can come and learn from observation the best that brains and time and money and perseverance have achieved in [illegible] of industry.

To make it a mirror of the [illegible] resources and Minnesota's [illegible] advertising asset.

To make it not only the country's greatest exposition in point of size and attendance, but the greatest in intrinsic educational value.

To make it a place where every one no matter what their walk of life, can find entertainment and instruction.

To make it a veritable short course in agriculture, stock raising, manufacturing and in every industry that is worth while.

To make its 350 acres and its week in September the place and the time that will furnish the greatest interest and entertainment to the greatest number of people in the Northwest.

SPECIAL DAYS AT STATE FAIR

Directors of the Minnesota State Agricultural Society have chosen the following special days for the 1911 Minnesota State Fair and Exposition:

Big Poker Stakes.

Many stories of big poker games among the western cattlemen in the early days have been told, but this story of the game with probably the greatest stakes is really true. Two well known cattlemen of southwestern Kansas, one of whom is now a prominent business man in Kansas City, started to move their herds to the pastures of Wyoming. Each herd contained more than a thousand head of cattle. When they came to the crossing of the Arkansas river near Coolidge they found a flood on. They were unable to cross for two or three days. To while away the time the two men engaged in a poker game. When the flood finally subsided so that the cattle could proceed one of the cattlemen said to his son, who was helping to drive, "Just turn my herd over to our neighbor and we will go back home." He had bet and lost not only all the money he had, but all of the herd of cattle.—Kansas City Journal.

Moving Troops by Rail.

"Let us suppose it became necessary to send the entire national guard of New York out of the state, how long would it take the railroads to handle them?" was asked a railroad official in New York.

"Twenty-four hours, easy," was the instant reply. "This is under war conditions, remember, which means that everything gives way to the movement of troops and their equipment. The railroads of America can handle men and war material of all kinds, including everything from horses and men to cannon and rations, much faster than they can be assembled and delivered to us. In fact, under war conditions the railroads are prepared to do their part quicker and better, with more certainty and better speed, than any other part of the machinery, commercial or military, in America."—Railroad Man's Magazine.

Black Fridays.

In England the term Black Friday was first applied to Dec. 6, 1745, the day on which news reached London that the pretender, Charles Edward, had reached Derby. Again on May 11, 1866, when the failure of a large English discounting institution brought on a most disastrous panic, the day was called Black Friday. On the day of the suspension the Bank of England raised the rate of discount 9 per cent. Wild speculation in gold in New York and other cities culminated in a monetary crash on Sept. 16, 1875, that swept thousands of firms and individuals into financial ruin and caused a commercial depression that extended into the eighties of the last century; hence the origin of the term Black Friday in the United States.

To Make Red Ink.

Red ink is easily made by amateurs who follow this recipe: Get a one ounce bottle and see that it is perfectly clean and dry. Place in it one teaspoonful of aqua ammonia, gum arabic the size of two peas and add six grains of carmine. Fill up the bottle with clear soft water, and after standing a little while it will be fit for use.

She Thought of Him.

She—Oh, Mr. Borem, how do you do? I was talking to Mrs. Nexdore just now, and I couldn't help thinking of you. He—And was she discussing me? She—Not exactly. She was commenting on the weather and just asked me if I could imagine anything more tiresome and disagreeable.—Philadelphia Press.

One Advantage.

"So you have adopted a baby to raise," we ask of our friend. "Well, it may turn out all right, but don't you think you are taking chances?"

"Not a chance," he answers. "No matter how many bad habits the child may develop, my wife can't say he inherits any of them from my side of the house."—Life.

The Tie That Binds.

"I have a cook now that took a college course in domestic science last summer."

"You seem enthusiastic, Mabel."

"Yes; I find we belong to the same secret society."—Washington Herald.

Repartee.

He (during the spat)—Well, if you want to know it, I married you for your money. She—I wish I could tell as easily what I married you for.—Exchange.

GOMPERS FLAYS COURT DECISION

Labor Leader Criticises Judge In Des Moines Strike.

ECHO OF TRACTION TROUBLE

American Federation of Labor President Terms Court's Order Natural Development of Unnatural Use of the Injunction—Des Moines Strike Leader Disagrees and Declares Court Merely Ordered Enforcement of Contract.

Washington, Aug. 8.—Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, in discussing the injunction which has temporarily broken the street car strike in Des Moines, Ia., said:

"The judge's order is simply the logical result of an illogical premise. It is the natural development of the unnatural abuse of the injunction. The whole policy of the species of injunction has been to tie the men of labor to their work and to make ineffectual any effort to secure improvement in the condition of the worker or to effectually protest against the deterioration in the condition of the workers.

"That has been the purpose and the policy of the judges who have issued the injunctions against workmen engaged in a dispute with employers—injunctions which never would have been issued against other citizens or even against the same workmen were they not engaged in a labor dispute with employers. The purpose and policy is to tie the workmen to their work. In other words, to bring them into a condition of slavery.

"When a man is compelled to work under conditions which are onerous to him, which he regards as unjust, say, because of insufficient compensation or return for labor performed," continued the leader, "and he is compelled by the edict of a judge to work against his will or to suffer, or to go to prison for his failure to abide by the order of the court to work, that moment slavery has been established."

DES MOINES MEN DISAGREE

Believe Gompers Not Fully Informed on the Situation.

Des Moines, Aug. 8.—The statement of Samuel Gompers that Judge Degraff's method of settling the strike by the injunction process is equivalent to a "return to slavery" is not coincided in by labor leaders here.

President J. M. Leonard of the local carmen's union stated that he believed President Gompers had not been fully informed as to the significance of the court's order. He said:

"An agreement was in force between the street car company and our union which required that disputes arising were to be arbitrated. The company refused to arbitrate the case of Conductor B. J. Hiatt, discharged on the complaint of an inspector, and the union struck. The court's order reinstates Hiatt and compels the company to arbitrate his case. We feel here that the decision was eminently fair and a victory for the striking employes.

"I believe Mr. Gompers was thinking of the general effect of injunctions when he gave out his statement."

MOTIVE FOR CRIME UNKNOWN

Faribault (Minn.) Man Kills Wife and Himself.

Faribault, Minn., Aug. 8.—Thomas K. Talbott shot his wife through the temple and neck, killing her instantly. Then, turning the gun on himself, he fired two shots, one taking effect in the temple and the other at the base of the neck, after which he took a razor and cut his throat from ear to ear.

Talbott was about fifty years old and his wife was about the same age. He had been in the land business in Iowa, but had returned and spent the past week here.

A little girl was in the room at the time of the shooting, but ran out. The man evidently intended to kill her also, as five shots were fired.

No motive for the crime is known, but it is said by the officers that Talbott had been drinking for a week.

REVENUE OFFICER'S AIM TRUE

Shoots and Kills Man Suspected of Smuggling Whisky.

Kalispell, Mont., Aug. 8.—United States Revenue Officer Miller shot and fatally wounded Lars Larson at Polson when Larson failed to hold up his hands when ordered to surrender under a suspicion of smuggling liquor into town.

Larson died and Miller and Revenue Officer Knutson were arrested.

Boy's Shooting Lesson Fatal.

Green Bay, Wis., Aug. 8.—While showing his younger brother how to shoot birds Robert Demeny shot Alex Demeny in the side in the woods near his home at Sampson. The boy's side was torn away and he died after being brought to this city for medical attention.

A Glum Prospect.

"And in hearses the following day," said the pessimist.—Birmingham Age-Herald.

TAFT APPEALS TO THE PEOPLE

Asks Moral Influence on Senate to Ratify Treaties.

WOULD HALT THE MOVEMENT

In Addressing Mountain Lake Park Chautauqua Chief Executive Declares Any Hesitation or Discussion of a Serious Character on British and French Arbitration Agreements Would Hinder Move Toward Peace.

Mountain Lake Park, Md., Aug. 8.—President Taft traveled 400 miles through Maryland and West Virginia by special train to appeal to the people of the United States to use their moral influence to have the senate ratify the British and French arbitration treaties and the treaties with Nicaragua and Honduras. His appeal was made direct to the Mountain Lake Park Chautauqua of the Methodist Episcopal church, but in it the president included the rest of the nation as well.

"I observe," said the president, "that there is some suggestion that by ratifying this treaty the senate may in some way abdicate its function of treaty making. I confess myself unable to perceive in the treaty any such a point. To have these treaties not ratified by the senate of the United States or to have any hesitation and discussion of a serious character in respect to them would halt the movement toward general peace, which has made substantial advance in the last ten years.

"To secure the ratification of the treaties, therefore, appeal must be made to the moral sense of the nation and, while that is not entirely in the keeping of the churches, certainly they may exert a powerful influence in the promotion of any effective instrumentality to secure permanent peace."

The president asked for the same sort of popular support of the treaties with Honduras and Nicaragua.

"There is no issue before the senate so acute in respect to the cause of peace as the confirmation of these Central American treaties," he said. "While I admit the greater importance of universal treaties of arbitration in the long run and as affecting the world at large, yet in respect to American interests, in respect of peace in this hemisphere, they are not equal in importance to the confirmation of these Central American treaties."

The president spoke of the tendency of the United States to extend its helping hand to less powerful people and instanced Mr. Roosevelt's intervention in Cuba. That tendency was evidenced also, he said, "by the wonderfully successful intervention by Theodore Roosevelt as president of the United States in securing peace between Russia and Japan."

OPPOSING COUNSEL CLASH

Personal Encounter Narrowly Averted in Lorimer Case.

Washington, Aug. 8.—What promised for a few minutes to be a personal encounter between Attorney Elbridge Hanecy, representing Senator Lorimer, and Attorney John J. Healy of counsel for the senate Lorimer committee marked the close of a long cross-examination of H. J. C. Beckemeyer, former state representative, who says he received $1,000 after voting for Lorimer for senator.

The clash between counsel occurred when Mr. Healy accused Mr. Hanecy of having "the very purpose of confusing the record and those who will read it." He was speaking of Mr. Hanecy's questions regarding testimony Beckemeyer gave Saturday concerning his statement two years ago to officials in Cook county that he knew nothing of interest to the grand jury relative to corruption in the legislature.

ADMISSION OF TWO STATES

Senate Takes Up Arizona and New Mexico Bill.

Washington, Aug. 8.—With the recall of judges provision of the Arizona constitution as the principal issue the senate took up for final action the bill for the admission of New Mexico and Arizona to statehood. By previous agreement the bill will be voted on before the close of the "legislative day;" which, however, may be extended by recess for several days.

The test will come on the Nelson amendment allowing New Mexico to become a state with its constitution unchanged, while Arizona must strike out the provision by which judges can be recalled. The house bill requires the voters of Arizona to vote on the judicial recall question before the territory is admitted, while in New Mexico an effort must be made by vote to change the constitution adopted so as to make it easier of amendment.

Fall Down Hatchway Fatal.

Duluth, Aug. 8.—Ward A. Gordon, a sailor of Flint, Mich., was accidentally killed on the steamer Strathcona at Two Harbors. He fell down a hatchway. Gordon was but nineteen years old.

Ample Apology.

An Irish lawyer once addressed the court as "gentlemen" instead of "your honors." After he had concluded a brother of the bar reminded him of his error. He immediately arose and apologized thus: "May it please the court, in the heat of debate I called yer honors gentlemen. I made a mistake, yer honors." Then he sat down, and if the court was not satisfied it did not disclose the fact.—Case and Comment.

How Pat Was Working When Eileen Arrived

A Labor Day Story

By NORA C. M'CARTHY

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

"Pat," said Eileen when Pat started for America, "I hope you won't git fulxed up in the labor troubles in that country. They say sometimes there's fightin', and Oi'm skeert ov yer gittin' kilt."

"Niver moind, sweetheart, Oi'll take good care o' meself ag'in yer comin' over to jine me and we'll be married and live in a nice little shanty and have a pig and a goat and live loike gintle folk."

"But they say, Pat, that in America they don't have pigs. Anyway, they don't keep 'em in the house. Oi've heard that the pigs is all kep' together and killed together—sometoimes a mather of tin or a dozen at one killin'."

"That won't mather to us. We'll have one just to remind us of home. And we'll have the shanty Oi'm tellin' ye about wid the ladder goin' up to the second story"—

"Och, Pat, they don't have ladders in America, they have stairs."

"Well, we'll have a ladder in our shanty just as we'll have the pig. And by that same token we'll have a coo for milk."

"But Oi'm told people don't keep coos of their own in that country. All the milk is put in a big tub and it's peddled out in wagons."

"But we'll have the coo for the same raison we'll have the pig and the ladder, to remoind us of our beautiful islant and the home one couldn't have in it, because we're too poor. But in America Oi'll git together the money for the shanty and the pig and the ladder and the coo, and we'll live like fightin' cocks."

So Pat folded the poor girl in his arms, the tears streaming down her cheeks at parting with him.

"What's the mather, darlin'?" he said, patting her fondly. "Don't be cryin'. It'll not be long before I sind ye the money to come over to me, and be the toime ye git there Oi'll have the shanty ready, so ye'll think ye're right here in ould Oirland."

"Oh, Pat, Oi'm feared ye won't succeed!"

And so they parted, Pat with no more money in his pocket than to take him in the steerage across the ocean. The pair were too simple and uneducated to have formed any idea of America. Their dream of a home there was such as they might have at home had they the means to establish it, where the pig and the cow and themselves might all live together in domestic harmony.

Since Pat could not write, his letters from the new country, written by a friend, were of the simplest character. He realized that even if he could write his own letters he would never be able to convey to Eileen's simple mind the real America. He was too wise to attempt it. At first his letters began in the usual way with his class:

> I take my pen in hand to write you a few lines to say that I'm in good health, thanks be to God, hoping that you are the same at the present time.

Then followed hopes that the crops would be abundant and that different members of the family were well. One poor speller who indited a letter for Pat wrote, "This letter comes hopping that you are well as I am, thanks be to God!"

"What's that?" said Eileen. "It comes hoppin'? Oi thacht it come by a ship."

Pat remained several years in America before he sent for Eileen. When he got a start he wrote, "Darlint, Oi'm buildin' the shanty." When he made some money he wrote, "Oi've bought the pig." Then the cow followed, his shanty was ready and Pat was ready to send the passage money that was to bring his sweetheart to him in America.

Before starting Eileen wrote that she wished he could bring the shanty and the pig and the cow to Ireland, but she supposed that if he could he wouldn't be able to make the money necessary to keep up the establishment. So she made her preparation to join him.

Pat knew the day she sailed and the day the steamer was due in New York. He wrote her that she would arrive on a holiday they kept in America called Labor day. He would be busy on that day, and he would send his friend, Mike Fogarty, to the steamer to meet her and bring her to where he was working. Eileen thought Pat must be very industrious to work on a holiday, and she was glad and proud of him.

When the ship came up to the dock Eileen saw a man on it looking as if he might be Fogarty, and he was.

"Pat tould me," he said, "to take ye where he's workin', and I will." He led Eileen to a street where great crowds were waiting for something to happen. Then came a band of music and men with sashes and scarfs on caracoling horses. Among these men in a black clawhammer coat and silk hat she saw her Pat.

Pat caught sight of her and, dismounting, joined her.

"Is this the way ye're workin'?" she asked, astonished.

"Take her to the shanty," said Pat to Fogarty, "and Oi'll be there directly."

Fogarty led the girl to a five story tenement house, where on the third floor she was ushered into a nicely furnished apartment.

"La sakes!" she exclaimed. "Did Pat earn the money for this ridin' on a horse wid a piece o' stove pipe on his head and a blue ribbon across him?"

French Humor.

A man who possessed much land and had many younger brothers was asked why he did not go out hunting as his brothers did.

"Well," said he, "it is because it frequently happens that the guns of younger brothers go off accidentally when pointed at the eldest, but it is seldom that the guns of the eldest behave in a similar manner toward the younger brothers."—French Joke Book.

Early Railroad Fliers.

When the first passenger railroad ever built was opened in England in 1825 the train traveled from one end of the line to the other, a distance of twelve miles, in two hours. And Wood, one of the best known writers on the subject of railroads at that day, wrote as follows:

"Nothing can do more harm to the adoption of railways than the promulgation of such nonsense as that we shall see locomotives traveling at the rate of twelve miles an hour."

Today, with locomotives traveling at the rate of seventy-five miles an hour, one can look at Wood's warning with a feeling of amusement. In 1829 a locomotive was introduced in this country, and in the following year Peter Cooper experimented with a locomotive on the B. and O. railroad. The flues of the boiler were made from gun barrels. The boiler was about the size of a flour barrel. Cooper related with considerable satisfaction how on the trial trip of this engine he passed a gray horse attached to a wagon.—New York World.

HOUSE APPROVES COTTON MEASURE

Thirty Republicans Vote With Democrats for Bill

REDUCES REVENUE $3,000,000

Third Large Tariff Revision Project Passes the Lower Branch of Congress by a Vote of 202 to 91.

Washington, Aug. 4.—Supported by all the Democrats and by thirty progressive Republicans the Democratic cotton tariff bill, the third of the big tariff revision measures brought forward by the Democratic house of representatives, passed that body by 202 to 91. The bill cuts the average tariff on cotton manufactured goods from 48 to 27 per cent ad valorem, a 21 per cent reduction in duty that the Democratic leaders estimate to reduce revenue by about $3,000,000.

Not an amendment was offered to the bill, although the Republicans attacked it vigorously on account of alleged increases in certain items over the rates of the Payne-Aldrich tariff law.

LARGER HOUSE PROVIDED FOR

Senate Approves Congressional Reapportionment.

Washington, Aug. 4.—The amended house congressional reapportionment bill, providing that after March 3, 1913, the house of representatives shall consist of 433 members, exclusive of Arizona and New Mexico, an increase of forty-two over the present membership, was passed by the senate without roll call.

The bill now goes to conference between the two houses for agreement as to the senate amendments before going to the president for his approval.

The bill is so drawn that no state will lose in representation, but in some cases there will be a decided increase.

New York heads the list with an increase of six members; Pennsylvania four; California and Oklahoma three each; Illinois, Massachusetts, New Jersey, Texas and Washington two each, and Alabama, Colorado, Florida, Georgia, Idaho, Louisiana, Michigan, Minnesota, Montana, North Dakota, Ohio, Oregon, Rhode Island, South Dakota, Utah and West Virginia one each.

STRIKE STILL GRIPS LONDON

Dockmen to Stay Out Until Teamsters Gain Demands.

London, Aug. 8.—Although the decision of the arbitrators in the dock strike granted them practically every demand for which they struck the stevedores and dockmen refused to return to work and announced they would remain out until the strike of the teamsters also was settled.

About 40,000 dockmen are out and were joined by 35,000 teamsters employed on the docks.

The teamsters at first struck in sympathy, but now have formulated demands for an increase of wages.

Some sections of the city had great difficulty in obtaining meats and other food supplies.

CUBAN REVOLUTIONIST QUITS

General Acevedo Leaves Hiding Place and Surrenders.

Havana, Aug. 4.—General Acevedo, who endeavored to start a revolution at Reglia Monday night, surrendered to Governor Asbert in the town of Santa Maria del Rosario, a short distance south of Havana, in the vicinity of which he had been hiding.

He was brought back to Havana in Senor Asbert's automobile and placed in jail to await action of the civil court.

Port au Prince, Haiti, Aug. 8.—With the arrival here of General Antenor Firmin on the French steamer Caravelle there are three candidates for the presidency vacated by the exile of President Antoine Simon.

General Cincinnatus Leconte, who engineered the present revolution, reached here Sunday and was immediately proclaimed provisional executive.

THE PRINCIPAL WINNER

By F. A. MITCHEL

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

When the American troops were fighting their way across Cuba, Captain Timberlake, commanding a party of flankers, noticed a coffin lying not far from the road.

That evening in camp Captain Timberlake was chatting upon the events of the day with the adjutant and the major of his regiment, talking about who had been killed, who wounded, how the Spaniards fought and how they had the advantage of the Americans in the matter of arms and smokeless powder, when Timberlake spoke of the strange sight of a coffin lying beside the road.

If men have not the curiosity of women, and the statement has been denied by the latter, they have a trait equally peculiar. Men, especially those who lead eventful lives, are prone to bet about everything which is a matter of opinion or hazard. The question came up between these officers whether there was a corpse in the coffin or whether there was not. One of the party had noticed a cemetery on the way not far from the line of march and suggested that a funeral had been interrupted by the fight, the mourners had fled and the coffin spilled out of the hearse. There was doubtless an unburied corpse in it.

Now, the outcome of this suggestion did not result, as might have been expected, in the burial of a corpse, but a bet. The major made the suggestion, and Captain Timberlake offered to bet him $10 even that the coffin was empty.

The stakes having been put up, Captain Timberlake called Pat Mulcahey, a recruit picked up just before leaving the States, and told him to go back half a mile and look out not far from a bridge over a creek for a coffin. He was to discover whether it contained a corpse or whether it was empty.

A full moon stood about an hour high and made all nearly as light as day. A desultory firing was still going on, but had nearly died out. Pat crossed the bridge and about a hundred yards beyond saw the moonlight reflected from a number of points on the brass ornaments on the coffin. Pat went on till he got near enough to see what the object was, then stopped. A coffin probably with a dead body in it at night in a lonely spot did not appeal to him. He was wondering how he could determine what he had been ordered to discover without getting any closer to the casket when the lid seemed to lift of itself, and the moon lighted up a white face.

"Howly mother!" cried Pat, crossing himself and, turning, beat a hasty retreat. Reaching the other side of the creek, he paused for another look behind him. What he saw froze the marrow in his bones. The corpse was coming with its coffin on its shoulder.

Pat tried to run, but for a time his legs refused to carry him. It was only when the specter reached the hither side of the bridge and seemed to be coming right down on him that his terror had a different effect, and with a howl he set off like the wind for camp.

Captain Timberlake, the major and the others were sitting in a circle waiting for the decision of the bet when Pat approached. As he drew near them the soldier reasserted itself, and he slowed his steps till he came down to a walk. Approaching the group, he saluted.

"Well, Pat," said his commander, "who has won?"

"If ye plaze, sir, what's the bet?"

"The major bets the coffin has a corpse in it. I bet that it is empty."

"The corpse was in it when I wint there, and now it's out of it."

"What do you mean?"

"The corpse got out when I was lookin' at the coffin, and now he's comin' with it on his shoulder."

There was a burst of laughter.

"Oi got me pay in me pocket," pulling out a roll of bills. "Oi'll bet it all that he is."

Several men standing about, ready to take advantage of the greenhorn, covered his money 10 to 1. The bets had barely been made when a man with a coffin on his shoulder approached and asked half in Spanish and half in English where he could get a pass.

There was another burst of laughter.

The captain looked around for Pat. He was nowhere to be seen.

"I've won and Pat has won," said Timberlake. "Now we'll hear th's man's story. But first let me tell you something I happen to know. The poor class of Cubans hire coffins for their dead. The body is placed in the coffin before the funeral and taken to the cemetery in it. There it is removed and buried without any covering. Since the lid is not screwed down they use hinges. This man was not going to a funeral; he was carrying the casket away from a cemetery after the corpse had been taken out of it."

"You are right," said the Cuban. "I was carrying the coffin from the cemetery when the battle began. To escape the bullets I lifted the lid and got inside. I stayed there till the firing had nearly died away, when I proceeded on my journey. But now there are soldiers everywhere, and I would like a pass to get home."

He was sent (leaving his load till his return) to headquarters, where he secured his pass.

Pat was the chief winner, all bets being decided in his favor.

GOVERNOR POTHIER.

Will Use the Militia if Gambling Doesn't End.

TROOPS TO STOP GAMBLING

Governor Pothier Refers to Narragansett Pier in Orders.

Providence, R. I., Aug. 6.—Governor Pothier has begun a campaign against gambling, directing his attention particularly to Narragansett Pier.

After instructing Sheriff Wilcox of Washington county to see that all gambling resorts at the Pier and elsewhere in his precinct are permanently closed and after issuing similar instructions to other county sheriffs in the state the governor said he would back his authority with the state militia if necessary.

DECLARES DEAL CHECKED PANIC

Roosevelt Defends Absorption of Tennessee Steel.

New York, Aug. 6.—Former President Theodore Roosevelt vigorously justified his action in not opposing the sale of the Tennessee Coal and Iron company to the United States Steel corporation when he appeared before the congressional committee which is investigating the so called steel trust. The ex-president had been requested to appear to tell of the part he had taken in the historic deal by means of which the steel corporation acquired possession of the immense rich ore deposits owned by the Southern company, and his testimony took the form of a written statement, in which he set forth in detail every step taken by him in sanctioning that transaction, together with his reasons for acting as he did.

He did not advise the transaction, he said, but he did not forbid it, because he believed it imperatively necessary that something should be done to check the panic which was beginning to spread throughout the country. That the action he took accomplished just what it was intended to accomplish, was a complete justification for every move he made, he contended.

CENSURE VOTE IS KILLED

Premier Asquith Successfully Defends His Position on Peer Question.

London, Aug. 8.—A vote of censure of the government for having obtained from the king a pledge to create, if necessary, sufficient peers to pass the veto bill was rejected by the house of commons by a majority of 119. The motion was introduced by Arthur J Balfour, leader of the opposition, and its defeat is regarded as having failed to improve the Unionist cause.

The gravamen of the opposition's charge against the government was that Premier Asquith had taken advantage of the king's inexperience to bring about an abuse of the royal prerogative by securing the guarantees before the last general election. Mr. Asquith easily disposed of this charge by showing that the ministers had pursued a properly constitutional course.

Washington, Aug. 4.—The Remsen pure food referee board would welcome a finding that it is illegal, declared Dr. Ira W. Remsen, chairman of the board, before the house committee on department of agriculture expenditures.

GERMAN DEMANDS EXCESSIVE

Her Compliment.

A popular English comedian and music hall singer, asked what his funniest experience was, said: "One time I drove up to the theater in Dublin and was humming a tune when I got out. PEACE PACTS BIND NATIONS

Arbitration Treaties Signed by Three Great Powers.

EVENT AN HISTORICAL ONE

United States, Great Britain and France Agree to Submit All Disputes to Arbitration.

Washington, Aug. 4.—Three of the world's greatest nations, with the United States as the central figure and moving spirit, joined hands in opening the way to the coveted goal of statesmen of modern times—universal peace. America and Great Britain, and America and France signed general arbitration treaties for the peaceful settlement of all disputes that may be locked in the mystery of the future, even though they concern the national honor interests of the signatories, subjects invariably excepted in existing arbitration treaties.

Secretary of State Knox signed both the British and French treaties, and James Bryce, British ambassador, signed the agreement with Great Britain. Ambassador Jusserand of France signed the document for that country at Paris. President Taft witnessed the signing ceremonies at the White House. The general features of the new treaties are:

"All differences internationally justiciable shall be submitted to The Hague, unless by special agreement some other tribunal is created or selected.

"Differences that either country thinks are not justiciable shall be referred to a commission of inquiry, composed of representatives of the two governments, empowered to make recommendations for their settlement. Should the commission decide that the dispute should be arbitrated, such decision will be binding.

"Before arbitration is resorted to, even in cases where both countries agree that the difference is susceptible of arbitration, the commission of inquiry shall investigate the dispute with a view of recommending a settlement without arbitration.

"The commission, at request of either government, will delay its findings one year to give an opportunity to diplomatic settlement.

"The senate will ratify the terms of submission of each dispute to arbitration."

COURT ENDS DES MOINES STRIKE

Orders Litigants to Arbitrate Their Differences.

Des Moines, Aug 8.—Street cars are running again, strikebreakers have disappeared and attention now centers on District Judge De Graff, who will soon hear arguments on his mandatory injunction directing the street car company to reinstate Conductor Hiatt and put the striking carmen back to work and ordering the Carmen's union to revoke its strike order and return to work.

The court's order is temporary and was issued at the request of City Solicitor Brennan, working under orders of the city council, to stop the strike.

Brennan contended that the company and the union had entered into a contract, one provision of which was an agreement to arbitrate all differences; that the company violated the contract when it discharged Hiatt without arbitrating the case as demanded by the union.

Brennan holds that the city has a right to intervene, because the company is using its streets, because it is a public service corporation upon which the public depends for necessary transportation, and because the riots caused by the strike menaced public life and property, making it the duty of the city to intervene to protect its citizens.

RECEIVED MONEY FOR VOTING

White's Opinion of Many Illinois Legislators.

Washington, Aug. 5.—To his story of how he says he was bribed to vote for Lorimer, Charles A. White, former member of the Illinois legislature, added for the benefit of the senate Lorimer committee that he believed every one of the fifty-three Democrats who voted for Lorimer did so for a money consideration. He added that he thought some of the Republicans who voted for Lorimer got money for so doing.

White declined to mention the names of any Republicans he suspected, "because it is just a matter of opinion and I do not want to do an injustice to any one." He said he based his opinion about wholesale corruption on the fact that he was bribed and that others confessed they also were bribed.

TOGO APPRECIATES HEARTY RECEPTION

Japanese Admiral Makes First Address Since Arriving.

Washington, Aug. 8.—A brief speech, the first he has made since his arrival in this country, was made by Admiral Count Togo before the National Press club of Washington at the close of a strenuous day's program. Following his visit to the United States naval academy at Annapolis the Japanese visitor was the guest of Secretary of State Knox at a banquet at the Pan-American Union building. Later he was given a reception by the newspaper men.

The admiral spoke in Japanese, his remarks being interpreted by Lieutenant Commander Taniguchi, his naval aide, who assisted his chief in the preparation of a brief and truly diplomatic address. He said:

"Since my arrival in this country the president of this great republic has received me with the greatest honor and hospitality, your government has extended to me innumerable courtesies and your fellow citizens have given me the most hearty welcome. All these, I dare say, are more than I am entitled to and I take them as meant toward my august sovereign and for his subjects. Nothing pleases me more than to take home the most happy remembrances of my visit to the United States.

"Gentlemen, may I ask to take this opportunity to convey to your countrymen, on behalf of myself, my feeling of profound gratitude and high appreciation of the hearty welcome."

WHEN TO THRESH

The last sheaf of the harvest is hardly in shock before a numberof farmers are anxious to thresh; and seldom a season passes that some farmer in the community doesn't find himself in a quandary to know when is the best time to thresh.

There are many things that may be said, both for and against shock-threshing and stack-threshing; and, in deciding what to do, the farmer must be guided largely by his particular case and the conditions to be met.

Shock threshing appeals to many farmers, from the fact that when it is over there is nothing to hinder taking up the general fall work and hastening its completion without delay. Others are favorable to stack-threshing; but, having had variable success in getting their grain well stacked in previous seasons, they are inclined to favor shockthreshing.

If shock-threshing is really practical, it will be found so upon either the large farm, where there is ample help to carry on the work, or where three or four farmers can co-operate and supply the necessary help. No attempt should be made to start a run of more than six to eight days of steady threshing; as this will usually occupy about two weeks, and possibly longer. A longer run would mean that the grain of the last farmer to be threshed for would be exposed to more or less rain; and, no matter how well shocked, some damage is bound to result. With shock-threshing, where threshing is resumed too soon after a rain, some damage is bound to result. The most satisfactory way to apportion the possible damages in shock-threshing among a group of four or five farms si to start in and thresh a full day on each farm, and then complete the threshing on these farms, taking them in reverse order.

Stack-threshing may appear a trifle more expensive than shock threshing; but it has in return several things which commend it to the small farmer, or to the farmer who is following diversified farming. Stack-threshed grain will usually bring a premium of one to two cents per bushel over the average of shock-threshed grain, because of its better color and weight. The threshing usually takes place after many of the fall rains are over; and, as a consequence, the straw is saved in much better shape, and is far more useful for feeding.

Experience has shown that the chances of waste and damage are more numerous with shock-threshing than with stack-threshing and as all cannot be first in shock-threshing, it is well not to forget how to build a good grain stack.—O. M. Olson, Extension Division, Minn. College of Agriculture.

GROWTH FOR CO-OPERATION

Democracy without the alturistic spirit—the spirit which considers first the general good—is a farce. The co-operative organizations which are now becoming so popular among farmers are essentially altruistic. Therein they make for democracy. The extension of co-operation means the yoking of all the forces of Science and Invention—which an over-intense individualism has heretofore allowed to minister chiefly to the advancement of private fortunes—to the advancement of the communal welfare. Co-operation makes it no longer essential to the best economic use of either land, machinery or capital, that the ownership of large areas shall be concentrated in the hands of individuals. It makes small landholdings compatible with the largest agricultural undertakings. In carrying on any public enterprise, or introducing any public betterment, the combined resources of many men of small means can usually accomplish anything possible to the multimillionaire, and accomplish it in such a way as to make the undertaking helpful in the manner of its doing as well as in its results. Growth comes rapidly to a community where many men are thinking for the general good—and just as rapidly to the individual who thus makes it mainfest that he is touched with the divine spirit of altruism.—C. R. Barns.

LUBRICANT

Lubricants include two classes of compounds, oils and greases; the first being liquid, the second semi-solid or solid at ordinary temperatures. According to their origin, oils are classified as mineral, animal and vegetable; according to their use, as cylinder, dynamo, engine, machine etc.

In selecting an oil, it is important to sonsider the purpose for which the oil is to be used, since its properties should be suited to its particular use. An oil suitable for heavy, slow-running machinery is not suitable for light, rapid-running machinery. A cylinder oil should not decompose at the steam pressure used, as would be the case in using a lard oil; the decomposition resulting in the formation of a fatty acid which acts destructively upon the cylinder.

The viscosity, or degree of fluidity of an oil, is important, as this determines the rate at which the oil will feed.

The color of an oil has very little relation to its useful properties, since oils can be filtered through bone black, treated with nitric acid to remove the "bloom" etc., and thus considerably changed in appearance while remaining inferior in particular lubricating qualities.

It is important that an oil, beside having suitable viscosity and specific gravity for the purpose intended, should be free from acid, and from substances which cause gumming; also, have a sufficiently high "fire test." The pressure of free acid in an oil can readily be determined by shaking up a small portion of the oil with warm water, and then placing a piece of blue litmus paper in the water. If the paper turns red, acid is present. As any free acid acts injuriously upon metals, any oil containing it should be rejected. "Gumming" may be caused by cotton-seed oil, castor oil, linseed oil; hence they should not be used in lubricating oils. Rape-seed oil, olive oil, palm oil and colza oil are much better for compounding lubricants.

The majority of lubricating oils are mixtures of mineral and animal or vegetable oils. For ordinary machinery, mineral oils, neat's-foot, lard tallow and heavy vegetable oils should be used. A rancid oil is not suitable for lubrication. For the reason before given, a mineral oil alone is best suited to cylinders; at most it should contain but a small percentage of vegetable or animal oils.

"Set" or axle greases are made by treating mineral and rosin oils with greases. Boiled greases are made by treating cotton-seed oil, horse-fat, or other suitable oils, with the proper amount of lime necessary to combine with the fatty acids. A neutral boiled grease is the best lubricant for heavy and medium-weight machinery.—G. W. Walker, Assistant, Agricultural Chemistry and Soils, Minn. University Farm.

VOL. XXII. THIEF RIVER FALLS, MINNESOTA, FRIDAY, AUGUST 18, 1911. NO 50

COMMISSION GOVERMENT

The Law. How The Movement is Started. Adopted By Mankato In 1910.

The Law.

There was approved in April 1909, by the state legislature, an act authorizing the Board of Freeholders appointed to frame charters for cities under the provisions of Sections 748 to 755 inclusive, Revised Laws 1905, to incorporate in such charters provisions for a commission form of City Government, and elections for all municipal officers, and to provide for the adoption of the commission form of government by amendment of such city charters. This act is found in chapter 170 of the General Laws of 1909.

The city of Thief River Falls is at present using as a charter chapter 8 of the General Laws of 1895. But if at any time 10 per cent of the qualified electors who voted at the last general municipal election do request that a new charter be formed, then the district judges shall appoint 15 freeholders whose duty it is to formulate a new charter, and the same shall be submitted to a vote of the people. The district judges are Grindeland, of Warren, and Watts, of Crookston. A freeholder is a man who owns property in the city.

The Movement.

A movement for the enlightenment of the people on the commission form of government may be started by a few of the business men posting themselves on the commission plan, and then calling meetings to which the general public is invited. After the regular talks there is a general discussion of the subject. It is customary, also, for the city to invite men from other cities, who are posted on this form of government, to give talks. These men are usually willing to come if they're expenses are paid.

In Mankato.

The enabling act for adopting the commission plan in Minnesota was passed so recently that not many of the cities have adopted it. Mankato was the first to adopt this plan, it being first submitted to a vote in 1909 and rejected, and again submitted in 1910, after a slight change in the charter, and accepted. The commission plan gave Mankato a pleasant surprise from the start. The city is, by nature, divided into a north and a south side. Each faction was always more or less suspicious of the motives of the other, so when the commission plan was agitated the north side thot it was a scheme on the part of their southern neighbors, who had the majority of votes, to elect all the commissioners, and hence, derive the greater benefits. At election time every thing went as was expected, except that the north end elected three commissioners and the south end elected only two. This fact immediately stopped all contention. It also made some of the skeptical ones sit up and take notice because it clearly pointed out the fact that, under the commission plan, only those men are elected whom the people as a whole really want, and not the men who would be chosen by a selected few. In Mankato the commission plan, as far as it has gone, is giving satisfaction with the majority of the people.

TO LOOK OVER DRAINAGE SYSTEM

Commercial Club Members And Out Of Town People To Make Trip.

Members of the Commercial Club, together with about thirty out-of-town guests, will start tomorrow morning on a three days junket thru the drainage district tributary to Thief River Falls. The party will drive to Grygla the first day, to Malcolm the second day, and on the third day will visit the floating dredges on Thief River.

The Commercial Club is making the trip for the purpose of inspecting at close range the results of the drainage work already completed, and of getting an idea of what the country will look like when the drainage projects now under way have been completed. The information gathered on this trip will serve as the basis of a series of advertisements, or a booklet, or both, to inform our crowded neighbors of the south about this veritable Garden of Eden in northwestern Minnesota.

The opening up, in a sparsely settled country, of nearly one thousand square miles of rich, fertile farmland means that in the next few years there is going to be the greatest rush of actual home-seekers into this section of the state that has ever taken place, provided that the country is well advertised. Already marvelous changes have taken place, and a man that was here three years ago would not recognize the country now. Where once was miles and miles of impassable bog is now dry and cultivable land. Wherever a ditch is dug, it means a high, dry and easily keept-up road. Everybody now says, "The driving will be better when we strike the 'grade'".

Receives Inquiries.

A Clean City.

The city has been very busy the past week cleaning up the streets and alleys from various kinds of rubbish. Such a move is to be highly commended, and is certainly worthy of emulation by the citizens at large. There are a great many lots and yards in the city where weeds and thistles are being allowed to go to seed without interruption. Now that the city has gotten busy and set a good example by cleaning up, it is hoped that the citizens will take the hint and clean up, too. If there are any property owners who don't cut their weeds and thistles within a specified time, the city will do the work and the costs will be added to the property owner's taxes.

COURT HOUSE LETTERING.

The lettering "Pennington County Court House" was put on the front of the Court House this week by George C. Hall of Parkers Prairie. This kind of lettering is quite a departure from the old style. Mr. Hall made all the letters here in the basement of the Court House out of lime, cement, plaster, etc. They are certainly very neat and striking in appearance. The letters are white and the background is gray.

The secretary of the Commercial Club is receiving numerous inquiries concerning homestead lands in this vicinity. Inquiries have come from Indiana, Wisconsin, Illinois, Iowa, the Dakotas, and many from various places in Minnesota.

TRIP POSTPONED

The junket trip, that the Commercial Club had intended would start to morrow morning, has been postponed until a later date on account of the unsettled condition of the weather and bad roads. Reports from the drainage section are to the effect that the roads are not suitable for fast automobile driving. In view of the fact that the Club wants to secure a lot of valuable information in a limited time, it is advisable to wait for ideal weather.

KILLED IN UNUSUAL MANNER

Andrew Welo, a prominent farmer living 3 miles west of town, left here for home late Monday afternoon, driving a team of colts. When he reached the outskirts of teh city, in some unknown manner he was thrown out of the wagon, and in falling had his foot securely caught under the wagon seat. The team then became thoroly frightened and ran at breakneck speed, dragging Mr. Welo, until stopped near Conley's by Fred Rockstad. When the team was stopped, Welo was found hanging over the side of the wagon box in front of the forward axle. The clothes were completely torn from his body, the paint rubbed off the spokes of the wheel, and one spoke was broken, caused by the terrific impact of his head and body. An ugly wound in the side of the head was sufficient to cause instant death. The remains were taken to Torrison Bros., undertaker's. The funeral services were held Thursday, from the Swedish Mission church.

Mr. Welo was a respectable, well-to-do farmer and was recognized for the past twenty years as a valuable and influential citizen. He had passed the three-score years mark and was the father to an enterprising family. He leaves a wife and six children, two boys and four girls. The boys are old enough to take care of the farm work. Two of the girls are juniors in the High School and another is a sophmore.

Taft May Come.

A Washington dispatch says that president Taft has received the invitation, sent to him by the Commercial Club of Thief River Falls, to visit this city on his western trip, which he intends making as soon as his executive work at the capitol will permit. The dispatch says further that the invitation is being taken up for consideration. It is believed that the invitation will receive serious consideration, and that the president will pass thru Thief River Falls if his itinerary will possibly permit. The time is now ripe for president Taft to take a trip thru this great northwest, and explain personally, his present and ultimate aim with respect to Canadian Reciprocity. His dictatorial policy in regard to reciprocity, and the Arizona and New Mexico Statehood bills, has caused considerable adverse comment in this section.

Knute Flackne In Trouble Again

Six or eight weeks ago, Knute Flackne was brought before special judge Smith, on a charge drunkeness, and fined $10 and costs or 30 days in the county bastile. Knute said he wouldn't do either, but that he was going to appeal to the district court. He got Ed. O'Hara to go his bonds to the extent of $150, and he was released from jail to be given opportunity for appealing. He went down to Crookston, but didn't make moves to do anything, so sheriff LaBree went down and got him and put him in jail to serve out his 30 days. When he gets thru with this he will again be arrested on a warrant gotten out by Geo. Jarman. It seems there is a little board bill of $24 that Knute hasn't attended to. The report is that Flackne is looking for trouble all the time.

BOY HAS NARROW ESCAPE

Alfred Holmgren's Son Shot In Breast With Twentytwo Rifle Bullet.

On Wednesday afternoon Alfred J. Holmgren's two boys drove out into the country to do some practicing with their 22-long rifle. The older boy, 14 years old, jumped out of the buggy and as he was about to receive the rifle from his younger brother it was discharged, the bullet passing thru three thichnesses of clothing and entering his breast just above the heart. The wound did not seem to frighten the boy very much, for instead of going home to his mother, he leisurely wended his way up to Dr. Gambel's office and said that he guessed he had been shot and he wished that doctor "would see if there was anything in there." The doctor found upon examination that the bullet had entered the left breast a short distance above the heart and then probably had skirted along the collar bone, lodging somewhere in the shoulder. The wound was dressed but no operation was performed to remove the bullet. Had the bullet struck a trifle lower it would have gone between the ribs and done serious mischief. The boy is getting along nicely and no serious results are expected.

Soo Makes Proposition

The Soo Line has made the proposition to the city that they would furnish and haul, free of charge, sufficient gravel to cover Third Street from the Soo tracks to the Soo Cafe, providing the city would do the rest of the work. The city would be put to the expense of loading and unloading the cars and of putting the gravel on the street. The city treasury is quite low in funds for such purposes, so the proposition may have to be turned down for the present, even tho it is attractive.

Socialists Aggressive

The socialists of this city will have a full city ticket in the field on a socialist city platform at the coming election this fall. They had a convention last Monday evening at which the attendance was good and great interest was shown.

A platform drafted by a committee, was reported and carefully overhauled plank by plank, quite a number of amendments being made. But certain planks were laid over till next regular meeting to give time for fuller consideration. Adoption of the platform was thus deferred to a later date.

Nominations were then made, several for each office, and these must be passed on by a referendum vote to determine which of the nominees shall be candidates for election.

Thus, with the socialists the motto in nomination affairs is: "Slow but Sure," so that when finally they have nominated their candidates they may know already then that these are the most acceptable to a majority of their party. They seem to work on the assumption that there is nothing like knowing that every candidate has the solid support of his party behind him in the fight.

And in this instance they promise a lusty enough fight. Once their platform is adopted and their candidates nominated they will go to it hard for votes. They say they will appeal for votes on principle rather than on the general popularity of their candidates.

Announcement was also made that Prof. T. E. Lattimer of the University of Illinois, the young, gifted professor of Economics at that institution, has been secured to lecture here the latter part of August or the first part of September. [illegible]

THAT NEW HOTEL IS NEEDED

Travelers Are Forced to Seek Shelter at The Domicile of The Horse.

Every day more and more evidence is driving home the truth of the fact that Thief River Falls is badly in need of another first class hotel. The latest evidence was furnished last Tuesday evening when five reputable business men from Red Wing, who had come up here to investigate the land proposition, could not get accomodations for the night at any of the hotels or other public stopping places. When they were just about to give up in despair, a kind-hearted liveryman took pity on them and let them sleep in his livery-stable for the small consideration of 25 cents per man.

Thief River Falls is growing so fast and has such a large transient trade that, under present conditions, it is getting to be one continual fight for proper accomodations. Traveling men who should logically make their headquarters in Thief River, live with their families in neighboring towns. A great many unmarried travelers hike off to Crookston and Bemidji for over Sunday when their inclination is to stay here. They're mighty fine fellows, too, and are usually desirous, and worthy of the best that money can buy. Men who come to Thief River Falls to engage in business, have hard work finding suitable houses, even though they have the price. Any land man will furnish proof that he can not anywheres near satisfy all the people who are asking him for houses or rooms to rent. Thief River Falls is just beginning to grow now, and this same unsettled condition will continue to exist until someone puts up a modern hotel.

It has been rumored for over a year that Mr. Charles Plain, of Milton, North Dakota, is going to put up a $75,000,000 hotel on his lot at at the corner of 2d Street and LaBree Avenue. That corner is an ideal place for an up-to-date hotel. It's location suits the convenience of the traveling public better than any other available lot in the city, and it is on the best business street in the city.

The secretary of the Commercial Club will furnish information about the hotel situation.

Renew Oiling.

Street Commissioner Melby is now applying road oil to three blocks on Main street and one block on Third street towards the Soo depot. He says this time he will keep the traffic off for several days, if possible. The streets in this city are much harder than in most cities, and therefore it takes a longer time for the oil to soak in. Experience has demonstarted that it would have been much better had the streets already oiled been closed longer. The streets, which have been oiled are in prime condition for a second coat. There is no question now but that the oil is just the thing for the streets. It takes some time and a little experimenting, howver, to find out the best method of applying on hard clay. A period of several days nice weather would greatly assist in getting the oil on right.

Mrs. Peter C. Wold Dead.

Tuesday morning Mrs. Peter C, Wold died of tuberculosis at her home in Kuehnel, Minn., sixteen miles east of Thief River Falls. Mrs. Wold had been suffering for some time and nothing could be found that would check the disease. The funeral services were performed Thursday from the Swedish Mission church. She leaves a husband and seven children. The children will sadly miss their mother, but ample preparations are being made for their welfare. Mr. Wold is a County Commissioner for Pennington County. He has charge, also, of the post office at Kuehnel.

BOND ELECTION NEXT WEEK

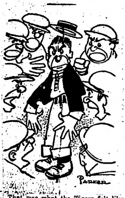
Friday, August 25th Time Set For Voting On Light Plant Bond Proposition.

A special bond-issue election will be held in this city a week from today. Next Friday, Aug. 25th is the day chosen when our citizens will decide by ballot whether they wish to issue $40,000 of bonds against the city Water and Light Department for building an auxiliary steam plant or not. As these bonds are to be issued against the plant itself the law provides that this bond issue would not count against the credit of the city as such.

The sentiment of the city seems quite favorable to the proposed bonds and in all probability they will be voted.

The City Council at its regular meeting this week decided to build the proposed auxiliary plant on city property if bonds are voted and the grounds at the pumping station on the west side of the river was chosen as the best of all available sites.

Kill The Umpire.



That was what the Tigers felt like doing before the end of the baseball game played at St. Hilaire last Sunday. The game finally was finished with a score of 10 to 8 in favor of St. Hilaire. According to reports, our "Saintly" brothers of the south did not treat the Thief River jungletites a bit nice, they running into them, spiking them and otherwise deporting themselves in a heathenish manner. So far as the umpire was concerned, it is said that for downright charity, he had Carnegie and Rockfeller backed completely off the globe. The Tigers will hereafter confine their games to those teams which have been subject to several years of civilizing influences.

Committees Report.

To the Honorable Mayor and City Council of Thief River Falls, Minn:

The committee sent out to investigate the merits of an Oil-Engine driven electric auxiliary plant, beg to report as follows:

1st. That the engine of this particular type is not reliable unless you have the plant located in the oil fields where oil can be had from the same well, having the same gravity and flash test.

2d. We could not get any positive guaranty from the manufacturer as to the reliability of their engines. In fact one of the large manufacturers of oil and gas engines stated that under our conditions he would not recommend the same.

3d. The cost per kilowatt hour, including first cost, depreciation, labor and fuel of an oil-engine plant, would be about the same as a good steam plant with coal at $3.85 per ton, and it would not be nearly so reliable.

We investigated a good many plants of different sizes, both of producers of gas and of steam, and form our observations we would recommend simple Corliss condensing engines, with high pressure water tube boilers, as the best and most reliable plant for the city to install.

Respectfully,
Leonard Peterson,
Goodnow Torrison,
Emil Sedlacek.

This office will be a Postal Savings Depository on and after August, 25, 1911.

Anderson Land Company Leaves.

The stay of the Anderson Land Co. in Thief River Falls was short and sweet. Messrs. Carter and Anderson bowled into this city on the 11th day of July and opened up a land office in the McGinn block. On the 16th day of August the last of the Company, Mr. Anderson, left by the auto route for his home in Cambridge Minn. He was accompanied by Miss June Carter, formerly pianist at the Grand Theatre and later correspondence expert for the Anderson Land Co. Miss Carter had intended leaving by train Wednesday morning for her home in southern Minnesota, but thru the courtesy of Mr. Anderson was given the opportunity of making part of the trip by the more pleasant auto route. Carter and Anderson were found to be very nice gentlemen and appeared to be getting the business. The fact that Mr. Anderson wants to devote a large part of his time to his Cambridge office is probably the reason for his leaving.

NEARLY ASPHIXIATED

E. H. Draper Has Narrow Escape While Cleaning Well.

E. H. Draper had a narrow escape from asphixiation in a well at the Fred Holzknecht place in Porters addition last Saturday. Together with Ben Thompson he was cleaning out and deepening the well and finding the bottom hard they exploded a charge of dynamite in it to break it up. Then Mr. Draper was lowered to the bottom of the well, about forty feet, but being overcome by the foul fumes from the dynamite he could do nothing and soon became unconscious. C. P. Quist, living near by, was attracted to the place by the loud orders from the man above to the man in the well. Mr. Draper was then gasping for breath and it was found that he did not have the rope around his body so he could not be hauled up. The phone was used to good advantage in getting help in a hurry from town, and in the meantime Mr. Quist gave the man in the well all ventilation possible by alternately lowering and raising a bucket with a gunnysack for a sail attached. When help arrived a few minutes later and Draper was hauled out he was all but dead, but artificial breathing in the pure air brought him around after a while all right.

Misses Tena Anderson, Dora Peterson and Messrs. John Anderson and Clarence Benson were out west of town Sunday afternoon picking berries. They report berries numerous, but it was just simply "awfully hot."

Gilbert Benson loaded four wagons Tuesday with his household effects from Marion, S. Dak., and set out for his claim east of Grygla. Matt and Andrew Myrold of that neighborhood were in to do hauling for him. While here they phoned home and got the good news that last Sunday's hail storm had not been heard of out there.

THIRTY YEARS TOGETHER.

Thirty years of association—think of it: How the merit of a good thing stands out in that time—or the worthlessness of a bad one. So there's no guesswork in this evidence of Thos. Ariss, Concord, Mich., who writes: "I have used Dr. King's New Discovery for 30 years, and its the best cough and cold cure I ever used." Once it finds entrance in a home you can't pry it out. Many families have used it forty years. It's the most infallible throat and lung medicine on earth. Unequaled for lagrippe, asthma, hay-fever, croup, quinsy or sore lungs. Price 50c, $1.00. Trial bottle free. Guaranteed by all druggists.

DOING BIG BUSINESS

The Sash and Door factory received this week three car-loads of lumber, one of yellow pine, one of poplar and basswood, and one car mixed of oak, birch, ash, maple and cypress. In the last three weeks the factory has taken in orders to the amount of $3000. Mr. Grothe says that things are rushing and that he could use several more machine men.

Buy it now. Now is the time to buy a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. It is almost certain to be needed before the summer is over. This remedy has no superior. For sale by all druggists.

OBSERVATIONS OF A LAND MAN

To the land owners in this section of the country:

Are you interested in the welfare of this country? Do you want to see good farmers settle in your locality, or do you want to see the lands lying idle?

Should you choose the former, then heed the following advice: When you meet a land agent on the road with a party of land seekers don't spring anything like this: "If you want to buy a farm you better come out and look at my place."

Remember my farmer friend, should a land man stop to converse with three or four farmers, and they spring the same story on his party, then the land seekers will begin to think that our country is worthless, and he will continue to think so, regardless of our wonderful crops and our wonderful soil.

If you want to sell your farm, don't be afraid to list it with some reputable firm, they can do lots of good. They are spending their money advertising the country and must have some way to get their money back, since they are not over-burdened with money.

Don't knock your neighbors farm in order to make a sale of your own farm, for nine times out of ten the party will go away discouraged. The result is another man discouraged with the country. While on the other hand, if the land man had taken the party out and shown him a good piece of land with the right price on it, there would be a sale resulting and another good neighbor.

"One who knows."

NOXIOUS WEEDS.

To all those who own, occupy, or control land in the City of Thief River Falls, Minn:

No person owning, occupying, or controlling land shall permit:

1. Any wild mustard, wild oats, cocklebur, burdock or tumble mustard to go to seed thereon.

2. Any Canadian thistle, oxeye, or quack grass to go to seed thereon, or, for more than two successive years, to reproduce itself thereon by crowns, underground stems, or buds.

3. Any French weed to produce seeds thereon for more than four successive years.

4. Any Russian thistle to grow or remain thereon at all.

For the purpose of this law, the half of any road or street lying next to the lands abutting thereon shall be considered a part of such land.

No person owning, occupying, or controlling land shall permit any noxious weed, or any white daisy, snapdragon, or toad flax, sow thistle, sour dock, or other weeds or grasses, to produce seed upon such adjoining half of the highway.

TRIES TO BRIBE POLICE

Red Wing Republican:—Officer Aaron Bjork of the Red Wing police department was approached by A. D. Stephens last Thursday and offered a better position with bigger pay if he would testify against Superintendent Whittier.

Andy Stephens, Governor Eberhart's right hand man in the prosecution of Supt. Whittier, on his recent visit to Red Wing attempted to bribe Policeman Aaron Bjork to testify in the Whittier investigation by promising him a better position than he now has on the police force, if he would do so.

With contempt for such methods, Mr. Bjork gave the discarded Crookston senator to understand at once and for all time that he was not that kind of a man—not for sale for position or money—and left Eberhart's emissary almost stunned as the officer hastened to take up his duties on his beat.

"I never did anything crooked in all my life and I am not going to do it now," said Bjork sharply.

Stephens deliberately set out to find Officer Bjork at the police station Thursday evening of last week at 6 o'clock. Approaching Mr. Bjork the wily Polk county manipulator introduced himself to him and asked if he was satisfied with his job.

Mr. Bjork said he liked his job very much and had no fault to find.

"Wouldn't you like a better job that would pay more money than you are getting now," asked Stephens.

"Well, I don't know," answered Mr. Bjork, not knowing what the questioner was driving at.

"Well, if you will testify in the Whittier investigation to things that you may know at the training school you can get such a job with better pay than you are getting" continued Stephens.

"Who told you that I knew anything against Mr. Whittier?" asked Mr. Bjork.

Stephens declined to give the information.

"You take me for a wrong man," said Mr. Bjork in conclusion and left Governor Eberhart's "handmaid" wondering why he had ever made such a monumental blunder and approached an honest man.

Stephens had evidently learned that Mr. Bjork lived near the training school and thought he could be bribed into giving evidence against Whittier on being offered a position.

To get the full meaning of this attempt on Stephen's part, it should be understood that anybody wanted as a witness in the investigation against Supt. Whittier can be subpoenaed and placed on the stand to testify. If Mr. Bjork had any evidence that the prosecutors of Mr. Whittier deemed pertinent, all they had to do was to call him and have him tell the truth about anything he might know. Evidently it was not the truth Mr. Stephens was after because that he can get without offering "better jobs and bigger pay."

This incident not only shows the desperate straits of the Stephens-Eberhart-Women's Federation combination, and the vile methods they are deady to use to accomplish their end, but it also raises one or two questions which should be answered for the information of the public.

One of these questions is, What authority did Stephens have to offer Mr. Bjork or anybody else, a position under the state? He is not a member of the Board of Control, although he may expect to become one if the governor succeeds in ousting the two members on the board appointed by the late Governor Johnson which indeed, seems to be the aim of the persecution of Supt. Whittier.

Another question is, Has the governor of the State of Minnesota given Andy Stephens authority to offer positions in any institutions to people who will testify against Supt. Whittier?

The governor and Stephens have taken up this battle together and Private Secretary Wheelock, acting as the representative of the governor's office, has preferred against Mr. Whittier, charges made by Stephens. Is it to be presumed that the governor, having officially sanctioned Stephen's attack on Whittier, has knowledge of the methods that Stephens is using in order to obtain evidence?

It is up to the governor of Minnesota to explain to what extent he may be responsible for the methods which his lieutenant, Stephens is pursuing Reading For the Sick.

"And now a word about patients who may feel like reading," said the house physician to the nurse. "When they ask for something to read be sure to give them continued stories—always continued stories."

"Is that wise?" she ventured to remonstrate. "Won't the excitement over what is going to happen in the next number have a bad effect?"

"No. Even if it does it will be counteracted by the encouragement. Sick people have queer fancies. One of the queerest pertains to literature. Feed a patient's mind with nothing but short stories and he will certainly get into his head that he is going to die so soon that it isn't worth while to start him on a long one, and he will droop accordingly. But give him only yarns of the to-be-continued-in-our-next variety and he will take it for granted that you expect him to get well so he can finish the story, and he will perk up amazingly. Just try it."

The nurse did try it and found that the doctor's theory was built on a sure foundation.—New York Times.

Lion Signs In England.

In the middle ages the country houses of the nobility in England when the owners were absent were used as hostels for travelers. The family arms always hung in front of the house and gave it a popular name among travelers, who called a lion "gules" or azure simply "red" or "blue." As these mere intimations of good cheer and entertainment innkeepers adopted the idea. Lions have always been and are now very favorite signs in England—lions white, black, red, brown, golden, yellow—red being the most common. Probably the Red Lion originated with the badge of John of Gaunt, duke of Lancaster, who married the daughter of Don Pedro, king of Leon and Castile, and who adopted the lion rampant gules of Leon to represent his claim to the throne. Under Richard and John lions became the settled arms of England and were generally used by those who could find any claim.

Rook and Gull.

The rook appears to have become the bird whose name stands for swindlers in a distinctly unfair way, the London Chronicle says. At first "rook" meant a dupe, then the verb "to rook" came to mean to cheat, and out of this was evolved "rook," a cheater—a complete topsy turvy process. It is curious that the same thing has not happened to "gull." Here also the verb came from the substantive meaning a dupe, and, as the gull strikes one as rather a knowing bird, one might have expected the same evolution as in the case of the rook. It should be observed, however, that "gull," a dupe, did not refer specially to the seagull, the word having formerly meant a young bird of any kind. In Elizabethan English it signified a callow youngster who wished to be thought smart.

Thirty years of essociation—think of it: How the merit of a good thing stands out in that time—or the worthlessness of a bad one. So there's no guesswork in this evidence of Thos. Value of Fat.

The popular view of the close connection between fat and good nature and weight and balance is not wholly without rational foundation. Fat, unpleasant and stodgy as it is, is one of the most valuable tissues in the human body, and any man who reduces his share of it below a certain reasonable level not only takes the smooth edge off his temper and balance off his powers of judgment, but exposes all of his higher tissues, notably the muscular, nervous and secreting, to danger of both starvation and disease. A moderate cushion of fat is one of the best buffers and bucklers against the "slings and arrows of outrageous fortune," whether in the form of disease germs or in strains upon endurance. The man who makes himself into a lean and hungry Cassius even with the best of intentions is very apt to get himself into a state of both mind and body where he is more fit for treason, stratagem and spoils than for comfort, wholesomeness and a long, happy life. —Dr. Woods Hutchinson in Outing.

A West Indian Fish Dish.

A novelty to the jaded palate and a delightful luncheon or supper dish is made of equal quantities of potatoes and fish, halibut or cod preferred Butter well a deep baking dish and first put in a layer of breadcrumbs, then a layer of sliced onions, then a layer of the fish. Cut in fairly small pieces and entirely free from skin and bones. Season well and repeat until the dish is nearly filled. Sprinkle each layer with small bits of butter. Now pour over it all a pint of tomato ketchup and finish with a layer of buttered breadcrumbs. A layer of sliced tomatoes may be put in and will improve the flavor. Bake in a very slow oven for at least four hours and baste three or four times with a mixture of vinegar, flour and water, watching it carefully to prevent scorching. This dish has an unpronounceable and decidedly unspellable name, but it is very good and decidedly out of the ordinary. —Philadelphia Press.

The Absolute Zero.

What is the absolute zero of temperature? The zero of thermometers is purely conventional. The inventor of the centigrade simply took for zero the coldest temperature known in his day, while Fahrenheit had even less ground for his selection. Absolute zero is a point fixed by nature and may be arrived at in a variety of ways. All gases expand or contract equal amounts for every degree of heat. The amount of 1-273 of their volume for each degree centigrade. If, then, a gas is cooled down continuously it must reach a point at which further contraction is impossible. If a gas loses 1-273 of its volume at each downward degree of centigrade then in 273 degrees it would exhaust this power and become a solid; hence (minus) 273 C. is the absolute zero of temperature. This answers to 461 F. —Louisville Courier-Journal.

Belief In Ghosts.

In most of the Oriental countries, notably in China and in many quarters in Europe, the belief in ghosts is still active, quite as much so as it was a thousand years ago. The peasantry of Russia, and especially of Siberia, are in constant dread of ghosts, and much of their time is taken up with devising ways and means of safeguarding themselves against their visitations. Not even in the United States of America is the ancient superstition defunct. The negroes are notorious believers in ghosts, and thousands of white people, remote from the center of intelligence, are still the victims of the old idea.—New York American.

Able, but Not Willing.

"Come, now," persisted the lawyer, "are you not able to say of your own knowledge that the defendant was in the room at the time and objected to the whole proceeding?"

"Yes, sir," savagely replied the witness. "I am able to say it, I reckon, but I'd be telling the biggest lie you ever heard of if I did."

Sensitive.

"Ah," he protested, "my love for you is the greatest thing in the world. It is larger than the world. It is wider than the sea. Let me pour it into your ears."

"Sir," ejaculated the fair maid, "do you mean to insinuate anything about the size or shape of my ears?"

An Old Superstition.

It was a common superstition in ancient Italy that if a woman were found spinning on a highroad the crops would be ruined for that year. In most sections of Italy a woman was forbidden by law thus to spin or even to carry an uncovered spindle on the highway.

Had Reason to Be Silent.

An ingenious young man once took his fiancee to church in a small country village, and when the time for "collection" came around he rather ostentatiously displayed a silver dollar. Presuming upon their engagement, the young woman placed a restraining hand upon the arm of her fiance.

"Don't be so extravagant, George!" she exclaimed.

"Oh, that's nothing," he replied. "I always make a point of giving a dollar when I go to a strange church."

Just then the deacon came with the plate, and George dropped a coin. Everything seemed favorable, and the young man beamed with a sense of generosity. Then the minister gave out the notices for the week and concluded with the wholly unexpected announcement of the day's collection.

"The collection today," said he, "amounted to 95 cents."

The Origin of Dunce.

A dunce is named after Duns Scotus, the chief and leader of the schoolmen who were in opposition to what was called "the new learning" in the sixteenth century. It is easy to see how readily convertible the term would be. Any opponent of the new learning would be apt to be referred to as a Dunsman, or, more briefly, as a Duns, to indicate that he held the views of which Duns Scotus was the most eminent representative. But as the time went on and the new learning triumphed to call any one a Dunsman or a dunce would be equivalent to describing him not merely as opposed to a certain set of doctrines, but as incapable of learning and enlightenment. It is certainly hard upon Duns Scotus, as Archbishop Trench has remarked, that he, "the subtle doctor" by preeminence, the "wittiest of the school divines," as Hooker terms him, should have his name handed down to future ages as a synonym for invincible stupidity.

A Matter of Breed.

"How so, father?" inquired Mrs. Bullock.

"Well," Mr. Bullock said, "one o' my errands was from Saba Mabel Briggs. She wanted I should find out why they hadn't punctuated her last poem. They sent a copy, an' she said it made her most sick the way they'd spilled her beautiful ideas.

"Well, when I'd got loaded up to come home I drove round to the Bee office an' composin' room an' beckoned a young feller in his shirt sleeves to come out.

"'Now,' I says, 'you'll do her a favor if you'll tell me why you didn't punctuate Saba Mabel Briggs' last poem?'

"'Cert'nly,' s'a he. 'I'm not a pointer; I'm a setter.'"—Youth's Companion.

A Straightforward Answer.

J. B. Lippincott once ventured to ask Ouida, the novelist, how she came to know so much about clubs, camp life, barracks, gambling houses and other places which are only visited by men. She placed her hands upon her knees and, looking straight at her questioner, said, "It is none of your business."

BLOODY RIOTING AT LIVERPOOL

Strikers and Police In Frequent Clashes.

MARTIAL LAW IS PROBABLE

Authorities Are Determined to Quell Disorders and Will Use Powder and Ball If Necessar.

Liverpool, Aug. 15.—Rioting was resumed after a night filled with violence and bloodshed.

Mob spirit ruled everywhere. With the police and soldiery wearied after the all night struggle the mob began in the early morning to loot barrooms and provision shops.

A score of shops were entered after the doors and windows had been smashed. Liquor increased the anger of the mob.

The police and soldiers, by frequent charges, with clubs swinging and bayonets fixed, finally cleared the streets and restored a semblance of order.

Many were injured in the charges and more than 100 arrested.

The authorities sent out word that the entire city will be placed under martial law and order restored with powder and ball if necessary.

At daylight all manner of vehicles were impressed into service to remove the wounded, many of whom lay on the pavements in pools of blood. One hundred and seventy-five, of whom twenty were policemen, were treated at hospitals for serious injuries.

Worst in History of Country.

The rioting was the worst clash between workers and civil authorities in the history of the country.

Driven from one stronghold the mobs reformed in the narrow streets and it was impossible for the police to drive them out. Wearied with fighting the troops the mobs turned their attention to the destruction of property. While some looted shops others set fire to two houses in Girard street. The mob cheered as they burned and refused to allow firemen or police to extinguish the flames. The "Hoolligan" element led the mobs and the frantic appeals of the strike leaders were futile.

Further troops from the Yorkshire regiment and the Warwickshire Yeomanry arrived in the city shortly after daylight and were at once rushed into the streets.

The outbreak followed a trivial action of the police in maintaining order during the demonstration of 100,000 strikers at St. George's hall.

An unusual scene was presented in police court when 100 men and women rioters, arrested during the clashes, were arraigned. Many had their heads bandaged and their clothes torn to shreds. Nearly all were sentenced to jail terms, some getting as long as three months.

POPE SUFFERS A SLIGHT RELAPSE

Physicians Hurriedly Summoned to His Bedside.

Rome, Aug. 13.—Pope Pius suffered a slight relapse during the night and his physicians were hurriedly summoned to the bedside by Dr. Amici, who kept vigil in the sick chamber.

Dr. Petacci at once administered an injection of caffeine, which strengthened the heart action and removed any immediate danger.

After the injection his holiness rested more easily, but took very little nourishment.

Doctors Petacci and Machiafava, while making no statement, showed their disappointment and anxiety because the pope had not made the improvement they had expected.

As a result they have ordered that the pope hold no audiences of any kind and all church matters are held in abeyance.

MUNICIPAL CAR MEN STRIKE

Glasgow's Street Railway System Tied Up.

Official Paper of The City.

FRIDAY, AUG. 18 1911.

Welcome is that visitor who appreciates the value of anothers time.

We are told that an "Irregularity" is not necessarily wrong. We ask is it ever "Right?"

The Minneapolis Journal gave this country a fine writeup in last Sunday's issue.

An education is the only asset that a man can have that is not an incumbrance.

The book of today is not as reliable as the newspaper in the day of Ben Franklin.

Few men realize their responsibility to the world and still fewer pay the debt they owe.

The farmer who takes time by the forelock and does his plowing early has the best crop insurance for next year.

If you want to gain real enjoyment in life try to do something for others without expecting to be repaid.

President Taft believes in Reciprocity but he does not believe in free wool. We do not believe in Taft.

A newspaper that does not stand for the people is of no benefit to them. One that is good Lord and good Devil to all men is as useless as a blind honey bee.—Le Sueur News.

We do not expect to please everybody with every article in this paper any more than you would expect every person you meet on the street to be exactly like every other person in the city.

The ditches of the country to the Northwest of this city will receive a thorough inspection next Saturday by several of the State officials and officials of the Soo Line and some local parties. This inspection will no doubt tend to create more interest than ever in the vast country to the east of us that is still a semi-cultivated domain.

A farmer might sell a dealer bad eggs but it would be at the cost of being considered one.

Even a lead pencil makes a good farm tool. Keep an account of your business, Mr. Farmer.

Dr. Wiley makes a good defense. He says he did not even know of the things with which he has been charged.

With Reciprocity passed protection is dead. The farmer will see to it that it gets proper burial.

Individualism is dying out. Two great giants of the modern world—Corporation and Co-operation—are dividing the Earth between them. The farmer must choose one or the other, or else be ground into poverty.

Considerable pressure is being exercised upon President Taft to veto the farmers free list, the wool bill and the cotton bill. If he does, it will be the greatest mistake in an administration noted for great mistakes.--Willmar Tribune.

President Taft has hurried back form his summer vacation to Washington in order to veto the bill making Arizona a state. His reason for the veto is that the proposed state constitution provides for a recall of Judges. Really it is too bad that the big president could not be granted the privilege of appointing all judges and their term be for life and then all kinds of Alaskan coal and land fakes could be carried on and no one be convicted of doing anything wrong.

RECORD POTATO YIELDS

Bemidji.

A dispatch from Bemidji, to the Journal, gives a record potota crop—Fifteen potatoes, making a total weight of seven pounds, from one hill is the record for partially grown tubers in this vicinity this year. These potatoes were dug by James French on his farm one mile west of Bemidji. They were of the early Triumph variety and every one was of perfect shape.

Thief River.

R. J. MacDonald, of Thief River Falls, has evidence to prove that, in the year of 1908, on his lot in the suburbs of this city, he dug twenty potatoes from one hill, they making a total weight of twenty and one-half pounds. None of these potatoes were exceedingly large or exceedingly small, but were of a uniform size. they were of the Burbank variety and full grown. It was figured out that an acre of such potatoes, planted as Mr. MacDonald had his planted, would yield 1200 bushels.

He showed [illegible] knowledge of the law when Atty. A. H. Walker declined to become counsel for the gentlemen who are moving to secure the impeachment of R. W. Archbald, the federal judge who let off the wire pool men with small fines and who sentenced a poor smuggler to jail and a rich muggler to a trifling financial payment.

Judges are impeached for "high crimes and misdemeanors." It is necessary to secure the action of a majority of the house of representatives and then the case is tried—often in a partisan spirit—before the senate of the United States. In the latter body the powers of special privilege are still among those present. Even when the misdemeanors of a judge are quite flagrant and his crimes quite "high", these, his judges, are not apt to be severe.

It is doubtful whether Judge Archbald has been guilty of high crimes and misdemeanors within the meaning of the constitution. There is no doubt that Judge Archbald has shown himself the kind of judge who warps the laws so that a different kind of justice is meted out to rich and poor. The rich pay a fine which is so proportioned to their means as to be no punishment at all—the poor serve terms in jail.

Archbald in this respect is typical of a majority of our federal judges. He is no worse than Grosscup, Pollock and a host of others of that stamp. If it were possible to remove Archbald by impeachment the whole federal judiciary might be rendered amenable to the public welfare.

No, impeachment is too cumbersome and inadequate a remedy. If there were a provision for the recall of federal judges Archbald would be recalled. In the absence of such a law he will go on serving special privilege, and when he takes up his new duties as a member of the commerce court to which he has just been promoted by the president, he will do the same thing there.—Daily News.

THE GOVERNMENT

"Will you kindly name the three departments of national government of which I hear so much?—Reader."

Yes, indeed, and glad you asked. Here they are:

The congress, to make the laws.

The president, to suspend the laws.

The supreme court, to unmake the laws.

For further details as to the first branch, read the sacred constitution; as to second branch, Roosevelt's testimony in steel trust investigation; as to third branch, decision of supreme court in oil and tobacco cases.

Governor Eberhart has received word from the officers of the Northwestern Development League that the business interests of St. Paul, Minneapolis and Duluth have agreed to a deal whereby this state will be furnished exhibit space without cost at the land show. The show to be given under the auspices of the league is the only one in the country which is not a jrivate enterprise and will be managed in such a way as to furnish space for official exhibits.

At a cost of ten thousand dollars the business interests of the three Minnesota cities have bought from the league 3,500 square feet of preferred space at the show. Each of the seven states will have a space of fifty feet long and ten feet wide for their official exhibit.

The governor has been asked to confer with officers of the league in this state and secure the interest of those necessary to put in an exhibit which will be credit to the state. Under this plan no one community or city will have an advantage over others in the state. Any city, county or land company desiring to make an independent exhibit will be able to secure a limited amount of space near the state exhibit on reasonable terms, but it is the desire of the league officers for this state that the best possible exhibit be made in the name of the state as it is from such an exhibit that results are to be obtained.

The seven states which are to be thus represented are: Washington, Oergon, Idaho, Montana, North and South Dakota and Minnesota. No other states will have exhibits and Canadian exhibits will be barred, the whole idea of the show being "an exposition by the seven states for the benefit of the seven states alone."

Minnesota officers of the league are J. H. Dight of Duluth and Chas. Patterson of St. Paul. Inquiries about the state exhibits should be addressed to George S. Welsh, immigration commissioner, St. Paul. Information about concession space may be secured from Will A. Campbell, of St. Paul.

[illegible] of benzoate of soda is one of the policies of the administration. But the celerity with which President Taft denies this suggests that the benzoate of soda question and other things relating to "Doc." Wiley's work are loaded with political dynamite.

Doctor Wiley has taken radical ground against food preservatives. He has held that they permit food manufacturers to conceal dangerous changes in the constitution of their products. His theory has been to keep on the safe side, and if there is a possibility that a food preservative is dangerous, it should be avoided.

The mystery that governs the preparation of food products has no doubt led to a certain amount of public hysteria. Possibly it may be true as claimed that the magazine articles on "The poisoners of the people" have caused more indigestion than all their naughty drugs.

But on the other hand, there are statistics to back the statement that $100,000,000 a year of Adulterated foods have been worked off on the American public.

Both sides of teh benzoate controversy have had their poison squads and encyclopaedic tabulations, but it is still a matter of guess work as to just what benzoate does.

Of course there is the report of the board of scientific experts appointed by President Roosevelt, including President Remsen of Johns Hopkins, one of the world's leading chemists and Prof. Chittenden of Yale, one of the greatest physiologists, to the effect that benzoate, if used in reasonable quantities, is harmless, furthermore, that as it has little color or odor it does not conceal changes in taste and smell.

Still the Association of State and National Food and Dairy departments last year could only muster a majority of 57 to 42 favorable to this side of the controversy.

When you read that the Massachusetts board of health, out of 92 candy samples examined, found 18 colored with deadly lead chromate, you begin to wonder whether all our food manufacturers mix up their messes with the philanthropic beneficence and scientific judgment that would be used by Prof. Remsen's experts.

Crookston State Agricultural School opens Oct. 3, 1911, for its sixth year. By that time various improvements will be completed, making the equipment, building and grounds better than ever. Two new specialists have been added to the faculty. Prof. Robert B. Baxter, a graduate of Iowa Agricultural College, takes the position of Animal Husbandry, and Prof. Thomas Sewall, of Minnesota Agricultural College, the position as instructor in Farm Drawings and Plans. The school catalog explains to anyone interested in attending a school of this kind the courses, expenses, etc. No tuition is charged as the school is a state institution provided for the young men and women of northwestern Minnesota. Already a large number have registered. For a copy of the school catalog address C. G. Selvig, Superintendent, State Farm, Crookston, Minn.

Dead Men's Teeth.

Before artificial teeth were created deficiencies had to be made good by the real article, so body snatchers ravaged the cemeteries at night, breaking up the jaws of the dead to extract their teeth to sell to dentists for insertion in live men's mouths. An army of these ghouls followed Wellington's army. They were licensed as sutlers, but once night fell out came their nippers and they prowled over the battlefield extracting the teeth of the dead or dying.

Asafetida.

Sheep have a fit of joy eating the young asafetida plant, and Persians and other oriental races relish it as much as sheep. The juice of the asafetida plant when fresh is so strong that a teaspoonful turns out more smell in a house than a hundredweight of drug store asafetida.

BUSINESS COURSES INCREASE IN SCOPE

Instruction Made Broader To Meet Demands of Modern Conditions.

There was a time when bookkeeping and penmanship, with supplementary training in spelling, practically made up the course of the business college, but these schools have kept pace with business, and now not even shorthand and typewriting, with the older branches of study, complete the business courses offered.

Courses in business practice, commercial law, business correspondence, higher accounting, banking, rapid calculation, office work and work on adding machines are some of the additions of recent years, and the scope of instruction is broadening each year to meet the development of business. In some schools an office is fitted out and office work is carried on under conditions such as will be met by the student after graduation.

Instruction in bookkeeping includes all the systems used by up-to-date business houses, and courses in correspondence equip the student with the knowledge of how to frame letters of various sorts, so that those who profit by the course are able to wirte letters without detailed dictation as is often desirable. The commercial law course affords the student the opportunity to increase his grasp on business affairs by a knowledge of laws affecting business. The new branches of instruction are calculated to make a stenographer capable of becoming more than a stenographer. They give the student a start without the handicap of lack of insight into the work of others about him.

Failure to advance usually depends more on insufficient preparation for the work chosen by an individual than on any other factor. The elements of character and personality also figure in the results, and both are important, but providing moral qualifications are not wanting the man whose training has been thorough will advance faster and rise higher than the man of natural talents whose education has been deficient.

The boy who is leaving school with the expectation of going into business may be sure of not wasting time in taking a business course before seeking employment. Not only will he be better prepared for work, but he will find that connection with a business college often opens up opportunities. Applications for students capable of filling positions usually are received by these schools in greater numbers than they can be filled.

Special attention is given to business ethics in some of the schools, and the student in that way is brought to realize the importance of business honesty as well as the practical knowledge of what might be called the technic of business.

Yesterday while on his way to attend the funeral at the Swedish Mission church John Gustafson, this city, with some ladies in the buggy came very near having a serious accident, but all escaped unharmed. Just over the bridge the buggy pole came loose at one side, dropped down on the horses heels and startled them. They swung back and forth from the sidewalk to the road a number of times as they sped on, several times barely missing trees and telephone poles and each time turning back so abruptly that it is a marvel the ladies in their fright were not thrown out. The horses were finally stopped near the M. E. church.

Amusements

At The Lyceum.

"Maud Williams" is the big hit at the Lyceum this week. She is "there" with the latest songs and monologues, which are very well rendered and very entertaining. Another taking feature in the vaudeville line is "Trix," an original comedy playlet of the "Obermans". Manager Morgan will soon have a series of films depicting the adventures of Mutt and Jeff. There is such a demand for these pictures that he is having some difficulty in securing them. The deoderzing and disinfectant apparatus has arrived. It makes the air pure and pleasant.

At The Grand

Last Sunday evening there were given seven big features at the Grand, including two vaudeville stunts and two songs, the biggest program ever shown for the money in this city. This week Wallace and Arnold are here in their original comedy skit "Black and White." They will be here until after Sunday night, and are welcome to stay because their "skit" is very amusing. For next Sunday night manager McQuery announces another big program—two songs, three vaudeville sketches by Wallace and Arnold, and a host of good pictures.

TORGERSON

It has been a long time since the Torgerson news has been heard from, but time is scarce, as harvest is on in full blast.

The haying is nearly all done.

Anton Knudson came out with his new threshing machine last Wednesday. The grain will be threshed in good season this fall as Knudson has a first class outfit. We all hope he will succeed. He has also a plowing and breaking attachment, so it is likely the swamps will soon be in fields.

The rust is hard on the grain, altho it isn't as bad as it was first thot to be. About 30 per cent, if not more, is damaged.

Olai Knudson was to Thief River Falls a week of two ago and proved up on his land.

There is a big meeting at the Torgerson school house this forenoon. One of the best speakers in the state on the saloon question is the report.

We will stop now, as time is precious, but will try and find more next time.

EXCEL

Miss Ellen Johnson returned to her home near Strandquist on Sunday after a weeks visit at the Swanson home.

A bunch of young people consisting of Swansons, Malbergs and Muzzys spent Sunday at J. J. Berg's and all report having had a good time.

Miss Irene Malberg returned Saturday evening from Warren where she had spent the most of the summer.

Victor Swanson visited over Sunday near Strandquist.

A bad hail storm struck this part of the country Sunday afternoon doing damage to all grain which happened to be in its way. The hail which was the largest we have seen were the size of good sized plums.

GERMANTOWN

Harvest is well advanced. Early oats, barley, and the most of the wheat is in the shock. Oats proved be a bumper this year. The wheat is also good on the average.

Branch ditch No. 20 is completed except on such places where the quick-sand rushed in nearly filling up the ditch.

Engineer Hamre was out last week looking over the work done. He found the grade running east on the big ditch incomplete and the contractor will have to level the grade a little more.

Bridges across the main ditch are put in as fast as the material can be hauled, but no approaches are made, as nobody seems to have it in their contract. Probably Mr. Hamre will give some explanation.

Mr. and Mrs. Emil Ristau Celebrated their 45th and 38th birthdays, last Sunday. A number of neighbors came to congratulate them and a fine afternoon was spent.

Rambeck and Olson threshed feed last Wednesday and nearly everyone came aronud, as feed has been scarce ever since last fall.

Manager Johnson went to Thief River Falls last Thursday to consult a doctor. A boil had been troubling Ed. He got some relief and is all O. K. again.

Yesterday we listened to some very interesting arguments. A neighbor farmer announced that he had oats which contained 132 grains to the head. He was contradicted and went to get the proof. He was right as oats has always a small kernel along with the big ones, and counting them in he produced several heads which counted up to 130 and a few over.

E. T. Emerson, of two miles east of Kratka, reports that the crops are immense in his section. He predicts a yield of 35 bushels of wheat per acre. The grain in that section is stacked, to be threshed later on. They find that this method results in a much better quality of grain, it usually bringing two cents a bushel more than the average shock-threshed grain. Oats and flax will be a bumper crop, too. It did not rain out there Sunday evening.

Tuesday night's program at the Lyceum was well worthy of especial mention and commendation. When for ten or fifteen cents the public can have so good and clean a show there will be little room for adversely criticising the play-houses. How the proprietor can afford to give so much for so little is the puzzle.

DIED MONDAY.

Mrs. Chris Krohn died Monday from cancer of the stomach. She leaves to mourn her loss a husband and four children. There are two boys and two girls, ranging in age from seven to fifteen years. The Krohn family has been known in Thief River Falls for several years and is very well thot of. Mr. Krohn is one of our city's competent carpenters. He and the children have the sincerest sympathy of their many friends.

CUT SEED CORN

Don't forget to cut all corn intended for seed purposes just as soon as the ears are well dented. The stalk may seem a trifle green, but the seed will fill out and cure properly in the shock. Corn cut in this way will have better color, better luster and better vitality than when left on the standing stalk to mature. A killing frost should not strike the corn before it is in the shock.—C. P. Bull.

BUSINESS MEN'S DINNER

The Aid Society of the M. E. church will serve a 6 o'clock dinner next Wednesday the 23d in the building two doors west of the post office. The business men of town and their force of help especially invited.

MINNESOTA'S FAIR AND EXPOSITION

An Outline of What the Men Behind the Fair Are Working For.

Secretary J. C. Simpson, the other officers, and the directors of the Minnesota State Agricultural Society are working to make this year's fair greater in every way than any of its predecessors. Some of the objects which those in charge are working unremittingly to attain are:

To make the Minnesota State Fair and Exposition one of the greatest educational institutions of the state.

To make it a place where all classes and conditions of people can come and learn from observation the best that brains and time and money and perseverance have achieved in [illegible] of industry.

To make it a mirror of the [illegible] resources and Minnesota's [illegible] advertising asset.

To make it not only the country's greatest exposition in point of size and attendance, but the greatest in intrinsic educational value.

To make it a place where every one no matter what their walk of life, can find entertainment and instruction.

To make it a veritable short course in agriculture, stock raising, manufacturing and in every industry that is worth while.

To make its 350 acres and its week in September the place and the time that will furnish the greatest interest and entertainment to the greatest number of people in the Northwest.

SPECIAL DAYS AT STATE FAIR

Directors of the Minnesota State Agricultural Society have chosen the following special days for the 1911 Minnesota State Fair and Exposition:

Monday, Sept. 4th, Labor Day.
Tuesday, Sept. 5th, Minneapolis Day.
Wednesday, Sept. 6th, Farmers' Day.
Thursday, Sept. 7th, St. Paul Day.
Friday, Sept. 8th, Pioneers and Soldiers' Day.
Saturday, Sept. 9th, Children's Day.

THE BIGGEST CHEESE.

One of the biggest cheeses ever made is now being constructed for exhibition at the Minnesota State Fair. This mammoth dairy product will weigh between five and six thousand pounds, will be approximately six feet in diameter and will stand about forty-four inches high. It will be made of full cream American cheese of the best quality. As a novelty it will be attractive and is expected to stimulate the cheese making industry in Minnesota and the Northwest.

Friday, Sept. 8 has been designated as Grand Army day at the Minnesota State Fair. Veterans wearing the regular Grand Army badge or regimental reunion badge will be admitted free on that day.

An Escape

By SUSAN YOUNG PORTER

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

Our family has occupied the same house in London for several centuries, and the upper stories are crowded with heirlooms and old papers. This continued residence is remarkable, for there has never been a political disturbance in the kingdom in which at least one of my race did not take part. In nosing over an old letter written by one of my quarrelsome ancestors to his mother I found the following story:

Heaven keep you, my dear mother, and may the joy of getting this letter and the news contained in it not be too much for you seeing that your son is out of reach of harm in this pleasant land of France, a land that I shall always love, since its grapes or, rather, the wine made from their juice is at the bottom of my escape. Had it not been for an idea put in my head by the wine I had in the cellar of the Tower I would now be without a head, like the duke of Monmouth, in whose stupid effort to take the throne from his uncle, King James, I was much mixed.

You know that, being a man of rank, yet not a leader in the rebellion, I was accorded the privileges usually granted to such persons, being lodged with the lieutenant of the Tower himself and as fine a fellow as ever served his sovereign. From the first I felt sure I would keep my head on my shoulders, and if I didn't I was bound to enjoy what little time was left me. The lieutenant and I were kindred spirits, and many were the cups of October ale we drank together, he always giving the toast, "May your head never roll into a basket, but may you meet the death of a nobleman, falling before a pike or a sword."

I had the wine you sent me down in the cellar under the Tower in which are the lieutenant's quarters, and one day, while drinking with my jailer, we getting tired of ale, I told him that I had some fine French wine in the cellar and if he would let me send my man for it I would open a bottle. He gave the permission and the cellar key, and, calling Jacob, I gave him the key and told him to go for a bottle. I also tipped him a knowing look.

It was only a look, and I never dreamed that a look and a key would tell him what I wished to say to him, but couldn't speak, for the presence of the lieutenant. But when a man is waiting to have his head lopped off he will cling to any straw of hope, and so did I. Jacob was gone a long while, but in time [illegible] to the door and instead of handing [illegible]

his arm. I knew what this meant and quick as a flash I moved the key of the door from the inside to the outside and locked it, shutting in the lieutenant.

I began at once putting on Jacob's clothes, and he began putting on mine. While he was doing so he told me why he had been so long. He had told the man on guard that he had the key to the cellar where the wine was kept and if he would come with him he might have all he wished to drink. When Jacob got the guard in the cellar he opened a bottle of the wine and told him to drink quick because I was waiting for him to come with wine and he couldn't be too long. The man drank two bottles as fast as he could pour their contents down, then fell on the floor. Jacob locked him in.

I was but a few minutes getting on Jacob's breeches and doublet and, putting on his hat, pulled it down over my face. Then, pretending to be drunk with liquor, I staggered out into the courtyard, and, passing over the spot where two of King Harry's wives were beheaded, I walked past the sentry at the postern, those I met laughing at me for a sot. I was obliged to pass over Tower hill, where stood a scaffold that had for weeks been used for beheading such rebels as I and, tottering down into the frequented streets, lost myself in the crowd.

Luck helped me, for no one saw me to know me, though I saw some I knew. I thought of going home to hide, but knew I would be sought there and pushed on, moving by the outskirts till I reached the east side of the town, when I pushed off through the country toward the coast.

But I did not go directly east, for I wished to see my sweetheart at Linkborn manor and give her a kiss before putting the sea between her and me, besides relieving her mind as to the chance of still keeping my head and body together. It was evening when I came to the manor, and Margaret was walking among the flowers. She was languid and drooping, for she had been told that I would be brought to the block in a few days. When she saw me coming in Jacob's clothes she knew his doublet and gave a cry, thinking he was bringing her news of me. Staggering toward me, she fell fainting in my arms. I kissed her back to life, and when she opened her eyes she was looking into mine.

But there was little time, for I knew they would seek me where she was, and I begged her to get me some food in a napkin while I went to the stable and got out a horse. When one was saddled I rode out, met her with the victuals, bent down and kissed her, then, giving the horse the spurs, galloped away.

And here I am in France, dear mother, ready to put my head in jeopardy again.

NEBRASKA SENATORIAL FIGHT

Norris Accuses Administration of Taking Sides.

Washington, Aug. 15.—An ugly situation is developing as a result of alleged interference by the administration in the senatorial situation in Nebraska. Representative George W. Norris of Nebraska, who led the revolt in the house against Speaker Cannon in February, 1910, is a candidate for the seat against Norris Brown, whose term will expire in March, 1913.

Friends of Mr. Norris insist that the administration is taking sides in the contest. It is pointed out that James Wilson, secretary of agriculture, has accepted an invitation to deliver an address at the Nebraska state fair, in Lincoln early in September.

FRENCH STEAMER SUNK IN COLLISION

Ninety-Three Persons Perish in Disaster.

Gibraltar, Aug. 10.—The French steamer Emir foundered five miles east of Tarifa, Spain, in the Straits of Gibraltar. Ninety-three persons were drowned.

The ship sailed from here at 3 o'clock in the morning for a Moroccan port.

An hour later, in a dense fog, she collided with the British steamer Silverton, bound from Newport, Eng., for Taranto, Italy.

The crew of the latter rescued twenty-seven of the Emir's crew and passengers.

The Silverton later put in here with her starboard bow stove in and her forepeak full of water.

The Emir floated only a few minutes after the collision. Sixty-nine passengers and twenty-four of the crew went down with the ship. Twelve of the crew and fifteen passengers were saved. All the passengers were French.

COMMITTEE CHANGES FRONT

Will Not Compel Perkins to Answer Certain Questions.

Washington, Aug. 10.—The house steel trust investigating committee at an executive session decided not to press at this time questions of campaign contributions, in connection with which George W. Perkins of New York, a director of the United States Steel corporation, was threatened with contempt proceedings before the house of representatives.

The committee decided, however, to require the steel corporation to produce the books of subsidiary companies.

The committee's decision not to press the inquiry into campaign contributions was based on the conclusion that the house resolution did not give authority to go into those matters. It was said that Representative Littleton of New York insisted that the committee would thus transcend its power.

PEERS APPROVE VETO MEASURE

Bill Passes House of Lords by Narrow Margin.

VOTE STANDS AT 131 TO 114

Struggle Begun Two Years Ago Ends in Radical Change in Great Britain's Working Constitution.

London, Aug. 11.—Premier Asquith's government, which claims to represent the democracy of Great Britain, enforced its will on the peerage by the narrow vote of 131 to 114.

By this vote the house of lords decided to accept what the Liberals contend is the will of the people and adopted Viscount Morley's motion not to insist on the lords' amendments to the parliamentary bill, which practically limits the power of the house of lords to a two-year suspensory veto and vastly increases the prerogatives of the house of commons.

The great constitutional struggle that began when the house of lords nearly two years ago rejected the budget of David Lloyd-George, chancellor of the exchequer, is ended for a time at least and with the greatest change to Great Britain's working constitution since the passage of the reform bill.

The process of voting consumed nearly an hour and the result trembled in the balance until the last moment. The "die hards" mustered greater strength than was expected and the government owes its victory to the votes of between twenty and thirty Conservatives who threw in their lot with the Liberals to save their own caste from loss of prestige and the king from the necessity of exercising the royal prerogative for the creation of a large number of new peers, from which every one believes he was extremely anxious to be saved.

A resolution to pay members of the house of commons $2,000 annually for their services was carried by a vote of 256 to 159.

The resolution was moved by Chancellor Lloyd-George, who said Great Britain was the only country in the world that did not pay members for their work in parliament, which nowadays is so strenuous the members have little time to attend to anything else.

WILL VETO STATEHOOD BILL

President Taft Opposed to Judiciary Recall Feature.

Washington, Aug. 10.—President Taft will veto the New Mexico-Arizona statehood resolution as passed by the senate. Democratic leaders of both house and senate declare, however, that they could marshal enough votes to pass the measure over a veto.

The president indicated some time ago that he would take this action unless the Nelson amendment was adopted. This amendment would have required the people of Arizona, as a condition of statehood, to vote down the provision in their constitution for the recall of judges. The amendment was defeated and the senate passed the bill as it came from the house, simply requiring that a vote be taken on the recall feature.

Washington, Aug. 11.—Organized labor won a signal victory when Comptroller of the Treasury Tracewell construed the last naval appropriation act to mean that "every" employe in a shipyard where government vessels are building must be given an eight-hour day.

Heretofore it had been held by the attorney general that former appropriation acts applied the eight-hour restriction only to work actually being performed on the vessel itself.

ADOPT CONFERENCE REPORT

Thirty Western Republicans Join Democrats on Wool Bill.

Washington, Aug. 15.—Thirty Western Republicans, among them seven from Minnesota, joined with the Democrats in passing the conference report on the La Follette-Underwood wool bill in the house of representatives. The measure was passed by a vote of 206 to 90.

Representative Stevens of St. Paul was the only member of the Minnesota delegation to vote against the wool bill.

Chicago, Aug. 15.—Directors of the National Business league at a meeting held here adopted resolutions deprecating congressional action looking toward any tariff revision until the tariff board has completed its investigation of the different schedules and reported to congress.

Early Railroad Fliers.

When the first passenger railroad ever built was opened in England in 1825 the train traveled from one end of the line to the other, a distance of twelve miles, in two hours. And Wood, one of the best known writers on the subject of railroads at that day, wrote as follows:

"Nothing can do more harm to the adoption of railways than the promulgation of such nonsense as that we shall see locomotives travelling at the rate of twelve miles an hour."

Today, with locomotives traveling at the rate of seventy-five miles an hour, one can look at Wood's warning with a feeling of amusement. In 1829 a locomotive was introduced in this country, and in the following year Peter Cooper experimented with a locomotive on the B. and O. railroad. The flues of the boiler were made from gun barrels. The boiler was about the size of a flour barrel. Cooper related with considerable satisfaction how on the trial trip of this engine he passed a gray horse attached to a wagon.—New York World.

MINNESOTA'S FAIR AND EXPOSITION

An Outline of What the Men Behind the Fair Are Working For.

Secretary J. C. Simpson, the other officers, and the directors of the Minnesota State Agricultural Society are working to make this year's fair greater in every way than any of its predecessors. Some of the objects which those in charge are working unremittingly to attain are:

To make the Minnesota State Fair and Exposition one of the greatest educational institutions of the state.

To make it a place where all classes and conditions of people can come and learn from observation the best that brains and time and money and perseverance have achieved in [illegible] of industry.

To make it a mirror of the [illegible] resources and Minnesota's [illegible] advertising asset.

To make it not only the country's greatest exposition in point of size and attendance, but the greatest in intrinsic educational value.

To make it a place where every one no matter what their walk of life, can find entertainment and instruction.

To make it a veritable short course in agriculture, stock raising, manufacturing and in every industry that is worth while.

To make its 350 acres and its week in September the place and the time that will furnish the greatest interest and entertainment to the greatest number of people in the Northwest.

SPECIAL DAYS AT STATE FAIR

Directors of the Minnesota State Agricultural Society have chosen the following special days for the 1911 Minnesota State Fair and Exposition:

Monday, Sept. 4th, Labor Day.
Tuesday, Sept. 5th, Minneapolis Day.
Wednesday, Sept. 6th, Farmers' Day.
Thursday, Sept. 7th, St. Paul Day.
Friday, Sept. 8th, Pioneers and Soldiers' Day.
Saturday, Sept. 9th, Children's Day.

THE BIGGEST CHEESE.

One of the biggest cheeses ever made is now being constructed for exhibition at the Minnesota State Fair. This mammoth dairy product will weigh between five and six thousand pounds, will be approximately six feet in diameter and will stand about forty-four inches high. It will be made of full cream American cheese of the best quality. As a novelty it will be attractive and is expected to stimulate the cheese making industry in Minnesota and the Northwest.

Friday, Sept. 8, has been designated as Grand Army day at the Minnesota State Fair. Veterans wearing the regular Grand Army badge or regimental reunion badge will be admitted free on that day.

his arm. I knew what this meant and quick as a flash I moved the key of the door from the inside to the outside and locked it, shutting in the lieutenant.

I began at once putting on Jacob's clothes, and he began putting on mine. While he was doing so he told me why he had been so long. He had told the man on guard that he had the key to the cellar where the wine was kept and if he would come with him he might have all he wished to drink. When Jacob got the guard in the cellar he opened a bottle of the wine and told him to drink quick because I was waiting for him to come with wine and he couldn't be too long. The man drank two bottles as fast as he could pour their contents down, then fell on the floor. Jacob locked him in.

I was but a few minutes getting on Jacob's breeches and doublet and, putting on his hat, pulled it down over my face. Then, pretending to be drunk with liquor, I staggered out into the courtyard, and, passing over the spot where two of King Harry's wives were beheaded, I walked past the sentry at the postern, those I met laughing at me for a sot. I was obliged to pass over Tower hill, where stood a scaffold that had for weeks been used for beheading such rebels as I and, tottering down into the frequented streets, lost myself in the crowd.

Luck helped me, for no one saw me to know me, though I saw some I knew. I thought of going home to hide, but knew I would be sought there and pushed on, moving by the outskirts till I reached the east side of the town, when I pushed off through the country toward the coast.

But I did not go directly east, for I wished to see my sweetheart at Linkborn manor and give her a kiss before putting the sea between her and me, besides relieving her mind as to the chance of still keeping my head and body together. It was evening when I came to the manor, and Margaret was walking among the flowers. She was languid and drooping, for she had been told that I would be brought to the block in a few days. When she saw me coming in Jacob's clothes she knew his doublet and gave a cry, thinking he was bringing her news of me. Staggering toward me, she fell fainting in my arms. I kissed her back to life, and when she opened her eyes she was looking into mine.

But there was little time, for I knew they would seek me where she was, and I begged her to get me some food in a napkin while I went to the stable and got out a horse. When one was saddled I rode out, met her with the victuals, bent down and kissed her, then, giving the horse the spurs, galloped away.

And here I am in France, dear mother, ready to put my head in jeopardy again.

An Escape

By SUSAN YOUNG PORTER

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

Our family has occupied the same house in London for several centuries, and the upper stories are crowded with heirlooms and old papers. This continued residence is remarkable, for there has never been a political disturbance in the kingdom in which at least one of my race did not take part. In nosing over an old letter written by one of my quarrelsome ancestors to his mother I found the following story:

Heaven keep you, my dear mother, and may the joy of getting this letter and the news contained in it not be too much for you, seeing that your son is out of reach of harm in this pleasant land of France, a land that I shall always love, since its grapes or, rather, the wine made from their juice is at the bottom of my escape. Had it not been for an idea put in my head by the wine I had in the cellar of the Tower I would now be without a head, like the duke of Monmouth, in whose stupid effort to take the throne from his uncle, King James, I was much mixed.

You know that, being a man of rank, yet not a leader in the rebellion, I was accorded the privileges usually granted to such persons, being lodged with the lieutenant of the Tower himself and as fine a fellow as ever served his sovereign. From the first I felt sure I would keep my head on my shoulders, and if I didn't, I was bound to enjoy what little time was left me. The lieutenant and I were kindred spirits, and many were the cups of October ale we drank together, he always giving the toast, "May your head never roll into a basket, but may you meet the death of a nobleman, falling before a pike or a sword."

I had the wine you sent me down in the cellar under the Tower in which are the lieutenant's quarters, and one day while drinking with my jailer, we getting tired of ale, I told him that I had some fine French wine in the cellar and if he would let me send my man for it I would open a bottle. He gave the permission and the cellar key, and, calling Jacob, I gave him the key and told him to go for a bottle. I also tipped him a knowing look.

It was only a look, and I never dreamed that a look and a key would tell him what I wished to say to him, but couldn't speak for the presence of the lieutenant. But when a man is waiting to have his head lopped off he will cling to any straw of hope, and so did I. Jacob was gone a long while, but in time came to the door and instead of handing [illegible]

INTENTIONAL DUPLICATE EXPOSURE

"CLOSED FOR REPAIRS"

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1911, by Associated Literary Press.

There was a rather curious situation in school district No. 3 in the county of Greenfield. There were six widowers living there and all of them farmers, and three of the six were the school trustees. For several years men teachers had been employed and had given good satisfaction, but now they were to change to the other sex. Widower Thomas, the moderator, had suggested the change, and he hadn't looked the other two in the face as he did it. He had simply said that he thought a schoolma'am would teach the scholars manners as well as geography. Mr. Williams had agreed, but had at the same time said to himself:

"I understand his little game."

And Mr. Burt had agreed with him, but at the same time had said to himself:

"The cute old rascal! But I see through him as if he was made of glass. If anybody around here marries that schoolteacher it will be me."

The three other widowers heard of the plan, and each one said it was a good thing and each one had his whiskers trimmed and his hair dyed and made ready for the struggle. A seminary was written to and a teacher sent on. It was for Widower Thomas to drive across the country in a horse and buggy to the railroad and meet her and bring her on.

Widower Thomas had hopes that the schoolma'am would be about twenty-two and good looking. The arriving teacher turned out to be all he had hoped for. He felt so well acquainted with her before they had driven half a mile that he began:

"Now, Miss White, you are coming among strangers, and I want to post you about them. There's old Jim Williams to begin with. He's one of the trustees and a widower with four children.

"And there's Moses Burt. He's another widower. Claims to be forty-eight years old, but will never see sixty again. Looking around for a young wife and ought to be ashamed of himself. Great hand to laugh at his own jokes, but if you laugh with him he'll sure think you are in love with him and pop the question."

"Then I shall not laugh."

"Then there's Josh Tyler. Mebbe he's only fifty next birthday, as he claims, but he's sopping on the hair dye to beat the band. Five children for a second wife to take care of."

"That's dreadful!"

"Then there is Henry Stevens," continued the moderator. "I can't say that Henry is over forty years old, and his wife only left three children, but you can judge what sort of a man he is when I tell you that he never shed a tear at the funeral. He never even sniffled. Seemed just as unconcerned as if he was hoeing taters. I wouldn't advise no woman to marry a man like that.

"Then comes Levi Schemerhorn. He was to Chicago once, and he'll brag of it to you and try to make out that he is a hero. Don't you let on that you think he's anything great or you'll be a goner."

"No, I won't," answered the girl, "but are there any more?"

"Ahem! One more, Miss White. It's me. I'm a widower with a hundred acre farm and only one child. My tater crop alone last year brought me $500. Rising of forty is my age, and I can run down a calf. Got a melodeon in the house and am willing to buy a red ingrain carpet and lace curtains for the parlor. In case I get married I shall go on a wedding trip to Niagara Falls and not mind the expense."

"And are there no young men in the neighborhood?" asked Miss White.

"Jest one, and he's a hired man who don't amount to shucks—eats with his knife and fork and says that Boston is in New Jersey. If I was you I wouldn't let him get the idea that you was a kindred spirit."

"No, I won't."

Miss White was left at the house of the Widow Harkness, which was to be her first boarding place. Supper was not out of the way when the widowers began to gather, and in the course of half an hour all of them were there. [illegible] fact was apparent that they had come to size the schoolma'am up. Once there no one would go and leave the others behind to get some advantage. The clock had struck midnight when the widow turned them all out in a bunch. There wasn't exactly a fight outside the gate, but the six told each other what they thought of hair dye and old galoots. When they were gone the schoolma'am turned to the widow and asked:

"Don't any of those men want you for a wife?"

"Not if they can get you," was the doleful reply.

Ten minutes of confidential talk settled it. The schoolhouse was close by, and on its door was tacked the notice:

"This place closed for repairs."

At daylight next morning the widow harnessed a horse to her democrat wagon, and within two hours Miss White was landed at the spot where the moderator had found her. When the community learned that she had gone those six old widowers looked at each other and said:

"Durn your buttons, but it was your [illegible] hair dye that driv her away, and you ought to be ashamed of yourself."

The Whistling Jugs of Peru.

The potters of ancient Peru used to manufacture an ingenious musical instrument which may very properly be called a whistling jig. In collections of antiquities it is called a silvador or silvio. Specimens are obtained from the ancient burial places of Peru. One of these consists of two vases, whose bodies are joined one to the other, with a hole or opening between them. The neck of one of these vessels is closed, with the exception of a small opening in which a clay pipe is inserted, leading to the body of the whistle. The closed neck of this double vase is modeled into a representation of a bird's head. When a liquid is poured into the open necked vase the air is compressed in the other, and in escaping through the narrow opening is forced into the whistle, the vibration producing sounds. Many of these sounds represent the notes of birds; one in the collection at the British museum imitates the notes of the robin or some other member of the thrush tribe, peculiar to Peru.—Harper's Weekly.

A Wise Provision.

Did you ever notice when a man smites his thumb with a hammer while putting down a carpet under his wife's supervision how quickly he thrusts the bruised and throbbing member into his mouth? People think it is because the application is soothing. But the movement is purely involuntarily, like winking. The man cannot help it. The fact is that nature knows what a man is apt to say under such circumstances and so has provided him with an automatic stopper. Whenever he hits his thumb hard enough to hurt—and it doesn't take a very hard blow almost to kill a man when he is doing something he doesn't like to do—by a sort of interlocking system his thumb flies into his mouth, and for the critical moment speech is cut off.

An Old Testament Verse.

The twenty-first verse of the seventh chapter of Ezra in the Old Testament contains all the letters of the alphabet. "And I, even I, Artaxerxes the king, do make a decree to all the treasurers which are beyond the river, that whatsoever Ezra, the priest, the scribe of the law of the God of heaven, shall require of you, it be done speedily."

Not the Same Meaning.

Nervous Old Lady (in saloon of steamer)—Oh, steward, where do I sleep? Steward—What is the number of your berth, ma'am? Nervous Old Lady—I don't see what that has to do with it, but if you must know it is third. There were a sister and a brother born before me.

I have arranged a complete and thorough course for you in roastology, bakeology, darnology, sewology, patchology, washology, ironology and general domesticology. Run along now and get on your working harness.—Chicago News.

ROCKEFELLER IN MONTANA

Standard Oil Head Inspects Proposed New St. Paul Line.

Great Falls, Mont., Aug. 15.—William Rockefeller, active head of the Standard Oil corporation, President Earling of the St. Paul railroad and members of the directorate of that road traveled by automobile from Lewiston to this city for the purpose of inspecting the line through which it is proposed to bring the main branch of the St. Paul road to the Puget sound. The party, after meeting a few of the representative men of the city, left in their special train for the West.

"The half seems never to have been told," was a remark of Mr. Rockefeller, when talking about how this section of Montana impressed him. He was extremely enthusiastic about the country and said he was very favorably impressed with the many evidences of wealth, both present and prospective.

CASHIER IS ACCUSED OF EMBEZZLEMENT

Examiners Close State Bank at Cobden, Minn.

Sleepy Eye, Minn., Aug. 15.—Charging Rollin M. West, cashier of the Cobden State bank, with the embezzlement of $9,787.84, State Bank Superintendent Kelsey N. Chase had West arrested.

The act was due to the findings of Deputy Examiners Brandvold and Snyder, who made an examination of the bank's condition Saturday.

The bank was closed for business and is in the hands of Deputy Brandvold.

From the results of the investigation it is said that funds have been systematically taken from the bank for a year.

Mr. West's predicament is said to be due to the fact that he was an extensive dealer in automobiles. It is charged that in his capacity as cashier of the bank he used the funds of the institution to keep up the automobile business and carry the notes which he had accumulated as a result of sales.

West's hearing was held and he waived examination and was bound over to the December grand jury.

West has been cashier of the bank for three years, has a wide acquaintance in this vicinity and has generally been popular.

All of the depositors of the closed bank will receive their deposits in full and the bank will be reopened as soon as the state officials complete their examination and make their final reports.

ROAD REFUSES MEN A RAISE

Southern Pacific Will Make No Concession in Shop Rules.

San Francisco, Aug. 15.—At a conference here between officials of the Harriman lines and a committee representing the Federation of Shop Employes, E. E. Calvin, general manager of the Southern Pacific, informed the committee the railroads could make no concessions in wages or shop rules.

"We have made numerous increases in the last few years in the wages of all our craftsmen," said Calvin. "These increases have averaged 12½ per cent to every shop employe in our service.

"Feeling that what we have done is right we intend to stand upon the position we have taken and we cannot consider any wage increase."

Canadian Pacific Dividends.

Montreal, Aug. 15.—The directors of the Canadian Pacific Railway company, meeting here, declared a dividend of 2 per cent on the preferred stock and 2½ per cent on the common stock for the quarter ended June 30. Gross earnings of the railway and steamship lines for the last financial year were $104,167,808 and net earnings were $36,699,078. After paying all dividends for the year a surplus of $11,873,242 is carried forward.

A man who possessed much land and had many younger brothers was asked why he did not go out hunting as his brothers did.

"Well," said he, "it is because it frequently happens that the guns of younger brothers go off accidentally when pointed at the eldest, but it is seldom that the guns of the eldest behave in a similar manner toward the younger brothers."—French Joke Book.

WILEY READY TO TAKE THE STAND

Pure Food Expert Will Testify In His Own Behalf

INQUIRY NEARING ITS CLOSE

Committee Investigating Affairs In the Agricultural Department Expects to Complete Its Work Before the Adjournment of Congress and May Make a Report to the House This Session.

Washington, Aug. 15.—The house committee investigating affairs in the agricultural department and the facts surrounding the threatened reprimand or removal of Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, chief of the bureau of chemistry, expects to finish its investigation before the adjournment of congress and if possible make a report to the house at this session. Dr. Wiley was ready to take the witness stand, but Chairman Moss put on other witnesses.

Dr. Baldwin, assistant chief of the bureau of chemistry, who was also slated for removal in the case involving the agreement with Dr. H. H. Rusby of New York, completed his testimony and sought to show that the agreement with Dr. Rusby was modeled upon that previously made between Secretary of Agriculture Wilson and members of the Remsen pure food referee board, employed on a similar basis of pay.

Dr. Baldwin declared that portion of his correspondence which would show this to be a fact had been omitted by the personnel board of the agricultural department when that body made up the charges upon which he was recommended for removal.

Miss Carrie M. Davis, stenographer to Dr. Kebler, chief of the drug division of the bureau of chemistry, testified to the severe examination to which she had been subjected by Solicitor McCabe and a special agent in the effort to discover whether Dr. Kebler had relations with drug manufacturing companies.

Questioned for Two Hours.

She said she was questioned in a private room of the department in the presence of Mr. McCabe, W. P. Walsh, a special agent, and a stenographer. In compliance with Mr. McCabe's instructions the door was locked, she said, and she was kept before the inquisition for two hours. Previous to this interview, Miss Davis said, she had been escorted by Mr. Walsh from Mr. McCabe's office to that of Secretary Wilson.

"I have brought Miss Davis in here for you to assure her that no matter what the result of this inquiry her position will not be jeopardized," Walsh said, according to Miss Davis.

"Not in the least, Miss Davis," was Secretary Wilson's reply; "the truth is what we want. You can rest assured you will not be molested."

Dr. W. D. Bigelow testified the personnel committee in charging that an arrangement had been entered into with Dr. Rusby whereby the latter was to work part of the time, but draw an annual salary, suppressed the correspondence showing Dr. Bigelow was proceeding on the precedent set by Secretary Wilson in appointing members of the referee board.

Dr. Bigelow characterized as unjust certain criticisms by Solicitor McCabe.

"His criticisms have been so severe and so unjust that when he thought we had been giving out information he issued orders that no one in the bureau of chemistry should tell anything to United States attorneys who are prosecuting pure food cases," said Dr. Bigelow. "The restriction greatly hampers work at the district laboratories, where United States attorneys often want to talk over a case with the chief of the local laboratory."

AMUSEMENT PARK IS BURNED

Cincinnati, Aug. 15.—Fire thought to have originated from a pan of grease in the kitchen of the clubhouse at Chester park, an amusement resort on the northern boundary of the city, destroyed many amusement buildings and spread rapidly to two lumber yards adjoining. Three hours after the flames were discovered the loss was estimated at $175,000, a lack of water pressure making the task of the firemen difficult.

The bathing beach lockers were next threatened and men and women fled from the water in bathing costumes, got their clothing from the lockers and dressed on the street.

JAIL CELLS ARE DEATH HOLES

So Chicago Assistant Chief Tells Visiting Business Men.

Chicago, Aug. 15.—Designating many of the cells as "death holes" Assistant Chief of Police Schuettler accompanied a committee representing the Chicago Association of Commerce on a tour of inspection through the city's police stations.

Six stations visited were declared to be unsanitary and unfit for use, while several of the new buildings were found to be in good condition.

Ample Apology.

An Irish lawyer once addressed the court as "gentlemen" instead of "your honors." After he had concluded a brother of the bar reminded him of his error. He immediately arose and apologized thus: "May it please the court, in the heat of debate I called yer honors gentlemen. I made a mistake, yer honors." Then he sat down, and if the court was not satisfied it did not disclose the fact.—Case and Comment.

"CLOSED FOR REPAIRS"

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1911, by Associated Literary Press

There was a rather curious situation in school district No. 3 in the county of Greenfield. There were six widowers living there and all of them farmers, and three of the six were the school trustees. For several years men teachers had been employed and had given good satisfaction, but now they were to change to the other sex. Widower Thomas, the moderator, had suggested the change, and he hadn't looked the other two in the face as he did it. He had simply said that he thought a schoolma'am would teach the scholars manners as well as geography. Mr. Williams had agreed, but had at the same time said to himself:

"I understand his little game."

And Mr. Burt had agreed with him, but at the same time had said to himself:

"The cute old rascal! But I see through him as if he was made of glass. If anybody around here marries that schoolteacher it will be me."

The three other widowers heard of the plan, and each one said it was a good thing and each one had his whiskers trimmed and his hair dyed and made ready for the struggle. A seminary was written to and a teacher sent on. It was for Widower Thomas to drive across the country in a horse and buggy to the railroad and meet her and bring her on.

Widower Thomas had hopes that the schoolma'am would be about twenty-two and good looking. The arriving teacher turned out to be all he had hoped for. He felt so well acquainted with her before they had driven half a mile that he began:

"Now, Miss White, you are coming among strangers, and I want to post you about them. There's old Jim Williams to begin with. He's one of the trustees and a widower with four children.

"And there's Moses Burt. He's another widower. Claims to be forty-eight years old, but will never see sixty again. Looking around for a young wife and ought to be ashamed of himself. Great hand to laugh at his own jokes, but if you laugh with him he'll sure think you are in love with him and pop the question."

"Then I shall not laugh."

"Then there's Josh Tyler. Mebbe he's only fifty next birthday, as he claims, but he's sopping on the hair dye to beat the band. Five children for a second wife to take care of."

"That's dreadful!"

"Then there is Henry Stevens," continued the moderator. "I can't say that Henry is over forty years old, and his wife only left three children, but you can judge what sort of a man he is when I tell you that he never shed a tear at the funeral. He never even sniffled. Seemed just as unconcerned as if he was hoeing taters. I wouldn't advise no woman to marry a man like that.

"Then comes Levi Schemerhorn. He was to Chicago once, and he'll brag of it to you and try to make out that he is a hero. Don't you let on that you think he's anything great or you'll be a goner."

"No, I won't," answered the girl, "but are there any more?"

"Ahem! One more, Miss White. It's me. I'm a widower with a hundred acre farm and only one child. My tater crop alone last year brought me $500. Rising of forty is my age, and I can run down a calf. Got a melodeon in the house and am willing to buy a red ingrain carpet and lace curtains for the parlor. In case I get married I shall go on a wedding trip to Niagara Falls and not mind the expense."

"And are there no young men in the neighborhood?" asked Miss White.

"Jest one, and he's a hired man who don't amount to shucks—eats with his knife and fork and says that Boston is in New Jersey. If I was you I wouldn't let him get the idea that you was a kindred spirit."

"No, I won't."

Miss White was left at the house of the Widow Harkness, which was to be her first boarding place. Supper was not yet finished when the widowers began to gather, and in the course of half an hour the whole six were there. [illegible] fact was apparent that they had come to size the schoolma'am up. Once there no one would go and leave the others behind to get some advantage. The clock had struck midnight when the widow turned them all out in a bunch. There wasn't exactly a fight outside the gate, but the six told each other what they thought of hair dye and old galoots. When they were gone the schoolma'am turned to the widow and asked:

"Don't any of those men want you for a wife?"

"Not if they can get you," was the doleful reply.

Ten minutes of confidential talk settled things. The schoolhouse was close by, and on its door was tacked the notice:

"This place closed for repairs."

At daylight next morning the widow harnessed a horse to her democrat wagon, and within two hours Miss White was landed at the spot where the moderator had found her. When the community learned that she had gone those six old widowers looked at each other and said:

"Durn your buttons, but it was your old hair dye that driv her away, and you ought to be ashamed of yourself."

The Whistling Jugs of Peru.

The potters of ancient Peru used to manufacture an ingenious musical instrument which may very properly be called a whistling jig. In collections of antiquities it is called a silvador or silvio. Specimens are obtained from the ancient burial places of Peru. One of these consists of two vases, whose bodies are joined one to the other, with a hole or opening between them. The neck of one of these vessels is closed, with the exception of a small opening in which a clay pipe is inserted, leading to the body of the whistle. The closed neck of this double vase is modeled into a representation of a bird's head. When a liquid is poured into the open necked vase the air is compressed in the other, and in escaping through the narrow opening is forced into the whistle, the vibration producing sounds. Many of these sounds represent the notes of birds; one in the collection at the British museum imitates the notes of the robin or some other member of the thrush tribe, peculiar to Peru.—Harper's Weekly.

A Wise Provision.

Did you ever notice when a man smites his thumb with a hammer while putting down a carpet under his wife's supervision how quickly he thrusts the bruised and throbbing member into his mouth? People think it is because the application is soothing. But the movement is purely involuntarily, like winking. The man cannot help it. The fact is that nature knows what a man is apt to say under such circumstances and so has provided him with an automatic stopper. Whenever he hits his thumb hard enough to hurt—and it doesn't take a very hard blow almost to kill a man when he is doing something he doesn't like to do—by a sort of interlocking system his thumb flies into his mouth, and for the critical moment speech is cut off.

An Old Testament Verse.

The twenty-first verse of the seventh chapter of Ezra in the Old Testament contains all the letters of the alphabet. "And I, even I, Artaxerxes the king, do make a decree to all the treasurers which are beyond the river, that whatsoever Ezra, the priest, the scribe of the law of the God of heaven shall require of you, it be done speedily."

Not the Same Meaning.

Nervous Old Lady (in saloon of steamer)—Oh, steward, where do I sleep? Steward—What is the number of your berth, ma'am? Nervous Old Lady—I don't see what that has to do with it, but if you must know it is third. There were a sister and a brother born before me.

Postgraduate Course.

Pretty Daughter—Now that I have graduated, mamma, don't you think I ought to take a postgraduate course? Practical Mother—Certainly, my dear. I have arranged a complete and thorough course for you in roastology, bakeology, darnology, sewology, patchology, washology, ironology and general domesticology. Run along now and get on your working harness.—Chicago News.

ROCKEFELLER IN MONTANA

Standard Oil Head Inspects Proposed New St. Paul Line.

Great Falls, Mont., Aug. 15.—William Rockefeller, active head of the Standard Oil corporation, President Earling of the St. Paul railroad and members of the directorate of that road traveled by automobile from Lewiston to this city for the purpose of inspecting the line through which it is proposed to bring the main branch of the St. Paul road to the Puget sound. The party, after meeting a few of the representative men of the city, left in their special train for the West.

"The half seems never to have been told," was a remark by Mr. Rockefeller, when talking about how this section of Montana impressed him. He was extremely enthusiastic about the country and said he was very favorably impressed with the many evidences of wealth, both present and prospective.

CASHIER IS ACCUSED OF EMBEZZLEMENT

Examiners Close State Bank at Cobden, Minn.

Sleepy Eye, Minn., Aug. 15.—Charging Rollin M. West, cashier of the Cobden State bank, with the embezzlement of $9,787.84, State Bank Superintendent Kelsey N. Chase had West arrested.

The act was due to the findings of Deputy Examiners Brandvold and Snyder, who made an examination of the bank's condition Saturday.

The bank was closed for business and is in the hands of Deputy Brandvold.

From the results of the investigation it is said that funds have been systematically taken from the bank for a year.

Mr. West's predicament is said to be due to the fact that he was an extensive dealer in automobiles. It is charged that in his capacity as cashier of the bank he used the funds of the institution to keep up the automobile business and carry the notes which he had accumulated as a result of sales.

West's hearing was held and he waived examination and was bound over to the December grand jury.

West has been cashier of the bank for three years, has a wide acquaintance in this vicinity and has generally been popular.

All of the depositors of the closed bank will receive their deposits in full and the bank will be reopened as soon as the state officials complete their examination and make their final reports.

ROAD REFUSES MEN A RAISE

Southern Pacific Will Make No Concession in Shop Rules.

San Francisco, Aug. 15.—At a conference here between officials of the Harriman lines and a committee representing the Federation of Shop Employes, E. E. Calvin, general manager of the Southern Pacific, informed the committee the railroads could make no concessions in wages or shop rules.

"We have made numerous increases in the last few years in the wages of all our craftsmen," said Calvin. "These increases have averaged 12½ per cent to every shop employe in our service.

"Feeling that what we have done is right we intend to stand upon the position we have taken and we cannot consider any wage increase."

Canadian Pacific Dividends.

Montreal, Aug. 15.—The directors of the Canadian Pacific Railway company, meeting here, declared a dividend of 2 per cent on the preferred stock and 2½ per cent on the common stock for the quarter ended June 30. Gross earnings of the railway and steamship lines for the last financial year were $104,167,808 and net earnings were $36,699,078. After paying all dividends for the year a surplus of $11,873,242 is carried forward.

A man who possessed much land and had many younger brothers was asked why he did not go out hunting as his brothers did.

"Well," said he, "it is because it frequently happens that the guns of younger brothers go off accidentally when pointed at the eldest, but it is seldom that the guns of the eldest behave in a similar manner toward the younger brothers."—French Joke Book.

INQUIRY NEARING ITS CLOSE

Committee Investigating Affairs In the Agricultural Department Expects to Complete Its Work Before the Adjournment of Congress and May Make a Report to the House This Session.

Washington, Aug. 15.—The house committee investigating affairs in the agricultural department and the facts surrounding the threatened reprimand or removal of Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, chief of the bureau of chemistry, expects to finish its investigation before the adjournment of congress and if possible make a report to the house at this session. Dr. Wiley was ready to take the witness stand, but Chairman Moss put on other witnesses.

Dr. Baldwin, assistant chief of the bureau of chemistry, who was also slated for removal in the case involving the agreement with Dr. H. H. Rusby of New York, completed his testimony and sought to show the agreement with Dr. Rusby was modeled upon that previously made between Secretary of Agriculture Wilson and members of the Remsen pure food referee board, employed on a similar basis of pay.

Dr. Baldwin declared that portion of his correspondence which would show this to be a fact had been omitted by the personnel board of the agricultural department when that body made up the charges upon which he was recommended for removal.

Miss Carrie M. Davis, stenographer to Dr. Kebler, chief of the drug division of the bureau of chemistry, testified to the severe examination to which she had been subjected by Solicitor McCabe and a special agent in the effort to discover whether Dr. Kebler had relations with drug manufacturing companies.

Questioned for Two Hours.

She said she was questioned in a private room of the department in the presence of Mr. McCabe, W. P. Walsh, a special agent, and a stenographer. In compliance with Mr. McCabe's instructions the door was locked, she said, and she was kept before the inquisition for two hours. Previous to this interview, Miss Davis said, she had been escorted by Mr. Walsh from Mr. McCabe's office to that of Secretary Wilson.

"I have brought Miss Davis in here for you to assure her that no matter what the result of this inquiry her position will not be jeopardized," Walsh said, according to Miss Davis.

"Not in the least, Miss Davis," was Secretary Wilson's reply; "the truth is what we want. You can rest assured you will not be molested."

Dr. W. D. Bigelow testified the personnel committee in charging that an arrangement had been entered into with Dr. Rusby whereby the latter was to work part of the time, but draw an annual salary, suppressed the correspondence showing Dr. Bigelow was proceeding on the precedent set by Secretary Wilson in appointing members of the referee board.

Dr. Bigelow characterized as unjust certain criticisms by Solicitor McCabe.

"His criticisms have been so severe and so unjust that when he thought we had been giving out information he issued orders that no one in the bureau of chemistry should tell anything to United States attorneys who are prosecuting pure food cases," said Dr. Bigelow. "The restriction greatly hampers work at the district laboratories, where United States attorneys often want to talk over a case with the chief of the local laboratory."

AMUSEMENT PARK IS BURNED

Cincinnati, Aug. 15.—Fire thought to have originated from a pan of grease in the kitchen of the clubhouse at Chester park, an amusement resort on the northern boundary of the city, destroyed many amusement buildings and spread rapidly to two lumber yards adjoining. Three hours after the flames were discovered the loss was estimated at $175,000, a lack of water pressure making the task of the firemen difficult.

The bathing beach lockers were next threatened and men and women fled from the water in bathing costumes, got their clothing from the lockers and dressed on the street.

JAIL CELLS ARE DEATH HOLES

Chicago, Aug. 15.—Designating many of the cells as "death holes" Assistant Chief of Police Schuettler accompanied a committee representing the Chicago Association of Commerce on a tour of inspection through the city's police stations.

Six stations visited were declared to be unsanitary and unfit for use, while several of the new buildings were found to be in good condition.

Ample Apology.

An Irish lawyer once addressed the court as "gentlemen" instead of "your honors." After he had concluded a brother of the bar reminded him of his error. He immediately arose and apologized thus: "May it please the court, in the heat of debate I called yer honors gentlemen. I made a mistake, yer honors." Then he sat down, and if the court was not satisfied it did not disclose the fact.—Case and Comment.

COMMISSION GOVERNMENT

Keokuk, Saves $25,000 In One Year Writes Mayor J. T. Elder. Begins In Debt, Now Clear.

With the recent appointment of a commission of 15 to revise the charter of Bemidji, interest has been renewed in the commission form of government for cities of this size, Aldeman Knute Roe taking an active part in the agitation for an investigation of the plan which appears to have worked such wonders for other towns throughout the country.

Mr. Roe is in touch with many of the mayors of commission form cities and only yesterday received the following from Joshua F. Elder, mayor of Keokuk, Iowa, which town claims the distinction of having been the first city in the country having a population of less than 25,000 to adopt the plan:

Keokuk Saves $25,000

Mr. K. K. Roe,
Bemidji, Minn.

Dear Sir:

I am in receipt of your favor of August 2d.

The Plan has been working here about fifteen months with great success. We have saved for the last calendar year about $25,000; we have been able to establish business principles; have been free from politics, and I thoroughly believe in the benefits from this form of Government.

Will be glad to furnish you any details you may desire.

Yours very truly,
J. F. Elder,
Mayor.

Makes $1,000 Pickup on Dogs.

By way of illustration as to what economics may be accomplished under the commission plan, the Keokuk annual report, a copy which was sent to Mr. Roe, contains the following:

The payment of the various licenses due the city for special privileges, especially dog license, had, at the beginning of 1910, been neglected to a large extent. The present administration has tried to establish a cusfom of paying for all such licenses in advance, and has practically succeeded.

"The dog license is given merely as an example of this success. The amount collected in 1909 was $126.95, while the amount collected in 1910 was $1,323.35."

In his report on the commission plan for his first year in office, Mayor Elder says:

Begins in Debt; Now Clear.

We have divided the city's money into funds, as required by the State law, and this Report shows the Receipts and Expenditures of the city's funds in each account.

We started our term of office ignorant of the circumstances under which we would work. But, aided by your patriotic spirit, we were enabled to carry through as much public improvement as former years, and the City of Keokuk, for the first year in its history, did not borrow money to defray its current expenses.

Indebtedness Wiped Out.

As shown by the financial summary, on April 12th, 1910, the city had a floating indebtedness of over $22,500. On April 1st, 1911, at the end of the fiscal year, it had to its credit over $4,000. The receipt of the city have been practically the same as in former years, and this gain was made by eliminating useless expenditures.

"What Keokuk has done, Bemidji can do," commented Mr. Roe, "and it seems to me that this city would do well to thoroughly investigate the plan with a view to ultimately adopting it, which could be done at any time, as an amendment to the charter."—Bemidji Pioneer.

CHANGES IN GAME LAWS

Laws Passed In 1911 Are Making The Hunters Guess Some.

Every resident hunting chickens or other small game must have a license costing $1, obtained from the county auditor of the county in which that resident resides, provided that this shall not apply to the resident hunting in his own county. This license is issued separate and distinct from the big game license. For hunting big game any resident must procure a license costing $1, obtained from the county auditor of the county in which that resident resides, but such a license is not issued until three days before the season opens, Nov. 10th. The chicken season opens Sept. 7th, and license may be obtained now.

Section 33 of Chapter 93 of the General Laws, 1911, approved April 7th, provides that one deer may be killed while section 2 of Chapter 373 of the General Laws, 1911, approved April 20, limits the number of deer to one. In such a case the law last approved is effective and, therefore, but one deer may be killed, according to a report made by Assistant Attorney General, Clifford, L. Hilton.

Chapter 286 of the General Laws, 1911, approved April 19, is puzzling some hunters. The law provides that pointer or setter dogs may be run on the fields, frequented by game birds, from the fifteenth day of August to the first day of December. And also provides that, "From the fifteenth day of August to the first day of September each year it shall be unlawful to run or train pointer or setter dogs in the said fields or upon the said lands in case any shot gun, rifle or other firearms is in the possession of or available for use by the owner, or person in possession," etc. The question arises, is there a mistake in the law, or was it intended that a hunter should have the privilege of shooting over his dog from Sept. 1st to Sept. 7th, provided he did not shoot chickens, or what was meant by it?

SELLING LIQUOR TO MINORS

The public at large is warned that all cases of selling liquor to minors will be thoroughly investigated, and punishment meted out to the offender according to the state law. The maximum punishment for such an offense is one year in jail, or a $1,000 fine. Chapter 290 of the General Laws, 1911, reads: "Procuring of liquor for minor a gross misdemeanor,—Section 1. Any person who shall give to, procure or purchase intoxicating liquors for any minor person or other person to whom the sale of intoxicating liquors is by law forbidden, shall be guilty of a gross msidemeanor and upon conviction, shall be punished in accordance with the laws of the state."

PENNINGTON COUNTY ESCAPES FROST.

Reports thruout the county to the Press state that there has been no frost as yet. The cold wave, which struck this section Sunday evening, caused considerable anxiety. The coldest the thermometer has registered is 40 degrees. About the only things frost would damage now is corn and late flax. All the wheat and oats are cut, and a great share of the barley and flax. Grain stacking is being done at a rapid rate, and it will be but a few days until threshing is in full blast. Indications are that wheat and oats will be a bumper yield, much wheat going 40 bushels and oats 70 bushels per acre.

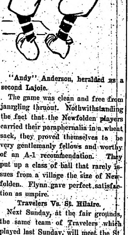
TRAVELERS 9 NEWFOLDEN 7

Most Entertaining Game Of Season Played On Local Grounds Sunday.

Last Sunday afternoon, at the fair grounds, the Thief River Traveling Men defeated Newfolden, 9 to 7, in one of the most interesting games played on the local grounds this year. From a scientific standpoint the game could have been better, but for downright fun and heart-throbbing suspenses, the game had everything backed off the boards that ever appeared in Thief River. Both teams were exceedingly generous, and each succeeded in handling the other several useful presents. But owing to the superior ability of the Travelers to hit when hits meant runs, the Wheat Carriers of the north were destined for defeat from the very beginning.

At the end of the sixth inning the score stood 3 to 2 in favor of the locals. The first of the seventh, while Hess and his support were taking a nap, the visitors amassed 5 runs before their worthy opponents awoke, making the score 7 to 3. After their short rest the Travelers came back with a vengeance, and during the seventh and eighth innings got 6 good ones, making the score 9 to 7 and winning the game.

The most spectacular plays were pulled off by "Andy" Anderson in the vicinity of second base. He almost invariably caught the ball when thrown to him at second base, and hardly ever let a grounder get away from him. His work at the bat was fine, too. That smile of his seemed to have the pitcher hypnotized. Mr. Andersons pose follows as seen by the Press cartoonist.



"Andy" Anderson, heralded as a second Lajoie.

The game was clean and free from janrgling thruout. Nothwithstanding the fact that the Newfolden players carried their paraphernalia in a wheat sack, they proved themselves to be very gentlemanly fellows and worthy of an A-1 recommendation. They put up a class of ball that rarely issues from a village the size of Newfolden. Flynn gave perfect satisfaction as umpire.

Travelers Vs. St. Hilaire.

Next Sunday, at the fair grounds, the same team of Travelers which played last Sunday, will meet the St. Hilaire baseball team. It only costs a quarter of a dollar to see this game, but it is safe to say that anyone who does see it will, after the game, importune manager Bakke to accept an additional quarter, on account of the high class entertainment that was afforded.

Lattimore At Lyceum Sunday.

Prof. T. E. Lattimer, teacher of Economics at the University of Illinois, will give a speech next Sunday evening at the Lyceum Theatre. While he is a young man yet he comes highly recommended as a lecturer and will be well worth hearing.

SCHOOL OPENS SEPTEMBER 5TH.

Pupils Requested To Enroll First Of Term. Short Course Of Five Months.

School will open on Tuesday, September 5th for the usual school year of nine months, divided into a fall term of four months, a winter term of three, and a spring term of two. The holiday term will consist of the customary two weeks at Christmas and a week at Easter.

All pupils are requested to bring their promotion cards and enroll the first of the term. No assurance can be given any who fail to enroll, at this time that they can enter the grade to which they were promoted at the close of school last May. Particularly is this true in the high school, where a strict compliance with the requirements of the state high school board will obtain. "Making up" work never produces good results and it will be reduced to a minimum in the high school hereafter. If the high school student cannot enroll the first of the term, it were better for him and other pupils that he wait and enter at the beginning of the second semester.

A short course of five months will be inaugurated October 30th for those who can attend only during the winter months. This will be open to all students over sixteen not otherwise enrolled in school, regardless of their preparation or standings. Bulletins describing the work offered in this short course and giving all particulars in regard to same will be issued in September.

For the information of recent arrivals in the city it might be stated that grade children under the 7th will enroll at the school nearest their homes. 7th and 8th grade pupils will attend the Washington, on the second floor. Books are furnished free, but children must provide themselves with pencils, pens, tablets and drinking cups, as no common drinking cups are permitted in any room.

Parents are respectfully urged to make school the supreme business of the children for the next nine months, and the hearty co-operation of all interested in the welfare of the boys and girls is cordially invited, in the hope that the work of the ensuing year may be the most successful and satisfactory in the history of the schools.

J. H. HAY,
Superintendent.

PRESS ACCIDENT

If pages 2 and 7 of this paper are somewhat disfigured, it is due to the fact that the cut of Mr. Brown took a notion to ramble across the bage while the paper was being printed.

Such accidents are at times unavoidable and this week we are forced to mail three or four hundred coppies with the afore mentioned pages somewhat mutilated.

If you should happen to receive one of the abovementioned copies the best we can do is to ask you to overlook the same. We are doing our best to give the public a clean, newsy sheet, but at times we must take refuge behind the old adage of, "Accidents will happen."

DULUTH TRADE BOOSTERS HERE

Came One Hundred Strong And Made Happy Impression On Citizens.

Eighty Duluth men with a twenty-piece band spent half an hour in our city Wednesday forenoon, making us sit up and take notice that Duluth is on the map and is very much alive and anxious to encourage more business from this point for the Zenith City.

They arrived on a special Soo line train, made up of seven coaches, four sleepers a buffet car, a smoker and a baggage car. The delegates immediately formed with the band in the lead, and, striking up a lively march, set off up town, parading the main business streets and finally halting at the First National Bank corner, gave the business men their opportunity to mingle with our business men in felicitious business communion for about 20 minutes, during which acquaintances were made or renewed, Duluth advertising literature distributed and cards, pencils and ohter little advertising means handed out with kindly word and sympathetic smile.

Each delegate was labeled with his own name, the name of his firm, and the words, "Duluth your natural market." In his hand was a cane with a banner attached inscribed "Duluth." On either side of one of the front coaches of the train was a long white banner inscribed with red letters, "Duluth Trade Excursion."

They came upon us in the routine of our business like an angel visitation, completely dispelling the monotony of a day, and were off with their iron horse a-tooting a gladsome goodbye ere we knew it.

BOND ELECTION TO-DAY.

To-day is the voter's opportunity to say if he favors or not a $40,000 bond issue against the City-Water and Light Department for the building of an auxiliary steam plant. It is to be hoped that the voting will be general so that the result may represent the true sentiment on the question. In this land majorities rule, but it should be of the entire voting population. Every man to his duty!

GRYGLA JUNKET A REALITY

Immense Ditches and Roads Being Constrncted. Country Fertile As Shown By Abundant Yields.

One of the most interesting trips of modern times, in modern methods was indulged in from Thief River Falls to the drainage district 55 miles northeast of that city on Saturday and Sunday last. The travel was by means of six automobiles chaufferured by some of the gallants from Warren and Thief River Falls.

The trip was made via Germantown, Grygla, and Carmel, to a point where the Northwestern Drainage Company's farthermost dredge was throwing dirt out of Judicial Ditch No. 11 about 55 miles miles northeast of this city.

The Party.

The parties that went on this trip were: Senator Elwell of Minneapolis The Great Apostle of the Good Road Movement and a member of the present Legislature; L. P. Green, Advertising Agent of the Soo Road; L. J. Boughner, City Editor of the Minneapolis Tribune; Judge A. Grindeland of Warren, known through the entire northwestern part of the State as the Father of the drainage movement; and William J. Brown, also of Warren and of whom it was said that he was the uncle; and last but not least of the active spirits that have moved in bringing about great strides of progress, was that of the noble son, A. M. Arpin, who by his untiring efforts has made possible the building of almost every system under his charge to the entire satisfaction of the officials and the people of the surrounding country, and best of all has had the work completed on contract time; engineers in charge of the system, W. R. Hoag and O. L. Hamry. Others of the party who were there, merely as interested spectators were the Hon. L. C. Simons of St. Paul, Dr. G. S. Wattam, Ed. Lundgren, C. P. Lundquist, and John P. Mattson of Warren, Matt Barzen, the jovial miller of Thief River Falls, ever ready with his witty "Dutch". The other parties from Thief River Falls accompanying were Prof. Hay, Atty. E. M. Stanton, Register of Deeds, E. L. Quist, C. L. Hanson, K. A. Sundahl, A. N. Lundgren, H. E. Mussey and M. W. Eastman.

Enjoyed The Trip.

From the very first it was apparent that the entire bunch was out, not only to learn of the great achievements of the drainage work and posibilities of the country stretching out before them, but they were also out to have a good time, and it certainly was their own fault if any returned without having realized the latter aim as the weather was ideal and the roads in fairly good condition, and all the farmers along the road seemed anxious to make the trip most enjoyable.

What They Saw.

Traveling east from Thief River Falls on a direct line for thirteen miles, they saw on either side of the road well improved farms, and either golden wheat fields or stubble dotted with shocks so close that they seemed almost like a dream; thence north on a direct line for seven miles, passing through the prosperous little Village of Germantown with its large Co-operative store, and Co-operative Creamery, hotel, blacksmithshop, livery barn, etc., showing signs of the stable and prosperous condition of the country. Turning east and going along Marshall County Ditch No. 20 on one of the highest and best roads in our state to-day for a distance of just 13 miles, on either hand almost as far as the eye could see the fertile prairie dotted here and there with a farm home and a few stacks of grain or a field covered with shocks reminded one of the immense fertility of the soil. The most conspicuous sight seen on this part of the drive was a corn field covering about 16 acres, owned by John Lamporter in the town of Moylan, and standing more than a foot above a man's head. The question has often been raised, "Can corn be matured in this country?" This field answered the question. It did not only give promise of becoming one but the greater part was ripe already, and by the end of another ten days the entire field will be ready to go in the bin. The next was a run to the north of six miles when there loomed up before the eyes of the spectator the prosperous Village of Grygla.

Grygla.

To most of the party Grygla was either a dot on the map or a small country postoffice and country store. This they soon learned was a mistaken idea. Grygla has a large Co-operative general merchandise store, a first class blacksmith shop, hotel, creamery, restaurant, land office, bank, drug store, postoffice, newspaper, and an extensive ontlay of offices, barns, and supply houses for the Northwestern Drainage Company, and the progressive spirit is now erecting a fine school house for the younger element.

IS KEYNOTE TO SUCCESS

Business College Assuming Important Place Among Educational Institutions.

The business college is rapidly assuming an important place among the educational institutions of the country, and even men and women who have finished courses in regular schools and colleges feel the need of business training.

The business schools of today afford a broadening education as well as practical experience, before the student is sent out into the world to engage in actual business.

Even professional men of today need business training, for every profession has its business side, and in the past many brilliant men have failed in the profession for which they were best fitted because they lacked business and executive ability. Had they had this training they would have been successful and their business training would have opened new possibilities in the professions.

Physicians, lawyers, scientists and others today realize the benefits of business training. They have found that it secures to them the benefits of their labors. Thousands of inventors are poor while their patents have made millions for men with a keener knowledge of business principles.

Business men recognize the value of the training also, and in selecting their help they usually choose the man or women who has been taught methodically. Their systems of business may be new to the graduate, but the graduate has learned the value of system and can soon get accustomed to new ways, for all modern business ways are methodical.

Business men often give their time to lecture at the business colleges and give the students the benefit of their experience. Other schools have seen the advances made by the strictly business colleges and have seen the need of such instruction, and have supplied such training in conjunction with regular courses.

As methods of business change, the business schools get acquainted with them and keep pace. Their graduates are in all branches of business, and they are informed of the new things. Once informed, they learn them thoroughly and employ teachers to instruct the students. The schools are able to keep pace with this advance easily, while the worker would be put to a great expense and loss of time sholud he desire to learn any branch not used by the concern where he is employed.

Many of the most successful men who are in business for themselves received their first training in the business school and used that for the foundation for advancement.

Good Groundwork for Civil Service.

The United States government has also recognized business colleges, and those taking examinations for civil service positions after a business college course find themselves better prepared than those who have obtained merely a smattering of a business education here and there.

Actual employment in a business house, before one takes a business course, limits the possibilities for advancement. The worker is likely to learn but one simple branch of the business, and is not likely to be prepared to take up any other. The graduated student is usually able to go into any of the business departments.

The business schools now teach salesmanship, bookkeeping, stenography banking, business law and other special branches, such as real estate and brokerage.

The economical phase is an important one in the business college field, just as it is in every business. A business education at a school is much cheaper, covers a wider range and is quicker than the school of experience. The school of experience has taken the best years of a man's life before it has fitted him to better his condition. The modern business school is not based on theories, and its teaching is entirely the result of other men's practical work in the more advanced school of experience, enhanced by a sound business education.

TO HUNTERS AND CAMPERS.

The open season on prairie chickens and other game is approaching. With it is approaching the time when prairie, brush, and forest will become dry; the time when prairie, brush, and forest fires start quickly and easily. Every one knows the damage these fires are liable to cause and the cost of fighting them to the people.

In dry season, small, aparently insignificant fires quickly become great.

A small fire with its possiblities of great danger, is often set by a carelessly thrown match still hot enough to ignite the wisp of grass or bunch of dry leaves into which it may fall. The same is true of an unextinguished cigar or hot pipe ashes.

Every smoker is urged to be absolutely sure that his matches, cigars, or pipe ashes are cold before being cast aside. They should be rubbed or pinched out.

Camp fires carelessly made amid rubbish, and left unextinguished have been the origin of many great fires. Before building a camp fire, all inflamable material should be cleared away to a considerable distance and the fire laid on non-combustible mineral soil. It should then be carefully extinguished before it is left.

To start a prairie, brush or forest fire carelessly or purposely, constitutes a misdeamanor which is punishable under the law by fine or imprisonment. Furthermore any person responsible for a fire may be held liable in civil action by injured parties for any damage the fire may do.

For their own good, and safety of the country, it is necessary that all hunters and campers, and all others, observe the greatest care in the matters referred to above.

MAYOR'S INNOVATION

Kansas City possesses in Darius A. Brown a mayor who has brought to the office a high sense of public duty and a keen desire to work for the best interests of the city.

One of the most noteworthy features of Mayor Brown's term has been the creation of a mayor's cabinet, which meets weekly with the mayor to discuss municipal affairs. The cabnit is composed of the heads of the various departments of the city government and representatives of the industrial, commercial and civic associations of the city. The conception of such a body was original with Mayor Brown.

The benefit that was certain to accrue to the city if each department were concerned with its neighbor and all striving harmoniously to give the city a good, clean administration, was patent. In the hope of bringing about such a desirable condition, the mayor requested the heads of the depatrments to meet with him in his office each Monday morning of the week. The result obtained from these meetings surpassed the highest expectations of the mayor. Many valuable suggestions were received, much beneficial information was solicited and an atmosphere of friendly endeavor floated through the offices of the city hall. The departments had ceased to be a loose confederation and had become a solid union.

Another valuable result of these weekly conferences, and one that Mayor Brown had in mind when he initiated the movement, was that it served to enlighten the mayor in regard to the actual workings of each department under him and gave him an intimate knowledge of the conditions peculiar to each branch of the administration.

The success that attended this innovation of the mayor's encouraged him to widen its sphere of action and broaden its field of endeavor. To this end he invited a representative of all the industrial, commercial and civic clubs and associations of Kansas City to attend and take part in the weekly meetings at his office. The different bodies responded cordially to the mayor's invitations, and at times there are as many as forty-five men in attendance at the meetings.

The purpose of having the active citizens participate in these conferences was twofold. First, served to stimulate civic interest in men usually prone to neglect such questions, and, secondly, it gave to the mayor and the heads of the various departments the advice of alert, intelligent business men in the conduct of their office.

The citizens at these gatherings are

A Political Genius.

Congressmen sometimes adopt queer expedients to gain the good will of their constituents. Years ago a member from a western state was afraid that his first term would be his last, as he had not managed to make himself a power in congress. While he was debating what he should do a friend said, "You live near the center of the United States, don't you?" "Yes." "Then why don't you introduce a bill to have the capital moved to the principal town in your district?" The congressman introduced the bill, and the people of his district at once concluded he was a great man and sent him back for another term. He reintroduced the bill in the next congress, and, although it was promptly pigeonholed in committee, his constituents gave him a third term as a reward for his genius.

The fear of being found out is often mistaken for the prickings of conscience.

COTTON MEASURE PASSES HOUSE

Rule Limits Debate to Four Hours and Bars Amendments.

MINORITY ENTERS PROTEST

Progressive and Regular Republicans Join in Denouncing the Demands for "Gag Rule" Methods—Mr. Underwood Declares Republican Leaders Had Sanctioned the Rule Before It Was Brought In.

Washington, Aug. 22.—After a perfunctory debate of four hours the house concurred, 180 to 107, in the senate amendments to the Underwood cotton tariff revision bill and sent that measure to President Taft.

The bill cut the cotton tariff on an average of 21 per cent ad valorem and bore schedules, tacked on by the senate, reducing duties on iron and steel, cotton machinery and chemicals and providing reciprocal free admission of bituminous coal across the Canadian border.

The vote was along strict party lines except that eight Republican progressives joined the Democrats. Most of the progressives who have been voting with the majority of tariff measures stood with the regulars, asserting that the senate amendments had not been considered by a committee of either house.

The amended bill was considered under a rule limiting debate to four hours and barring amendments. This rule, reported after unanimous consent had been refused for a resolution to the same effect, was the target for forensic broadsides from Republicans, progressives and regulars.

Accused of Using Gag Rule.

The Democrats were accused of returning to "gag rule," which they vigorously denounced when in the minority. Democratic Leader Underwood replied to these attacks by declaring that he had made the arrangement after a conference with Republican Leader Mann and Representative Payne, ranking Republican member of the ways and means committee, who had said that it would be entirely satisfactory.

The debate was not confined to the cotton bill or its amendments. The tariff generally and various other things were touched upon. Messrs. Underwood and Payne closed the discussion.

Mr. Underwood said the amended bill was not just what the majority wanted, but it was the best that could be secured under the circumstances. He said it was absurd to ask that representatives of the people "wait on the clerks and hirelings of the president (the tariff board) before enacting tariff legislation."

The Republican progressives voting for the bill were: Davis, Lindbergh, Volstead and Steenerson of Minnesota; Hanna and Helgeson of North Dakota; Norris of Nebraska and Lafferty of Oregon.

MEN TAKING STRIKE VOTE

Illinois Central Shop Employes May Cease Work.

Paducah, Ky., Aug. 22.—Two-thirds of the members of the Federation of Railway Employes of the Illinois Central and allied systems have voted to date on the proposition to strike, according to an officer of the federation, who declared here that the vote stands in favor of the strike. This vote follows the refusal of the railroads to treat with the federation's representatives on the contention that they are concerned only with the separate contracts with individual unions.

Friday of this week is the date for the announcement of the result of the voting, which, it is said, is being participated in by the 18,000 members of the federation.

CARROLL SAYS EDITOR LIES

Iowa Governor Makes Bitter Answer to Charges.

Des Moines, Aug. 22.—Terming them a mass of lies Governor Carroll came back with a bitter answer to the charges which have been made and reiterated in the last several months by Editor Dave Brant of the Iowa City Republican. The governor declares that Editor Brant's latest attack, which was made Saturday in an editorial, contains scarcely a word of truth.

In the article of last Saturday Mr. Brant charges that Leonard W. Haley, who has been making charges against Warden J. C. Sanders and who is a prisoner in the penitentiary at Fort Madison, has been kept in solitary confinement for weeks.

Jump in Lake Together.

Columbia City, Ind., Aug. 22.—Clasping hands and jumping from a boat Earl Deeter and his wife ended their lives in New lake. A man on shore, who saw the two row out on the lake and leap overboard, summoned help and the bodies were recovered. Deeter was twenty-six years old and his wife twenty-seven. Both were of prosperous families, but they had been in ill health and despondent.

ONLY THREE KILLED IN SEVERE STORM

Property Damage in North Dakota Is Very Heavy.

Grand Forks, N D. Aug. 22.—One dead at Sherwood, one dead at Souris and one at McCluskey, coupled with the serious injury of twelve persons and the minor injury of eighteen more, constitute the toll taken by a series of tornadoes that invaded Northern Bottineau and Northern Renville counties Sunday.

One tornado started at Sherwood, passed in a westerly direction, skirting the international boundary line almost the entire distance and at some points lapping over into Canada. The other occurred at McCluskey.

The dead are: John Patterson, Jr., aged sixteen, Souris; Margaret Carlson, aged three, daughter of Elmer Carlson, Sherwood; Olaf Lee, farmer, McCluskey.

The property loss is exceptionally heavy, scores of barns and residences throughout the affected district being demolished and in many instances being carried hundreds of feet from their former sites, only to be dashed to the ground and smashed into kindling wood.

The territory covered is over fifty miles in length and the width varies from two to five miles.

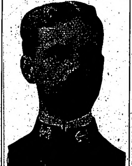
Chief of Naval Bureau Perfects Aero Gun for Warships.



FLEET TO USE AERO GUN

New Weapon Will Have Test in September Maneuvers.

Washington, Aug. 22.—When the fleet begins its spectacular mimic naval battle off the Virginia capes next month to repel combined surface, submarine and overhead attack it will use a new navy aeroplane gun, invented by the navy bureau of ordnance.

Plans for the new gun have been worked out by Rear Admiral Nathan C. Twining, chief of the bureau, and his assistants. It will be the first of this type of armament ever carried by an American war vessel.

The gun is a one pounder, with a special mount that permits it to be elevated at any angle and a sighting apparatus that permits range finding and accurate sighting when firing overhead.

SAY COMPANIES ARE NOT KEEPING FAITH

English Railroad Employes May Renew Strike.

London, Aug. 22.—Threatening a general renewal of the railway strike at once unless the companies put into effect the promises they made in the agreement Saturday, W. H. Thomas, M. P., second secretary of the Railway Employes' federation, announced that the companies were not keeping faith. Thomas said that some of the strikers were discriminated against.

It is believed that pressure by the government will force the companies to carry out the letter and spirit of their agreement.

The employes, confident as to the result of their short strike, in which they completely tied up the country's traffic, are said to be ready to obey a call for a second walkout.

It is expected the sweeping victories of the unions will encourage men in other industries to make farreaching demands. Everywhere the men are filled with confidence. In London the street car men are secretly voting on a strike proposal.

Thousands of railway employes have returned to work. More than 40,000 in the London district reported for work and within forty-eight hours the companies expect to have cleaned up the freight and passenger congestion of last week.

SOLDIERS FIGHTING FLAMES

Forest Fires Raging in Vicinity of Yellowstone Park.

Livingston, Mont., Aug. 22.—A forest fire broke out on Pole creek, near Jardine, on the edge of Yellowstone park. The fire is spreading rapidly and has already done a large amount of damage. The section where the flames are raging is in a wilderness and information is meager.

Several hundreds of acres of pine have already been destroyed, according to records.

A small forest fire in Yellowstone park was also reported and soldiers from Fort Yellowstone are fighting the flames.

Aviation Meet Short $55,000.

Chicago, Aug. 22.—When the nine days' international aviation meet closed the management estimated that 3,000,000 people witnessed the flights The executive committee has not figured exactly how much the gate receipts ran behind expenses, but a rough estimate placed the total receipts at $140,000. The expenses are estimated at $195,000, which means that the meet has not come within $55,000 of paying expenses.

Official Paper of The City.

FRIDAY, AUG. 25 1911.

The man who will not save as he goes keeps his nose to the grindstone.

There is a disposition to take too seriously the crop reports issued by the government and private agencies. The investigation a few years ago of the methods of collecting the cotton reports showed that 85,000 individual estimates have to be compiled and digested.

Considering the space of time between now and election time there is considerable talk of candidates. A sensible discussion of city affairs and city administration during the campaign season is a good thing and we hope that a great deal of interest will be taken. It should, however, be kept in mind that to fly off the handle and call other people names that you would blush to see in print can hardly be called sensible discussion.

ANNUAL WORRY OVER CROPS.

Wall street has had its eyes very closely on the ticker and its ear tightly glued to the telephone the past week, at this critical period for the great cotton and cereal crops. The record breaking heat and cloudless skies led Western and Southern bankers to look more closely to note collections, and the merchant to cancel orders.

This scheme of Mayor Brown's in giving the citizens of Kansas City an actual voice in the conduct of the city's affairs, has naturally made them more alive to the public welfare and more vitally interested in forwarding the advancement of the city. It is regarded as one of the best civic innovations of recent years, and it is certain to win the compliment of imitation in all the cities of the country before many years.

Game Warden William Munch will give you a hat marker free of all cost, cleverly worded, which will mean the return of your hat should some one appropriate it by mistake, and will also give you $10 cash for evidence that will lead to the conviction of any person who kills prairie chicken or ducks out of season.

Just remember this, and you will assist materially in protecting the wild game and perpetuate the hunting which is one of the great attractions of this section of the country.—Crookston Daily Times.

The Duluth Herald in an editorial on "Flin-flamming the People" seems to intimate that the insurgents were largely to blame for the failure of the Direct election of Senators bill, because Senator Bristow, an insurgent proposed the amendment to which the House conferers afterwards would not agree, thereby sidetracking the entire measure. It were better to put the blame where it belongs, i. e., upon those who propose a departure from the manner of electing other congressional members. That was plainly done with some ulterior motive and there must rest the blame. We are of the opinion that the national government should have control of these elections. It seems logical and proper.

"THE SMART SET."

It is made up of those born to money, those whom money married to title and those whose money enabled them to climb up, in a society sense, upon the sacrifice of every humane sentiment which the Almighty implants in man or woman.

It has no morals. Its men trade wives when the law allows. Its women abhor motherhood. Its children know not their own parents. It sells its girls. It condemns its aged.

It holds no worthy aims. It accomplishes no sensible purpose. Love, generosity, helpfulness it knows not, but it is ruled by envy, jealousy, covetousness, selfishness, and its ambition and effect are to promote these evil traits in others.

It believes not in God, but Mammon. It has its kept ministers and churches for the display of robes and millinery, the airing of its pomp and vanity. Its idol is the disguised Moloch of the ancient Ammonites and its distination is hell on earth.

It produces little save drones, drunkards and degenerates.

It means nothing that lasts, that helps, or that satisfies.

And it is smart only in that it makes you and me feather its nest and supply its maw.—Daily News.

THE HOT WAVE AND THE WORKERS.

The burning weather of the past week, generally admitted to be the most severe recorded by our Weather Bureau, has tested one's good nature to the limit.

The worse rigors of this temperature have hardly been known here. It is in the great cities, where streets become canyons, where a stream of human exhalations attack one's most vital fiber, where the rays of the sun are reflected from unbroken surfaces of pavement and confined in a fiery furnace by high buildings, that these conditions become a vital menace to health.

Unfortunately modern civilization makes city dwelling imperative for many of us, and a host of people suffer from ill ventilated tenements and factories.

AUGUST.

In many ways August is the crowning month of the year. It is a period of fruitions. And yet there is not that approach of the cooler weather of September that brings haunting reminders of the decline of the year. August is the high tide of nature's life, the full rounded consummation of her toils and her joys, and as yet there is no hint of the inevitable ebb.

To most people August is an unpopular section of the revolving year. The sun has gone a considerable distance southward, but little relief has as yet come to the heat. There are days of intense humidity when an air surfeited with abnormal moisture lays its oppressive and clammy hand on human physique.

Most nature lovers would perhaps say that June is the high tide of the year, that glorious period of nature's adolescence, when all her greenery is untainted by the tan of the sun and the soil of flying dust, when all is hope and expectation.

And yet, just as there are few people of middle life who would care to live all through the struggles and questionings of their youth, even though that youth was gay with song and dance, so June at its best is a time of immaturity. The seed has been cast into the ground, but it has been left to the chances and changes of a fate beyond the power and ken of man. The future is a fog bank, and no one knows whether his toil is to bring a prize or a blank.

In August the harvest of the products of the earth fills the air with sweet odors, the skimmer of the glossy corn is the visible sign of the wealth of nutriment which a loving nature has placed out of sight in the black soil. The golden apples are reddening in the tree tops, and the air is harmonious with the hum of insect voices.

The work of the fields has so far progressed that the toiler at the worst has faced his losses and has little fear of futre decline, and under usual conditions he is sure of ample reward.

September and October have a higher pitched chord of color and sound, and a riper and more abundant harvest. But in the frosts that set aflame the tree tops there is the cold forbidding touch of death.

CANADIAN ANNEXATION

The possibility of annexation of Canada to the United States is figuring largely in the hot electoral campaign over reciprocity, now under way over the line. In view of the intense hostility to that idea invariably manifested by Canadian people, one wonders that anyone can discuss it seriously.

On this side of the line there are a good many people favorable to the idea, though the majority would doubtless vote No.

As a test of Canadian sentiment, a writer for the World's Work in 1905 addressed 300 letters to the most prominent men in the dominion. These letters asked the question whether, if such an annexation could be brought about peaceably, without friction with England, Canada being simply merged and becoming one section of our country, just as the East, South, or the Pacific Slope is one section, whether the person addressed would favor it.

Out of these 300 people, only one man wrote favoring annexation, and he failed to sign his name. Most of the rest wrote in opposition.

The Canadians based their objection on such ideas as the following: That their people are more regardful of law than Americans, that we have too many race problems, that wealth is more evenly divided with them, that the trusts are less powerful, and on their personal affection and sentiment for the British flag.

Curiously enough, some of these Canadians seemed more or less seriously to entertaining the idea that the United States might be annexed to Canada. Half in joke, yet with some serious intent, Bennett Rosamond, member of parliament, wrote that at the start Canada might take in one or two states at a time, and as our people become trained to have respect for law, they could take in more until at least the larger part of our states were absorbed.

Just as every American would feel that such a suggestion was absolutely preposterous, so the Canadians cling with equal vehemence to their present political relations.

The recent enormous growth of the Canadian Northwest points to a future for Canada exceeding in prosperity and importance anything ever dreamed for it a decade ago.

DEVELOPMENT LEAGUE ANNOUNCES MEETINGS.

An outline of the work which the Northwestern Development League expects to do is given out from the office of the secretary. The executive committee, composed of representatives from the seven northwestern states, has been called to meet in Spokane Oct. 3d, by President Penwell to approve plans.

The Land Products Show of the League has already been announced to be held in St. Paul December 12, to 23d.

Following this show the League plans to establish permanent exhibits in St. Paul and Chicago, showing the products and giving out information about the states in the league. The officers in connection with the exhibits will send daily or semi-weekly, names of those who visit the state exhibits, to immigration officials of the states, commercial clubs and railroad land departments.

Next June the Northwestern Development Congress, or annual meeting of the League will be held in Seattle. The dates have just been announced by Rufus Wilson, the representative of the league in Seattle, the big meeting occupying five days from June 6, to June 10th.

Several publications are being prepared for the league by the secretary's office which will give uniform information about the seven states in the league and a number of maps showing irrigated districts, dry farming sections, forests, mountains and also public lands and tracts available for settlement. Large quantities of these booklets will be distributed and the inquiries received sent to the states belonging to the league.

Every State Accepts Space.

Seven states and Alaska have accepted the space tendered them at the Northwest Land Show to be held in St. Paul December 12, to 23d, under the auspices of the Northwestern Development League.

A week ago word was sent to the governor of the states advising that space had been bought by Minneapolis, St. Paul and Duluth business men to be apportioned to the states in the League. Every governor has replied that the space would be accepted and filled with products.

Among the most interesting exhibits will be that from Alaska, which will show not only the mineral, fur and fish products, but also demonstrate that Alaska is a good country for gardening and will produce more wheat and barley than Norway and Sweden combined.

SOMETHING TO YOU.

(By Request.)

"Tis nothing to me the beauty said,
With a careless toss of her pretty head;
"The man is weak if he can't refrain,
From the cup you say is frought with pain,"
It was something, in after-years,
Her eyes were drenched with burning tears,
And she watched in lonely grief and dread.
And startled to hear a staggering tread.
"This nothing to me" the mother said,
"I have no fear that my boy will tread,
In the downward path of sin and shame,
And crush my heart and darken his name."
It was something to her when her only son
From the path of right was early won,
And madly cast in the flowing bowl,
A ruined body, a sin wrecked soul.
"Tis nothing to me" the merchant said,
As over his ledger he bent his head,
"I am busy to-day with tare and tret,
I have no time for fume and fret.
"It was something to him when over the wire,
A message came from a funeral pyre;
A drunken conductor had wrecked a train,
And his wife and child were among the slain.
"Tis nothing to me" the voter said,
"The party's loss is my only dread,
Then he gave his vote to the liquor trade,
Though hearts were crushed and drunkards made.
"It was something to him in after life,
His daughter became a drunkards wife,
And her hungry children cried for bread,
And trembled to hear their father's tread.
"It is something for us to idly sleep,
While cohorts of death their vigils keep,
To gather the young and thoughtless in,
And grind in our midst a grist of sin.

expected to bring to the attention of the mayor and the men under him conditions of the city that, in their minds, demand attention. Their work ranges from the report of an unsanitary alley to the suggestion of building a municipal bridge over the Missouri river. Of course, the natural tendency was for each man to call the attention of the officials to some condition with which he was familiar and personally interested, and then to give the meeting the benefit of his advice as to the best manner in which to meet the situation.

The gatherings are informal and in appearance are similar to the meetings of a board of directors of a business house. The mayor presides and directs, more or less, the trend of the discussions.

"I see, Mr. Busyman, that you are seated near the door this morning, and I take it you are anxious to get away early, so we will hear what you have to say first," is typical of the manner in which the mayor directs these gatherings. And Mr. Busyman tells concisely what brought him to the meeting. The conditions are discussed, a solution is devised, if possible, and Busyman leaves the meeting feeling sanguine that the action he desired, or which is best, will be applied to his problem by the officials of the city.

The extra session of congress which adjourns Tuesday has been an exceedingly busy one but has really accomplished little.

It passed the "crime of 1911," Reciprocity with Canada, a measure so replete with injustice and class legislation that it can bring no other result than reprisals by the Northwest farmers on the business of the big manufacturers.

To play consistent with his later action the president should have vetoed it on the same ground that he vetoed the wool bill.

A Statehood resolution was finally passed in such form as to satisfy Taft. Here again it is plain that we could have saved considerable expense had we not had to keep up this semblance of representative government but could have left it all to Taft. Nothing seems to satisfy him save what he originates.

Reapportionment passed both houses of congress and ran the gauntlet of the "big gun." It is now law. Minnesota gets one more congressman to be elected at large. This means more power to the Twin City, quite surely, and we're not proud of the delegation they've already sent there.

This congress also passed a campaign publicity measure, which is good as far as it goes, and was made possible because the people would not stand for any more Lorimerism and succeeded in making this plain to congress. Henceforth congressmen may spend on their election only $5,000; Senators $10,000.

There was some honest effort made to relieve the high cost of living and also give the farmers a chance to compete with their neighbors to the north; but all in vain. Taft was for "rubbing it in" because these farmers had had the audacity to criticise his Winona speech, made in defense of the Payne-Aldrich bill, which he characterized as "the best ever." In this spirit Taft vetoed the wool bill, the farmers' free list, and the cotton bill, all bristling with protection but reducing the same materially.

THOUSANDS OF DOLLARS FOR PRIZE PRODUCTS

HOW THE BIG LAND SHOWS ADVERTISE THE NORTHWEST

The cool weather and abundant rains in the past few weeks assure the Northwest farmers good crops. More than usual returns will be had by many of the more progressive farmers, who will exhibit at the New York and other big land shows. The habit of exhibiting at these big shows is a good one to get—it brings honor and money to the enterprising farmer. In past years the Northwest farmers have won many prizes for the best wheat—oats—potatoes—barley—the finest apples—and prize winning corn; sugar beets, alfalfa and hops are also raised. Every time a Northwest farmer wins a prize at the big land shows more settlers come into the Northwest and many times they move close by the prize winner's farm. This increases the value of his land and brings him good, ambitious neighbors, who also get the prize getting habit.

Take the great new land show—the New York Land Show, which will be held between November 3 and 12, 1911. For the best hard wheat $1,000 in gold is offered to the farmers of the world. There is a big silver cup for potatoes—a $1,000 cup. The Northwest ought to win that potato cup, as well as the wheat prize money. Then there is the Earling cup for the best oats—the James J. Hill cup for the best 100 pounds of wheat—the Busch cup for hops—the Pabst cup for barley. All these are beautiful cups, all worth $1,000, except the Pabst barley cup—that's worth $1,500. Surely the Northwest should win these cups. Where else do they raise such potatoes, wheat, barley, oats, etc.?

$500 for Apples.

President Elliott, of the Northern Pacific Railway, has offered $500 in gold for the finest apples. The apples raised in Montana, Oregon and Washington are easily the best in the world. They bring the highest prices and have the best flavor, color and keeping qualities, as the National Apple Shows have demonstrated.

It is now harvest time, and the farmers of this section should go after these prizes. The Great Northern Railway will help the farmers in their territory win these prizes. No entry fee will be charged at the New York Land Show. The Great Northern Railway will make a special arrangement to handle these exhibits. Write at once to Ed. Leedy, the General Immigration Agent at St. Paul, Minnesota, who will tell you how to pack your exhibits and where to ship them. A $1,000 prize cup or $1,000 in gold is certainly worth trying for. Send a postal to him to-day.

A. E. STILWELL

President American Land and Irrigation Exposition, who gives $1000 Prize Cup for best potatoes

Other Big Land Shows.

If the Northwest farmer will only get busy and get his good stuff together he can exhibit at most all the land shows. The Pittsburg Land Show will be between October 12th and October 28th. The Omaha Land Show will be between October 15 and 28, 1911. Then comes the New York Land Show with $11,000 in prizes; dates—November 3rd to November 12th. After the New York Land Show is the big Chicago Show, starting Saturday, November 18th, and ending December 9th.

The Northwest farmers' own show—the Northwestern Land Products Show, at St. Paul—will probably commence December 12th and continue to December 24th, 1911, and so, you see, a farmer or a community can exhibit at all the shows. Every good exhibit at any one of these shows is going to help bring new settlers to that place.

OUR LOCAL SCHOOLS

Several minor improvements have recently been made on or about the school grounds preparatory to the opening of school on September 5th.

The outbuilding on the Central ground has been moved to the rear of the high school, where it will be used for the iron work of the manual training department. This will give the Central more yard room, something which they have long needed.

The Knox campus has been cleared of all trees, except the elms and oaks. This square of clean lawn and beautiful shade trees is conceded to be a real park, and the prettiest block in the city.

A cement walk is being laid across the high school campus to the Lincoln and Washington. The fountain donated by the class of 1911 will be constructed in the Y of this walk.

Other cement walks will be laid about the Lincoln next season, and ornamental beds of flowers and shrubbery added to the proposed lawn which is to fill the space between the Lincoln and Washington.

The Lincoln grounds have been leveled and put in condition for sowing grass next spring.

The janitors will have all the buildings in ship-shape for the opening of school September 5th.

With the new equipment, broader and more practical courses for the grades and high school, and with a corps of teachers all of whom—new and old—have had experience, the youth of this ciy can have no excuse for not securing a first-class common and high school education.

There are three great divisions in our lives known as Childhood, Youth and Maturity. The Sunday school recognizes these in the Elementary, Secondary and Audult Divisions. The Elementary Division takes in all the pupils from birth to 12 years. The Secondary Division takes in the 'teens (13 to 20 years) and the Audult Division from twenty years up. The great leak at present is in the Secondary Division. 75 per cent out of every hundred who enter the Sunday School drop out in the 'teen age. Why this leak? How stop the leak? These questions and many others will be answered at the County Convention next week. Don't miss it. Parents should come.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul S. Deitrick who will attend the Sunday school convention next Saturday and Sunday, are specialists in their line. They have made addresses, held institutes and studied Sunday school problems in twenty different states and many of our large cities, among them being Chicago, Quincy, Decatur, Cincinnati, Washington, D. C., Spokane, Portland, Seattle, Tacoma, Butte, San Francisco, Billings, Lincoln and Omaha. It will be worth your while to hear them at the county Sunday School Convention.

The County Sunday School Association is an educational institution. It does not start new schools as that is the work of the denominations. It does organize the school after it has been started by the denominaton. It trains and equips workers to run the school by means of leaflets, books, institutes and conventions.

Every Sunday school in the county is entitled to send any number of delegates to the county Sunday school convention. Pick from among your young people those whom you think will make workers, if trained, and delegate them to represent your school. It will pay any school big that will do it.

HOUSE FAILS TO OVERRIDE VETO

Meets Defeat in Effort to Pass Wool and Free List Bills.

SERIES OF DRAMATIC EVENTS

Motion to Pass Measures Over the President's Disapproval Fails to Secure Necessary Votes

Washington, Aug 19.—In a succession of dramatic events the Democratic house of representatives met defeat in its supreme effort to pass the wool bill and free list bills over the president's vetoes and virtually fixed upon adjournment of congress early next week.

The Democratic house majority, with a great demonstration of enthusiasm, marshaled its forces for the great battle to override the president, but went down with flying colors, failing to muster adequate progressive Republican support to pass the tariff legislation over the president's head.

Failure of the attempt of the Democratic house to override the vetoes came during a day filled with stirring incidents. The close of the debate on the motion of Mr. Underwood to pass the wool bill over the veto found Champ Clark, the speaker of the house and an aspirant for the presidency, pleading the cause of his fellow Democrats upon the floor, surrounded by a throng of his colleagues, who cheered him vigorously. The speaker, as he concluded, was given a demonstration that for several minutes delayed the roll call.

On the motion to pass the measure over the wool veto there were 227 affirmative votes, twenty-two of them progressive Republicans, and one independent Republican, while the negative votes were 129. The motion to override the veto on the free list failed of a two-thirds majority also, the vote being 226 to 127.

During the three hours of debate on the wool bill the corridors of the Capitol reverberated time and again with shouts of approval and derision from the floor. Spirited discussions between members were frequent.

AWAIT TARIFF BOARD REPORT

President's Reason for Vetoing Wool Revision Bill.

Washington, Aug. 18.—President Taft carried out his threat to veto the wool tariff bill. In a special message to the house of representatives he characterized the measure a blend of an avowed tariff for revenue and and protection measure with a professed protection bill.

In explanation of his course President Taft said the bill was not in harmony with the platform on which he was elected. Furthermore, he declared that the American people are deeply impressed with the conviction that the interest of the consuming public can be properly guarded only by revising the tariff one schedule at a time and then upon "accurate and scientifically acquired information."

That there is a widespread belief that many of the rates in the wool schedule are too high and in excess of any needed protection for the wool growers and manufacturers is admitted by President Taft and he says he shares this belief.

Asserting that December was the time fixed by both the Republican and Democratic parties in the last congress for the submission of adequate information upon schedule K with a view to its amendments the president says there is no public exigency requiring revision in August without adequate information.

After promising that the tariff board will be ready to report in December the president argues that failure of the present bill should not be regarded, therefore, as taking away the only chance for reduction by this congress.

PEACE TREATIES GO OVER

Senate Takes No Action on Arbitration Agreements.

Washington, Aug. 22.—The treaties of arbitration with Great Britain and France were defended in minority reports filed in the senate in executive session by Senators Cullom, Root and Burton of the senate committee on foreign relations.

When the reports were presented to the senate the question of the discussion of the treaties in public by senators was raised. There was general agreement that public policy would not be violated by such a course, inasmuch as the ban of secrecy had been removed from the documents.

No action on the conventions was taken and they go over for further consideration at the regular session.

Brothers Burned to Death.

St. Louis, Aug. 22.—Two brothers, Anthony and Edwin Braun, were burned to death in a fire which destroyed the home of the former. When the firemen arrived the building was a mass of flames and it was with difficulty they were able to save the wife of Anthony Braun and her children.

Trains Are Again Moving, but It Will Take Several Days to Restore Normal Conditions.

London, Aug. 21.—The railway men throughout the kingdom are returning to work and it is hoped within a few days to have the big transit systems working under normal conditions.

Following the announcement that the railway managers and their employes had agreed to permit a commission to settle their differences came the reassuring news that there was great hope of ending the dockers' strike at Liverpool and that the workers there shortly would resume work.

The railway workers held meetings throughout the country to celebrate what they claimed to be a victory over the railway companies. With the exception of 4,000 men of the Northeastern Railway company, which was not a party to the strike settlement agreement, and 3,000 Manchester men all the stations passed resolutions in favor of a resumption of work. The Northeastern company's employes demand an eight-hour day and a two shilling weekday advance in wages with a minimum weekday wage of 22 shillings, about $5.50.

Although the services on the other lines have not yet been completely restored the men in most cases presented themselves for duty and a start was made toward remedying the dislocation caused by the strike. Some progress was made in clearing the lines of freight trains, but it will be some days before normal conditions are restored.

A meeting of 40,000 trades unionists of London was held at Hyde park. Labor leaders congratulated the railway men on their victory and a resolution which was put from numerous platforms pointed out that for the first time in history the companies had recognized the principle of collective bargaining, thereby conceding what always had been a vital principle of the trade unionists. While not accepting the terms of the agreement between the employers and the men as a final settlement of the latter's demands the resolution concluded that the men had decided to return to work and trust to the companies to give effect to the spirit and letter of the agreement.

LIVERPOOL STRIKE SETTLED

Dockmen Return to Their Work Following Conference.

Liverpool, Aug. 22.—The local dock troubles were settled at conference between the shipowners and representatives of the striking dockmen at the Cunard line offices. The carters and coalheavers will return to work with the dockmen. More than fifty vessels are in the harbor, many of which have been here with their cargoes aboard for ten days. All now will be unloaded. The transatlantic liners will leave port as fast as they can be coaled and provisioned.

A hitch over the men returning to work occurred when the dockers refused to resume their duties until the tramway and electric light employes are reinstated.

This new phase of the trouble, however, is considered only temporary and the dockers are expected shortly to return to work.

PUBLICITY BILL IS A LAW

President Signs Measure Limiting Campaign Expenses.

Washington, Aug. 20.—President Taft has signed the campaign publicity bill, making the measure a law.

The new statute provides for complete publicity of campaign expenditures of candidates for the house and senate before election and limits the amount that each can spend in a single campaign to $5,000 for a candidate for the house and $10,000 for a candidate for the senate.

GRAND ARMY IN SESSION

Receptions and Reunions Opening Features of Encampment.

Rochester, N. Y., Aug. 22.—Receptions, reunions and sessions of affiliated orders meeting here in connection with the forty-fifth annual encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic, marked the opening of national encampment week here.

Dreadnought for Argentine.

Boston, Aug. 22.—The battleship Rivadavia of the Argentine republic will be launched at Quincy next Saturday. The vessel will be christened by Mrs. de Naon, wife of the Argentine minister to the United States. The Rivadavia is of the dreadnought type, closely resembling the Arkansas and Wyoming, now being built for the United States.

Good Money After Bad.

It is a curious fact that many men, level headed enough about other things, seem to lose their wits entirely when they become involved in lawsuits. In one case recently concluded in the German courts a Berlin merchant paid out over $900 to recover the value of a five cent postage stamp. He had written a letter asking for an address and inclosing postage for reply. Failing to get an answer, he sued for the stamp.

The famous Missouri watermelon case was just as trifling and even more disastrous. The seed was planted on one farm, but the vine crept through a crack in the rail fence and the melon grew on the other side. Both farmers claimed it, and instead of perceiving the humor of the situation they went to law. To add to the puzzling features of the question of ownership there was the further complication in that the fence stood on a county line, whereupon a question of the jurisdiction of the courts came up. The farmers bankrupted themselves without obtaining a decision as to the ownership.—Green Bag.

Liquid Dynamite.

The Mexicans have a native brandy called aguardiente, which is a species of liquid dynamite, as palatable as corrosive sublimate and as full of potential deviltry as an egg is of meat. When you find a Mexican gentleman adorned with a belt full of deadly weapons, decorating and deluging his interior with aguardiente it is the part of prudence to retire to a bombproof. There is another tipple, a white innocent looking fluid called mescal, which is distilled from a cactus of the same name, which has in it all the combined energy, activity and homicidal possibilities of a volcano mixed up with the gable end of a mule. In former days the Apache Indians made a crude distillation of the same stimulant, which they called tis-win, and as a preliminary to a raid among ranches and settlements it was a great success from an Indian point of view.—Boston Herald.

The Crocodiles Dived.

The cunning of wild animals in concealing themselves in moments of danger is well known. A party, spending a week on the Nile, were watching eight or ten crocodiles sunning themselves on the surface of a small lagoon. It was determined to trap these monsters, if possible. The water was breast deep, including about two feet or more of heavy mud. Four nets were tied together, so as to make one long enough to reach across the lagoon, and this was weighted on the bottom. This net was drawn with long poles from each shore, and behind the net came a line of men a yard apart, prodding the mud with poles. The scheme looked like an admirable one, but the crocodiles sleepily dived, and that was the last seen of them. The water was dragged backward and forward, but they had burrowed so deeply in the mud that not one could be found.

Obedience is not truly performed by the body of him whose heart is dissatisfied.—Saadi.

The Soil.

The soil is a rich sandy loam, here and there covered with a layer of peat varying in depth from 4 inches to 5 feet. The subsoil is a very strong yellow clay, and has a very fertile composition. Judging by what nature produces upon this ground one would think that the Garden of Eden must have been located between Grygla and Rollis.

The Vegetation.

Nature produces in this section a profuse stand of wild grasses, shrubs and trees, and where it is assisted by the ingenuity of man it produces, to be more specific, oats that has been threshed this fall off from a quarter acre 150 bundles yielding 126 bushels which would make 104 bushels to the acre, wheat has been threshed, that even though somewhat affected with blackrust, yielding 32 bushels to the acre and grading No. 1 Northern, flax, while not yet quite ripe, that gives promise of as high as 20 bushels to the acre, and the timothy and clover crops that have yielded beyond all expectations. One of the finest samples seen on the entire trip was shown by J. W. Clarke of Rollis, showing a first, second and third crop of alfalfa. The first two being matured, and the third about one foot long on the 19th of August; potatoes have been grown having 27 large tubers under one hill and having an aggregate weight of nine pounds; corn measuring nine feet in length and having ripe ears, at the present time, were displayed in numbers; buckwheat standing 5 feet tall and producing over 75 kernels to the vine were on exhibition. One potato that was particularly interesting on account of its youth was planted on the 20th day of June and dug on the 17th of August, making just 58 days in the ground and weighing just 5 ounces, these were just a few of the samples brought to the notice of the travelers on their trip.

The Gatzke Display.

The progressive people of Gatzke and Rollis, when they learned that a trip was being planned to go via Grygla, they immediately got up a hayrack exhibition and what a hay rack it was. It would have graced the State Exhibition or the world's exhibition as we have seen more than once produce at the Minnesota State Fair that could in nowise compare with what was seen on the Gatzke-Rollis Hayrack.

VIEW OF A COMPLETED DITCH WITH ROAD

Floating Dredge.

Just one-half mile below Grygla on the course of Mud River, one of the large floating dredges was at work shoveling earth at the rate of about three cubic yards per minute. This huge monster, propelled by a 100 H. P. Steam Engine, forcing its own way down the stream, making the path for the water to flow in at the same time, appears like a huge live elephant, with the subtlety of thought and the might of a giant, each time it sends its huge trunk down [illegible] up and [illegible] a yard and a half of [illegible] each time that [illegible] to know just where to take its next dipper full with as much accuracy as though brain and nerves had penetrated its system.

The Walking Dredge.

Fifteen miles Northeast of Grygla the party was treated with the opportunity of inspecting the most modern dredge at work to-day, a walking or turtle dredge. This machine is operated, by a 50 H. P. Gasoline Engine and shovels the dirt in a manner very similar to that of the floating dredge, but as the place of work is on dry land, its method of locomotion must necessarily be of an entirely different character. It has on either side and far enough apart to stand astride of a twelve foot ditch, three huge turtle feet. These feet are constructed somewhat like a toboggan sleigh in shape, but very much different in their size and weight, being about ten feet long, and five feet plank, and we presume that it would dredges and seven walking dredges are at work night and day to do this work. How well they are succeeding is certainly a marvel. The ditches are dug to the breadth and depth according to specifications, and completed in one third of the time that such systems were ever completed under the old system of drainage work. One sometimes has an idea that he sees a large ditch that has been dug with spades, but if you compare the work done by these eleven dredges making ditches varying in size from four feet deep with an 8 foot top and 4 foot bottom, to an 18 foot depth with a 60 foot top and 40 foot bottom the work can only be compared to that of the digging of the Panama Canal. In fact it has been calculated that these eleven dredges handle more dirt every 24 hours than is done in the same space of time in the construction of the Panama.

wide, and made of six inch solid oak be about as easy for one of these monster turtles to walk across the ordinary railroad track and ditches as it would be for that feat to be performed by the ordinary mud turtle. Its power is immense, and stumps, stones or trees are thrown out of the way, apparently without any special effort. A yard of dirt or a yard of rock in this huge scoop seemed to be thrown with equal ease.

The Ditches.

Nearly a thousand miles of ditches are either completed or under way of construction in the Thief River Falls territory, no less than four floating

The Roads.

Second only to the ditches are the roads that are being built on the massive grades afforded by the earth removed from the ditch. These roads are leveled down and put in first class shape for travel at a cost of $115 per mile and as the material is strong yellow clay, in most instances, they make a very substantial road-bed. When the entire system is completed and these roads have been given time to settle there is no doubt that this section of Minnesota will have the best system of completed roads of any in the State. The once almost impassable roads between here and Grygla will in the near future

The Story.

The trip was indeed not made without story-tellers. Many a story was told, but we wish to reproduce as nearly as possible just one. A farmer near Rollis claims to have had two acres of oats that were so thick that before cutting it he was obliged to cut three acres of barley on an adjoining field and stack the barley in order to find room enough on which to put the oat shocks and then he was unable to drive between the shocks but had to stay on the edge of the field and gather them up as he went to stack the oats. He did not state what his yield was per acre but we presume it was in the neighborhood of 500 bushels.

THIRTY YEARS TOGETHER.

Thirty years of association-think of it. How the merit of a good thing stands out in that time—or the worthlessness of a bad one. So there's no guesswork in this evidence of Thos. Ariss, Concord, Mich., who writes: "I have used Dr. King's New Discovery for 30 years, and its the best cough and cold cure I ever used." Once it finds entrance in a home you can't pry it out. Many families have used it forty years. It's the most infallible throat and lung medicine on earth. Unequaled for lagrippe, asthma, hay-fever, croup, quinsy or sore lungs. Price 50c, $1.00. Trial bottle free. Guaranteed by all druggists.

ATTACK LIKE TIGERS

In fighting to keep the blood pure the white corpuscles attack disease germs like tigers. But often germs multiply so fast the little fighters are overcome. Then see pimples, boils, eczema, saltrheum and sores multiply and strength and appetite fail. This condition demands Electric Bitters to regulate stomach, liver and kidneys, and to expel poisons from the blood. "They are the best blood purifier," writes C. T. Budhan, of Tracy, Calif., "I have ever found. "They make rich red blood, strong nerves and build up your health. Try them. 50c at all all druggists.

CERTIFICATES OUGHT TO BE FILED

Local Firms Must Comply With New Law. Otherwise Guilty Of Misdemeanor.

Local business men who are transacting a commercial business under an assumed or trade name, or partnership plan, should be interested in act approved April 19, 1911, found in chapter 271 of the general laws of the state.

"No person or persons shall hereafter carry on or conduct or transact a commercial business in this state under any designation, name or style, which does not set forth the full individual name or names of every person interested in such business unless such person or persons shall file in the office of the clerk of the district court of the county or counties, in which said person, or persons, conduct or transact, or intend to conduct or transact such business, a certificate, setting forth the name under which said business is conducted or transacted, or is to be conducted or transacted and the true or real full name, or names, of the person or persons conducting or transacting the same, with the postoffice address or addresses of such person or persons. Said certificate shall be executed and duly acknowledged by one of the persons conducting, or intending to conduct said business."

"If any person or persons conducting a business contrary to the terms of this act shall, prior to the filing of the certificate herein prescribed, commence a civil action in any court of this state on account of any contract made by or transaction had on behalf of said business, the defendant may plead such failure in abatement of the action; on all proceedings had in such action shall thereupon be stayed until the certificate provided for by this act is duly filed, and the defendant in case he prevails in said action, shall also be entitiled to tax five dollars ($5.00) costs in addition to such other statutory costs as are now allowed by law, and in case he does not prevail in said action, shall be entitiled to deduct said five dollars ($5.00) from the judgment otherwise recoverable therein."

Certificates should have been filed within ninety days (90) after the act went into effect. Failure to comply with the act is considered a misdemeanor.

The clerk of court receives a fee of twenty-five (25) cents for each certificate filed.

This act does not apply to corporations, nor to co-partnerships in which one of the individual names of all the members thereof appear in the co-partnership name of designation.

The act was passed especially for the protection of the home merchant, as it eliminates the transient merchant who usually stays but a few days, advertise extensively—and often misleadingly—he thus getting a large volume of businss to which he is not rightly entitled.

On August 29th there were only two business firms that had filed certificates with clerk of the district court, H. E. Ives. They were the Pennington County Abstract Co., and Koehler and Hinricks of St. Paul.

SMALL GAME LICENSES

On August 31st seven small game licenses had been issued to Pennington county sportsmen, preparatory to the opening of the hunting season Sept. 7. No license is required for a resident to hunt in his own county, except for big game, and these are not procurable before November 7th. To date licenses have been issued to the following in the order named: John Myrland, O. A. Westin, Paul Carson, Guy R. Marcoe, Arthur J. Marcoe, John B. Conner and Fay W. Kenyon. In addition to paying $1 for the license, each man gave his age, height, weight, color of hair, color of eyes. descriptive marks and address. DOING BUSINESS ON OWN GROUND

County Officers Removed To Pennington County's Elegant Court House.

Last Wednesday the Court-house "bunch" got especially busy and borrowing a truck removed their furniture, books and general paraphernalia to their new and permanent quarters in the lately completed Pennington County courthouse.

The entire force joined together and for about three hours constituted themselves a dray corps and the tedious work of moving was made easy and enjoyable by the unity of arm.

The county officials are very much pleased with their new quarters and declare that they would sooner do business in this buliding than in many a county building costing ten times as much.

The vaults are ample the working room sufficient and the light excellent and what more could any man want unless he had an ambition to live in a palace at the other fellows expense.

The Press wishes to predict that the people who do business in the Pennington county courthouse twenty years hence will still be doing business at this same stand and that the expense of keepup and heating of this building during the next twenty years will be less than that of any other county in our state.

Under New Management.

Mr. H. Brumund, of Walker, Minn., has leased the Ogahmah Hotel, and is to take possession Sept. 18th. Mr. Brumund intends to remodel and refurnish the hotel thruout, so as to have everything strictly first class. He is known by traveling men all over the state as a strictly up-to-date hotel man; and Thief River Falls should consider itself lucky in getting such a man. If Mr. Brumund is satisfied with business here; he will either buy the Ogahmah, or put up an entirely new modern hotel.

A NEW LAW.

Our last legislature passed a very stringent act against selling or giving away, so called "malt liquors" whether intoxicating or not, which went into effect July 1st and which law-abiding citizens will do well to bear in mind. It reads in part as follows:

Chapter 131, General Laws, 1911:

"An act to prohibit the keeping for sale, selling, giving away or disposing of malt and liquors whether intoxicating or not, except in licensed saloons, and providing punishment therefor."

The punishment for violation of ths law is a fine of not less than five dollars nor more than 100 dollars or by imprisonment in the county jail for not more than ninety days.

COUNTY HAS ABLE OFFICIALS

Examiner Boostrom Finds That New County Has Made Excellent Start.

Assistant public examiner, Charles R. Boostrom, of St. Paul, was here this week to examine the books, records, and general efficiency of the county officers of Pennington County. The new county has been in existence less than a year, so this was the first official visit made by an examiner, who hereafter will call once each year. In addition to this the county auditor and treasurer each send in a monthly report sheet to the office of the chief examiner, A. Fritz, at St. Paul.

On account of the excellent condition of the books, harmony between the various departments, and generally good spirit of all the officers, Mr. Boostrom was enabled to take hold of and carry thru his work of examination much more easily and effectively than he had dared hope would be the case. He said:

"Considering that this is a new county, all of the officers are doing excellently, and I consider them very careful and efficient in their work. So far as I can see affairs are in a very satisfactory and flourishing condition."

This is cerainly a fine send off for a new county, and the people thruout the county will be more than pleased to hear that the officers they selected have made good in such an admirable manner.

Mr. Boostrom is himself known to be an efficient executive. He is the man who built up The Southern Minnesota Normal School to its present proportions, and was for many years its president. He sold out his interest in that institution recently at a handsome figure. His special study in examiner's work, and the preparaion he received during his long executive career, makes him an especially capable and desirable public examiner.

First Shot in City Campaign.

The initial speech of the campaign for city election was delivered last Sunday afternoon at the Lyceum Theatre by T. E. Lattimer, Prof. of Political Science at the Illinois University under the auspices of the Socialist Local. In spite of the unfavorable weather the house was comfortably filled and the crowd applauded enthusiastically the humorous and philosophical explanation of Socialist principles and their comparison with the principle of the present system.

The platform upon which the Socialists propose to stand in the city campaign was read to the assembly and while it was not generally discussed some one ventured the remark that possibly the 1st plank was too revolutionary as it pledges the party and its candidates if elected to "honesty, efficiency and economy in administration of city affairs"

At the meeting of the local after the lecture four new members were admitted.

C. O. G. Johnson of Moorhead, treasurer of the Thief River Falls Manufacturing Co., moved his family to our city this week, making his home on Main avenue. Thus must a town grow.

DIED

Mrs. Nettie S. Lakin died Friday night at the home of her daughter, Mrs. G. A. Penney. Mrs. Lakin was sick for two weeks, suffering first with an attack of gall stones and later followed by peritonitis. The body was shipped Monday to Warren for burial, where her mother and son are buried.

Mrs. Lakin was born in Vermont 63 years ago. She lived for a great many years in Carrollton, Ill., where her husband was judge of probate. In 1895 they moved to Warren and later to Thief River. About a year ago Mrs. Lakin and two daughters, Leesa and Emily, moved to Duluth. At the time of her sickness Mrs. Lakin was here visiting her daughter, Mrs. Penney. She is survived by her three daughters only, all of whom were in attendance at the time of her death. Miss Leesa is interested in millinery work at Duluth, and Miss Emily teaches in the public schools of the same city.

CITY ELECTION APPROACHING

Candidates Announce Their Forthcoming. Others Favorably Mentioned.

The biennial city election will be held this fall on Tuesday November 7th. This time will soon be here and certain candidates realizing this have already signified their intention to come before the public for their approval.

William Smith, dispatcher on the Soo Line, has interviewed several of his friends as to his candidacy for Mayor and seems to be meeting with considerable encouragement. Lars Backe says, that he has been called upon by several of his friends who wish him to enter the field for mayor. Mr. Backe has not refused to enter the field and in all probability he will become an active candidate before the close of the race. Mr. Backe is one of the oldest residents of the city and having served as City Clerk for many years he is thoroughly familiar with city affairs and thus he has this strong recommendation that the newer man lacks.

The Socialist Party have drafted a platform for the city campaign, and by the way this is the first platform ever drafted by any party for a city campaign in this city, and on this platform they will nominate some man for Mayor and they say they are going to be in the game this time.

N. W. Terrant formerly Judge of Probate of Red Lake County says he will be a candidate for the Municipal Judgeship, and it is also rumored that Milton Forder has aspirations for these honors, while J. M. Bishop the present incumbent is somewhat reluctant and may not enter the race at all.

Aldermanic candidacies of the various wards and at large are too hazy, as yet, to take on any particular form.

Mrs. A. H. Akre, Avis and Willis, returned last week from a visit with relavites at Bowdon, N. Dak.

Miss Clara Bergen of Everett, Wash., is visiting her sister, Mrs. A. B. Roseland.

COMMISSION GOVERNMENT

The Manner of Nomination And Election of a Mayor And Four Councilmen.

It has been said that the plan of election of the commissioners under the charter used by commission governed cities results in the election of the men whom the people as a whole really want, and that these men have wrought remarkable changes for the betterment of those cities. For the enlightment of the general public as to the method of nomination and election of a mayor and four councilmen, chosen at large from the qualified electors, the following outline is submitted.

Candidates at Primary Election.

Candidates to be voted for at all general municipal elections in the city, including a mayor and four councilmen, shall be nominated by a primary election, and no other names shall be placed upon the general ballot than those selected in the manner hereinafter prescribed.

Any person desiring to become a candidate for mayor, or councilman, shall, at least ten days prior to said primary election, file with the city clerk a statement of such caindidacy in substantially the following form:

and shall at the same time file therewith a petition of at least twenty-five qualified voters requesting such candidacy.

No filing fee shall be required of candidates at any election.

Immediately upon the expiration of the time for filing the statements of and the petitions for candidates, the city clerk shall cause to be published in the official newspaper of the city, in proper form, the names of the persons as they are to appear upon the primary ballot.

How the Ballot Is Arranged.

Upon said primary ballot the names of the candidates for mayor, arranged alphabetically shall first be placed with a square at the right of each name, and at right of the square the words "Vote for One."

Following these names likewise arranged shall appear the names of the candidates for councilmen, with a square at the right of each name, and at the right of the square the words, "Vote for Four." The ballot shall be printed upon plain, substantial white paper, and shall be headed: "Candidates for the nomination of City Officers, of the City of Thief

GRAIN COMING IN

This week saw the first wheat and barley hauled from the surrounding country to the local elevators. All grades of wheat are being received. The early wheat is uniformly good and most of the late wheat is good, tho someimes of a lower grade due to the fact that rust struck it before it had matured. A great deal of barley is being brought in and farmers are especially fortunate who have some, because of the unusually high price of a $1 a bushel. It is as easy to raise barley as oats, but the price is not usually so very attractive. As soon as threshing gets well under way and if the price of wheat stays where it is now, it is estimated that grain will be handled here to the extent of 10,000 bushels a day.

THE NEWER AND BETTER WAY.

> "Nature alone can cure; this is the highest law of practical medicine, and the one to which we must adhere. . . . Nature creates and maintains; she must therefore be able to cure."
> —DIETL (1845)

Within the last century and especially within the last quarter of a century, a remarkable revolution has been taking place in methods of treating the sick. Half a century ago, Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes, author of "The Autocrat of the Breakfast Table" and professor in the Medical Depratment of Harvard University, Dr. Jacob Bigelow, the leading physician of Boston, and other wise and farseeing medical men, predicted this change and pointed out the road which medical progress should take. Virchow and Dietl gave the profession a better conception of the nature of disease for physioligic medicine and the development of those natural healing agencies which, harnessing the great forces of Nature, place them at the disposal of the physician and the nurse in the battle with disease.

This revolution has been largely the result of the modern discoveries in physiology, bacteriology, and physiologic chemistry which have shown the folly of depending for the actual cure of disease upon drugs administered in the old-fashioned way. The natural healing agencies now coming into favor, far from being new or faddish, are the oldest curative methods known to man. But long ago they fell into the hands of empirics and charlantans, and not until very recent years have they been rescued by science, studied and elaborated upon, and gradually organized into a complete rational system of therapeutics. As such they have won their way into modern medicine, under the name of "Physiotherapy" or "The Physiologic Method," and within a very few years have justified themselves as the most powerful and serviceable measures within the reach of the modern physician.

Dr. Johnson and Fruit.

The return of the strawberry season was always heartily welcomed by Dr. Johnson, for, as he once declared, of strawberries and cream he never could have too much. Fortunately he sometimes had opportunity to indulge his taste to the full, for his friend, Dr. Taylor of Lichfield, whom he contrived when possible to visit at strawberry time, was rather a noted fruit grower, and when at his house it was, as Johnson said, with gusto, "Strawberries and cream, toujours strawberries and cream!" A voracious eater at any time, Johnson's appetite for fruit was almost limitless. Mrs. Thrale tells us that he used often to eat half a dozen peaches before breakfast, and then frequently she had heard him complain that never in all his life had he quite as much wall fruit as he desired, save once. The exceptional occasion was during a visit to Lord Sandys' seat at Ombersley. The exact quantity he then devoured has not been recorded, but he was accused of clearing a whole wall side.—Pall Mall Gazette.

MANY PERISH IN RAIL DISASTER

Twenty-five Persons Killed and Sixty Injured in Wreck on Lehigh Valley.

VETERANS AMONG DEAD

Two Cars Jump Track on Trestle and Drop Forty-five Feet to River Bed.

Manchester, N. Y., Aug. 26.—With a list of killed and injured far from complete twenty-five persons are known to have lost their lives and between fifty and sixty to have been injured, many of them seriously, in the wreck of Lehigh Valley train No. 4 on a trestle near here.

Two cars of the train plunged off the structure, were hurled against the stone embankment and dropped to the bed of Canandaigua outlet, forty-five feet below, when the fast running eastbound train was derailed and broken in twain on the viaduct. Another car rolled down the embankment beyond the river. The remaining eleven cars of the train kept the roadbed.

The first car which went over, a day coach, plunged into the creek and was crushed upon the rocky bed. It landed upon its side and few of the occupants escaped death or serious injury. The following car plunged head first into the chasm and with the forward end resting in the creek stood balanced almost perpendicularly.

The wreck, aside from its frightfully calamitous character, is remarkable in that two cars from practically the center of the train were singled out for the disastrous plunge into the river bed.

The train carried many veterans returning from the Grand Army encampment at Rochester and at least two of the old soldiers were known to have gone to their death in the wreck. A large proportion of those killed and injured were women.

Train Crowded With Passengers.

Crowded with passengers, many of whom were war veterans and excursionists from the G. A. R. encampment at Rochester, the train, made up of fourteen cars and drawn by two big mogul locomotives, was forty minutes late when it reached Rochester Junction and from there sped eastward to make up time before reaching Geneva.

The engines and two day coaches had just passed the center of a 400-foot trestle over Canandaigua outlet, 150 yards east of the station at Manchester, when the Pullman car Austin, the third of the long train, left the rails. It dragged the dining car with it and two day coaches and two Pullmans followed. All bumped over the ties a short distance when the coupling between the day coach and the rear end of the diner broke. The forward end of the train dragged the derailed Pullman and the diner over safely, after which both plunged down the embankment and rolled over.

The free end of an ill fated Lehigh Valley day coach, in which most of the victims were riding, shoved out over the gulf and, followed by a Grand Trunk day coach, stripped the rear guard of the south side of the trestle and plunged to the shallow river bed more than forty feet below.

The end of the first day coach that went over struck the east embankment of solid masonry and, with the other sixty-foot car behind it, both smashed against the wall with terrific force.

Both cars were filled with passengers and in a few moments the cars lay a mass of crumpled wood, metal and glass under which a hundred men, women and children were buried, many of whom had been killed instantly.

MORE GOLD FOUND IN ALASKA

Stampede to McClintock Creek Now in Progress.

Juneau, Alaska, Aug. 25.—One of the biggest gold stampedes in years is in progress from Skaguay and other towns to McClintock creek, Yukon territory, where a great placer gold strike has been made.

Three Skaguay prospectors started the stampede by staking out claims and reporting gold plentiful for twenty miles along the bed of the creek and easily obtainable.

SEVEN PERSONS DIE IN STORM

Terrific Hurricane Sweeps Along South Atlantic Coast.

CHARLESTON SUFFERS MOST

Death List Liable to Increase and a Large Number of Persons Sustain Injuries.

Charleston, S. C., Aug. 29, via Summerville, S. C.—Seven persons known to be dead, many injured and property damage of more than $1,000,000, so far as can be ascertained, is the damage wrought by the terrific storm which swept Charleston Sunday afternoon, isolating that city from the rest of the world.

Great relief was felt when it was learned that all the people on Sullivans island are safe, having been taken off by the ferryboat Lawrence, which tied up over night at Mount Pleasant wharf.

The harbor is filled with wreckage of small boats, schooners and launches; many piers are washed away and in the city the streets are strewn with fallen trees, roofs, fences and other debris.

Among the principal buildings damaged are the customs house, postoffice, St. Michael's church and the Wahoo fertilizer mills, which practically were ruined. The street car, electric, telephone and fire alarm systems are out of commission.

All trains are leaving the city from an old depot, the floors of the new station and the tracks being under water.

Ninety-four-Mile Wind.

At the height of the storm the wind reached a velocity of ninety-four miles an hour, while the tide rose eight feet at the battery in front of the city, this being three feet short of the record established in 1903. The rainfall was more than two inches. The disturbance was reported to be west of Charleston and working away.

Splendid work in rescuing individuals and families was done by the soldiers from Fort Moultrie, the rescued being taken care of at the government reservation.

Eight or ten schooners and small steamers either were sunk or damaged. The schooner Edwina has nine feet of water in her hold; a few boards is all that is left of the pilot boat Sophia Ameliak; the dredge Sewee was sunk; the schooner Laura Hall is ashore on a mud flat up the Cooper river and the schooner Hummarock was seriously damaged by pounding. The naval reserves also suffered some loss. Their boat was wrecked and their cutter barely saved.

Heavy Damage at Savannah.

Millen, Ga., Aug. 29.—Passengers arriving from Savannah said that the wind reached a velocity of eighty-eight miles an hour, accompanied by heavy rain. Roofs were blown off, trees uprooted and telegraph and telephone wires impaired. No loss of life was reported.

SAYS BEATTIE ADMITTED ACT

Told Cousin He Was Sorry for Murdering His Wife.

Chesterfield Court House, Va., Aug. 29.—Between gulps of intense emotion Paul D. Beattie, cousin of Henry Clay Beattie, Jr., who stands indicted for the murder of his wife, revealed on the witness stand that the accused told him twenty-four hours after the murder how sorry he was he had done it, a circumstance relating to the crime that the witness hitherto had suppressed.

Coming as dramatically and as unexpectedly as the pathetic tale an hour before of Mrs. R. V. Owen, mother of the dead woman, as to the domestic infelicity of her daughter due to the husband's condition the brief but thrilling testimony given by Paul Beattie created a profound sensation.

JEWS DRIVEN FROM WALES

Rioting Results in General Exodus of Persecuted People.

London, Aug. 25.—Declaring that the riots in Wales are comparable to the massacres at Kishineff and the persecutions of the middle ages, the Jewish press vigorously demands that the government firmly suppress the lawlessness and afford ample protection to the Jews.

Rioting was renewed during the night at Ebb Vale and other villages where the miners have declared their intention of driving the Jews out.

The disorders have resulted in a general exodus of Jews.

Girl Swims Fifteen Miles.

New York, Aug. 29.—Elaine Golding, a Bath Beach girl, swam from the Battery in New York to Coney island, fifteen miles. Miss Golding is twenty years old and weighs 190 pounds. Her time, one minute more than six hours, is regarded as exceptional, as a heavy rain fell all the time and the sea was choppy. She has won many championships at short and middle distances, but this made her first effort at such a long distance.

The Tyrolese.

You may find the artistic temperament among the peasants in the villages of Bavarian Tyrol. They talk still of the King Ludwig, who lavished money on palaces and died an insane suicide and murderer. You remind them that they are still paying off the debts of the mad king. They reply cheerfully that they are glad of it, for Ludwig loved music and gave us Wagner.—London Chronicle.

Tokio, Aug. 25.—Count Katsura tendered his resignation as premier. He recommends the appointment of Marquis Saionji for that post.

AVIATOR ATWOOD REACHES NEW YORK

Completes Cross-Country Trip From St. Louis.

New York, Aug. 26.—Harry N. Atwood has completed his wonderful flight from St. Louis to this city, passing down the Hudson river in front of Manhattan at 2:25.

The dock fronts were jammed with crowds, who cheered the daring aviator to the limit, and the whistle valves of every craft on the river were tied down, making pandemonium as he steered direct for the upper bay, the end of his flight.

It was originally suggested by Atwood that he would try to follow the line of Broadway, but he later decided this would be foolhardy and he kept his machine on an even keel directly over the Hudson river and at an altitude of about 175 feet.

Atwood landed at Governors island at 2:40, having made his record from St. Louis to New York, 1,264 miles, in 1,704 minutes—the greatest feat of flying in the history of the man-birds.

Extremes of Temperature.

Science reasons that the lowest temperatures at the earth's surface are not found directly at the poles, but at some distance to the south of the north pole and to the north of the south pole. Likewise the greatest degree of heat is not, as might be supposed, to be found at the equator, but prevails at some distance to the north and to the south of that imaginary line. The coldest place on the earth's surface of which there is authentic record is in Siberia. The lowest temperature ever recorded in the open air was 90 degrees below zero F. at Werchajansk, central Siberia, on Jan. 15, 1885. The highest temperature of which there is an authentic record is 124 degrees above zero F. in Algeria, northern Africa, on July 17, 1879. These places of extreme heat and extreme cold give a range of temperature covering the whole inhabited world of 214 degrees, or two degrees more than from zero to the boiling point.

Don't Breathe Lazily.

"If you are consumptive, if you think you are drifting into consumption, sing!" said a medical man.

"Of course singing alone will not save you from consumption or cure you. Besides singing you must have plenty of fresh air and good food. And, speaking of fresh air, I must say that not one person in a hundred knows how to inhale it. People seldom breathe deeply enough. They seldom properly ventilate their lung cavities, which resemble stuffy, insanitary apartments, where all germs thrive undisturbed. Acquire the habit of taking the big, deep breath which is a primary requisite for any kind of singing, bad or good; and the physical joy derived from it will never allow you to relapse into lazy breathing. Furthermore, the mere effort of singing compels the singer to stand straight and to throw out the chest, a good corrective for the bad physical habits of weak chested people."

Killed by a Shout.

A joyful shout thoughtlessly given by an Italian smuggler on having eluded the customs guards on the Swiss frontier was the cause of his six companions being killed by an avalanche. The party, coming from the Grisons, had, with a thousand precautions, successfully negotiated the Forcola pass on the Swiss-Italian border. Five of the men were loaded with valuable contraband goods, and two acted as guides and scouts. When they were all safely on Italian soil one of the guides named Maretoli gave vent to a joyful yodel. In the still air the least sound causes a vibration which may set enormous masses of snow moving. This is what occurred here. A quarter of a million tons of snow detached itself from the mountain side and came thundering down upon the party, who were swept in an instant into an abyss. Maretoli alone was able to extricate himself.

Checkmate!

In these days, when various schemes are being suggested by which the loser of personal property may recover it without offering an extreme reward, it is interesting to note two advertisements which appeared last summer in a German paper. In these advertisements nothing so bald as a suggestion of reward appeared. They seem merely to present two wits fencing, and the reader forgets the matter at stake: [illegible]

FRIDAY, SEPT. 1, 1911.

You have not fulfilled every duty unless you have fulfilled that of being pleasant.

Some men are so persistant in believing—that they are right in all matters that they are absolutely unsusceptible to progress.

The woman who cannot be charitable to her neighbors mistakes had better quit living or go off by herself to some lonely isle where the mistakes of others will not bother her.

The woman who kicks about a newspaper's truthful writeup of her son's whereabouts really has no kick coming.

School opens Tuesday. Is all in readiness for young America? Has everything possible been done for the welfering of the child? Will his conditions and surroundings be what they ought? What has been done about shiny blackboards, bad air, poor or misdirected light, glossy paper, soiled windows, contagious diseases, dirt—all these undermine the general health, ruin eyesight, cause chronic indigestion and nervousness. Ill-adjusted desks cause bone deformation. Unclean school-rooms, dry dusting, broom sweeping—help spread tuberculosis, diphtheria, and other diseases. Individual drinking cups, towels, and utensils for each child will aid materially in preventing disease. Don't think for a minute that it will cost too much to take the proper precautions in all this! For an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure, and, thus, it will be the cheapest as well as the best way. To allow disease to flourish and spread only causes more expenses, even if it does not have to be paid for out of the school treasury. And this, to say nothing of the additional suffering, or more sorrowing homes. May this matter let us not be penny-wise and pound-foolish.

LABOR BUREAU EXHIBIT.

The Minnesota Bureau of Labor, Industries and Commerce will have a most interesting and instructive exhibit at the State Fair. Its booth will be in the south wing of the "Manufacturer's Building." The five branches of the Department-Factory Inspection, Statistics, Women and Children, Child Labor, Free Employment Bureaus, will be represented by typical exhibits.

The display of safety appliances and photographs which has been gathered by the Bureau at a considerable expense will be an especial feature of the exhibit.

Every person who attends the Fair will find something of interest in the Bureau of Labor booth.

The University Farm Press News prints the following paragraph about the Agricultural schools. The Crookston School has a fine equipment at the Northwest Experiment Station and offers splendid advantages to students from this part of the state. The article follows:

"The Minnesota School of Agriculture, at St. Anthony Park, was at the last term fairly swamped by the number of students seeking its advantages. The legislature voted a sum of money for additional buildings, but they will not be available for use during the ensuing term; therefore the conditions of overcrowding, and overwork for instructors, seem likely to be repeated.

It is earnstly urged that all intending students, to whom the new schools at Crookston and Morris are geographically more convenient, should register at those schools. Whatever seeming advantages the St. Anthony Park school may have from its location and its connection with the State Experiment Station, are probably more than offset by the greater amount of individual attention from instructors which students will enjoy at the smaller schools. Whatever difference in expense may exist is probably in favor of Crookston and Morris.

The necessary expense of a six month's term at Crookston, aside from traveling expense and the cost of a military uniform do not exceed $100. The next term opens Monday, October 2d."

TARIFF TOMFOOLERY.

Pres. Taft is against any revision on manufactured articles until he hears from his three statisticians. His bowels of compassion are unmoved at the sight of the American farmer with his products on the free list and everything he buys taxed. The consumer shall get no relief until it may be given to him "scientifically."

Sen. Cummins said that there was no need whatever to wait for a report from the tariff board, as he could "prove by evidence far superior to any tariff board or any outside investigating body" that the reduction which congress proposed to make in the steel schedule were warranted. For he would have no difficulty in proving out of Andrew Carnegie's own mouth that all of the iron and steel duties could be wiped out without causing a single mine or mill to close down, and without creating any disturbance whatever save to the industry of stock watering.

Yet in face of all this—in face of his own denunciation of indefensible duties—Mr. Taft tells the American people that they can have no relief until three men shall gather together a mass of statistics for the guidance of congress. Then when the figures have been added and subtracted and divided, the people may know the measure of relief that may be granted to them without, causing annoyance to those who profit from their distress. This tomfoolery—for it is nothing less, in that the tariff board has no information at its command which is not available to congress—has been invoked to deny simple justice to the consuming public. Surely Mr. Taft is piling up wrath against the day of reckoning.—St. Paul Daily News.

President Taft virtually opened his presidential campaign last Saturday and in doing so assailed with all might certain "enemies of the Republic," as he considers them.

It seems to us he might have made a better beginning. The enemies that he picked out for attack were Speaker Clark, Chairman, Underwood of the House, Senator LaFollette, and the "Progressives" in general. These have earnestly endeavored to relieve the tariff burdens of the people and at the same time had an eye to justice in so doing. They have done what they could to loosen the grip of the "special interests" on the throat of the consuming public and might have had much to show for their efforts in this direction but for the refusal of this same Taft to stand by his campaign promises to "revise the Dingley tariff downward." He has had a number of opportunities when with a stroke of the pen he might have saved our consuming public many millions of dollars. Instead he said in effect: Let the people suffer another year lest we cause the greedy monopolies inconvenience by an "unscientific" tariff. Better let the people suffer—they're used to it.

This same Taft was an ardent supporter of the Roosevelt conservation policies, but he no sooner took his oath of office than he weeded out of his cabinet the leading conservationists of the Roosevelt administration and through Ballinger, his own choice began a game of "give away" with the "big interests," the stake being water power sites, coal lands, etc., on government lands. Could this policy have been carried forth till now, untrammeled by aroused public opinion, nothing would now be left to conserve.

This same Taft last June 22d openly endorsed the Aldrich-Morgan credit controling monopoly. This is the proposed new currency reform concocted by a lot of lame ducks "who have put their heads together and with the advice and consent" of the big money powers propose so to centralize the wealth and credit of the country as to make them perpetual masters.

And now this same Taft has the gall to step forth and begin to warn us of "enemies" of the Public, when he himself is one of the most dangerous ones, because he cloaks himself in seeming righteousness and respectability. If we want more fetters instead of more freedom we will listen to his siren voice.

SUPPORTS CONGRESSMAN LINDBERGH'S RESOLUTION TO INVESTIGATE THE MONEY TRUST.

To the Editor of the News Tribune:

Early last month Representative Charles A. Lindbergh of the Sixth Minnesota district placed before congress a resolution calling for the appointment of a special committee to investigate the banking trust of this country. The resolution is now before the house committee on rules, and that committee, according to the Associated Press, has decided to report it favorable, and probably to recommend that the subject be turned over to the committee especially created.

This resolution goes to the very heart of the whole trust evil, and has more importance to the country at large than any other proposal or proceeding now before the government, yet it has had practically no attention. The purpose back of it profoundly affects the whole body of our population in their most intimate daily affairs, because the trust it brings into question is back of all the trusts now being investigated. No correction of the trust evils will mean much while this central and dominant trust remains. No restraint of trade can equal the restraint directly and indirectly exercised by the banking power of New York and its allied interests, community funds are diverted from the needs of the community themselves, and made to furnish life-

As Representative Lindbergh pointed out in offering his resolution, over 80 per cent of the country's money is controlled by about 3,000 individuals and institutions, and kept away from the channels of development and exchanges through which the lifeblood of the country's legitimate industries must be derived. The banking trust is none the less central in power for its being intangible and having no formed organization. Its acts and their effects are easily traceable through the performance of its agents, high and low, and clearly show a conspiracy far more dangerous than any organized trust of any kind. That power, arbitrarily controlled by a few men whose offices are within three or four blocks of Broad and Walls streets actually holds the producers and legitimate merchants of the west and middle west in a condition of serfdom, from which they can be emancipated only by forcible action on the part of the government, and to force such an action is the object Mr. Lindbergh has in view.

Without public pressure the house committee may be expected to do what all committees heretofore have done—bow to the orders from New York. If it refers the resolution to the monetary commission, or any other creature of the Aldrich plan it will die a lingering death. The Aldrich plan itself is specially designed to confirm the hold of the banking trusts upon the country's money, and goes to such lengths as would practically give the banks control of the United States treasury with power to drain our money into foreign lands in any time of stress, or whenever it liked. The disaster it would impose would crack the very bones of the nation.

LABOR VICTORIOUS

A POEM FOR LABOR DAY

By JAMES A. EDGERTON

Copyright, 1911, By American Press Association

IN all the chapters of Freedom's story,
Splashed o'er with glory,
Since Time began;
In all the chronicles made entrancing
Through men advancing
The cause of Man,
In all the struggles that made Truth clearer
And brought earth nearer
To brotherhood,
We find the friends of the right side hated,
Calumniated,
Misunderstood.

IF God-led prophets, if saints and sages,
Were paid their wages
By fire and sword;
If priests of progress were balked and baffled,
With stake or scaffold
Their last reward,
Should those of the present find food for wonder
If they be under
The selfsame curse,
There placed by lip servers of form and letter,
Who make the better
Appear the worse?

THOUGH crimes there be against love of neighbor,
That call on Labor,
To work her shame,
She has no shield for the baseborn actions
Of hate-led factions
That use her name.
Her cause is still for the poor and lowly,
And high and holy
Its beacons shine,
Belonging to all men, all climes and races,
The sweat of whose faces
Proclaims her sign.

I KNOW not what scheme of Greed to crush her
Has sought to enmesh her
In seeming wrong.
I only know that no cause is whiter,
No hope shines brighter,
Man's path along.
I know that fraud can never take from us
Her worldwide promise
Of final peace
And that by the spirit of high endeavor
Her truths forever
Shall find increase.

WHATEVER mistakes may have put upon her
A false dishonor,
Wrought by the few;
Whatever conspiracies may enfold her,
We still behold her
As fair and true.
From those who in shortness of sight defame her,
The blind, who claim her,
To lead the blind,
Herself she will purge in the fire of duty
And shine in beauty
To all mankind.

SHE follows the gleam, with face turned dawnward,
To lead men onward,
With thought to bless.
Her cause is that of the wage-bound toiler
Against the spoiler
Of Selfishness;
Her goal, to lift the lowest thing human
And to illumine
The darkest brain
And out of the surplus of men's endeavor
To build forever
The common gain.

THOUGH her soldiers are battered and thrown into prison,
Yet others are risen
To lead her fight,
Till Justice at last shall be in fashion
And all feel the passion
Of Civic Right;
Till Labor's hosts, in all lands victorious,
The New Age glorious
Bring to birth—
The cause of Humanity, sacred and holy,
The faith of the lowly,
The hope of earth!

from 100 to 120,000 tons per cubic miles of air where such storms are prevalent. The aeolian geologist, Udden, taking conservative values and using fairly accurate data for the number, velocity and duration of the dust storms in the western states, concluded that "on the average about 850,000,000 tons of dust are carried 1,440 miles each year, thus doing in this region alone about 1,225,000,000,000 mile tons of transport." The dust whirls run each an average distance of 218 miles.

THAT LITTLE COUNTRY PAPER FROM THE OL' HOME TOWN.

An' a feller rests from labor, smokin' at his pipe o' clay.
There's nothing does him so much good, as the little country Paper from his Ol' Home Town.

It ain't a thing of beauty and its print ain't always clean,
But it straightens out his temper, when a feller's feeling mean,
It takes the wrinkles off his face an' brushes off the frown,
That little country paper from his Ol' Home Town.

It tells of all the parties an' the balls of Pumpkin Row,
'Bout who spent Sunda with who's girl, an' how the crops 'el grow.
An' it keeps a feller posted 'bout who's up an' who's down,
That little country paper from his Ol' Home Town.

Now, I like to read the dailies an' the story papers too,
An' at times the yellow novels an' some other trash you know,
But when I want some readin' that 'el brush away a frown,
I want that little paper from my Ol' Home Town.

Thomas Nelson of Newfolden was around buying cattle last week and succeeded in buying up a large number of cattle. Thomas is very liberal in his offer moreso after he is married.

The farmers are getting their hunting notices posted, and it is certainly the proper step to protect the prairie chicken slaughtering sport, which will soon begin. The farmers ought to be allowed to kill chickens on their own farms, as a matter of fact. It is impossible for country people to have any fresh meats during the hot summer months, and what would a chicken amount to. But the law is matted out for the sporty bunch so they can have sport in killing these innocent birds, not for their value but simply to see who can be the greatest murderer. Every farmer should have notices posted in every corner of his land, and then too keep all trasspassers off, those without permission.

J. J. Bugge was the first to start threshing in this neighborhood. He has a shock run near Viking.

COMMUNICATION

August 31, 1911.

Now, as Pennington county's court house is about finished and Contractor Doege is done, I wish to have every fair going man to take a look at the work and if they won't stand and wonder, as I did, when they see the work and know that six thousand three hundred dollars did the work, and think of the $70,000 in the "white elephant." If Mr. Doege had had that money he would have built an elephant clear around Thief River Falls,—yes, and the snow and rain would not be blowing into it nor the inside walls going to pieces. As I am about to leave Thief River Falls I want to say it is the first thing I've seen that we can be proud of.

Yours truly,

A bank, two wholesale houses, a retail and commission house, and a freight office are located in the Commercial Normal School. Students manage them. When a student is proficient enough, he is put in charge of each of these for two weeks or longer.

That shows how we develop students, not merely by teaching theory, but training them in the practical application of their knowledge.

The work is fascinating, and the student learns more quickly and easily.

My Brother

By HUDSON C. EASTON

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

Gregory and I had been separated for seven years at an age when persons change very considerably. When we parted my brother was fourteen years old, I twelve. Now Gregory was twenty-one, I eighteen. Disagreements between our parents was the cause of our separation, I having lived with my mother abroad and Gregory with my father in America. Father died while we were in France and within six months mother died also. There was nothing for Gregory and I to do but to get together. So it was decided that I should come to America.

I had a vague remembrance of my brother as a boy, but as I had never seen him as a man I had no idea what he looked like. I wrote him to meet me on my arrival and as the ship was being pushed into the dock I looked for him among the crowd awaiting friends. Presently I saw a young man waving at me. I couldn't see any resemblance to the boy I had parted with years before, but he was looking straight at me and smiling. I threw him a kiss and waited impatiently for the ship to be docked. Next I saw him hastening by me.

"Here I am," I said.

He turned and surprised me by not appearing to know me. "I have some friends aboard I am looking for," he said hurriedly yet looking puzzled.

"Will you join me after seeing them?" I asked.

"Yes," he replied.

In ten minutes he returned. The puzzled look had given place to a winning smile—the same with which he had greeted me from the dock.

"You're Gregory, aren't you?"

"Gregory? And who may you be?"

"I'm Fanny. I don't wonder you are not quite sure of me since you haven't seen me for seven years."

"Are you sure of me?"

"I wouldn't have known you if you hadn't recognized me first."

"How is that?"

"Why, when you waved to me from the docks."

He took my belongings and carried them to the dock. Fortunately we had no trouble in getting my baggage examined, and Gregory and I soon found ourselves sitting side by side in a carriage rolling along over the thoroughfares of the city.

"This is a funny meeting between brother and sister," I said.

"How funny?"

"Why, we haven't even kissed."

"So we haven't," he said. "That was because we weren't certain of each other, I suppose." And he drew me toward him and kissed me. I noticed that there was a good deal more zest to it than is usual in brotherly kisses, but thought very little of it at the time.

"You're boarding at the same place, I suppose," I said.

"Where was I when you"— He stopped and looked at me inquiringly.

"At 45 Union street, where your letters"—

"Certainly. That's where I am now."

"Didn't you tell the driver where to go?"

"Yes, but to be certain I'll tell him again."

He called to the driver, giving him the street and numb— The driver said "Aye, aye," and, turning a corner, got on to another avenue.

"You and I will have to live together now, Greg," I said, laying my hand affectionately on his.

"Nothing would suit me better."

"I won't marry. Neither must you."

He looked at me kind o' funny when I said this, but made no reply.

"It can't be," I said, much disturbed "that you are engaged?"

"No," he said, "but I'd like to be."

"Oh, I'm so sorry. I hoped that you and I might be inseparable. But if you love some one"—

"I didn't say that some one loved me."

"How long have you known her?"

"About an hour."

I was puzzled. I turned and looked at him. He seemed very much amused at something.

"What in the world do you mean?" I asked.

He laughed. A sudden surprise struck me. Could it be that I had made a mistake? The hot blood rushed to my cheeks.

"This has gone as far as it should go," he said, "though I am loath to stop it. I am not your brother. When I appeared to be waving at you from the dock I was waving at some friends on the deck above you. Forgive me for permitting you to continue in your mistake."

I was naturally too much shocked to treat the matter as a joke. I was riding in a carriage in a city I was not familiar with. He had kissed me.

"Where are you taking me?" I asked, frightened.

"To your brother. You gave me the address."

"After your dishonorable"— I was beginning when he interposed.

"Calm yourself. I admit I have done wrong not to undeceive you at once. But I simply couldn't. To have a lovely girl claim me as you have done was too great a temptation."

He continued to speak in a very complimentary way, and—well, I was mollified. When we reached my brother I found that he had missed me at the steamer, not recognizing me.

My husband says that of all the kisses I have even given him that first one was the sweetest.

Morgan as a Mathematician.

J. P. Morgan was almost bred a mathematician. While at Gottingen Morgan specialized in mathematics, and with the professor of mathematics he would spend long hours at problems. Some years ago a number of New Yorkers who had been at the Gottingen university together held a dinner and invited their old professor of mathematics, who happened to be visiting this country, to be present. The German stood his ground—he gave them his own idea. Looking at Mr. Morgan, he said that he was indeed very glad his old pupil had succeeded so well as a banker. "But I regret," he went on, "that you did not remain at the university. Had you stayed with me you would have been my assistant as long as I lived, and unquestionably at my death you would have been appointed professor of mathematics in my place."—Metropolitan Magazine.

Dust Whirls.

Seaward flowing waters are not alone responsible for the denudation of soils. Those who have watched dark dust storms approaching will be interested to know that estimates of solid material suspended in the air run from 160 to 120,000 tons per cubic miles of air where such storms are prevalent. The æolian geologist, Udden, taking conservative values and using fairly accurate data for the number, velocity and duration of the dust storms in the western states, concluded that "on the average about 850,000,000 tons of dust are carried 1,440 miles each year, thus doing in this region alone about 1,225,000,000,000 mile tons of transport." The dust whirls run each an average distance of 218 miles.

The Blushing Octopus.

The octopus frequently changes in color like a marine chameleon. It would appear, from studies of this creature, that the colored pigment whereby this change in color is effected is contained in envelopes in its skin, in the tissue of which are muscular fibers actuated by nerves. Should these fibers become relaxed a dark pigment appears. The phenomenon is said to be analogous to blushing.—Harper's Weekly.

The Pure Bred Stallion Creates Improvement

By D. O. THOMPSON,

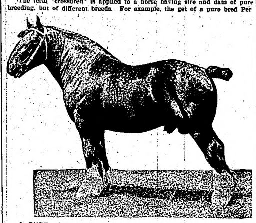
Animal Husbandry Department, Purdue University Experiment Station

III.

THE terms descriptive of the breeding of horses are more or less well understood, nevertheless an exact understanding of their meaning is essential to an intelligent discussion of the horse breeding situation in the state.

The term "pure bred" is applied to the horse having sire and dam of the same breed and both eligible to registry in the books of the standard record or registry association. The horse thus bred is himself eligible to registry in the standard book.

The term "crossbred" is applied to a horse having sire and dam of pure breeding, but of different breeds. For example, the get of a pure bred Percheron stallion mated with a pure bred Shire mare is a crossbred and is not eligible to registry in either of the associations in which its sire and dam may be registered.



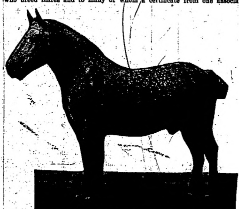
A PURE BRED STALLION.—The result of a century of pure breeding. He has all the qualifications of a valuable sire.

The term "grade" is applied to the get of a pure bred stallion mated with a mare of impure breeding. The filly produced from the mating of a mare of common or nondescript breeding with a pure bred stallion is a half blood; if she is mated in turn with a stallion of the same breed as her sire the offspring is a three-quarters blood. If this foal be a filly and she be mated with a pure bred stallion of the same breed as her sire the offspring is a seven-eighths blood. The result of the next top cross is a fifteenth-sixteenths blood, etc. Although at the end of a series of years of top crossing the progeny will show many of the characters of the pure bred and carry but a trace of the blood of the common mare in the remote ancestry, nevertheless they are not eligible to registry in the books of the standard record associations in the United States, and the colts are not desirable for the stud because it is highly probable that if they were retained for service in the stud the foals sired by them will revert in some degree to the characters of the common mare in the ancestry.

The terms "mongrel" and "scrub" are used interchangeably to designate the breeding of the get of a stallion of impure breeding. When applied to the individuality of the animal they designate inferiority. Either of these terms also applies to the offspring of a pure bred mare got by a stallion of impure breeding. Mating a pure bred mare with anything but a pure bred stallion is not up grading; it is rather a step in the opposite direction, away from progress and improvement.

Standard Record Associations.

In times past and to some extent at present there have been companies and associations organized that supply pedigree registry certificates for animals not eligible to registry in the standard associations. They can do business because their identity is not known to the great majority of farmers who breed mares and to many of whom a certificate from one association means as much as that from another. Prior to January 1, 1911, the department of agriculture gave official recognition to certain associations, but due to a new interpretation of the law this recognition was withdrawn on that date. On Jan. 3, 1911, the National Society of Record Associations, in which membership is limited to standard associations, was organized, and this association gives official recognition to the following horse registry associations, clubs and companies: Arabian Horse Club of America, Newburg, N. Y.; American Association of Importers and Breeders of Belgian Draft Horses, Wabash, Ind.; Cleveland Bay Society of America, Oconomowoc, Wis.; American Clydesdale association, Chicago, Ill.; French Coach Horse Society of America, Oak Park, Ill.; German, Hanoverian and Oldenburg Coach Horse Association of America, Lafayette, Ind.; American Hackney Horse society, New York; Percheron Society of America, Chicago, Ill.; American Shetland Pony club, Lafayette, Ind.; American Shire Horse association, Wenona, Ill.; American Suffolk Horse association, De Kalb, Ill.; National French Draft Horse association, Fairfield, Ia.; the Jockey club, New York; the Welsh Pony and Cob Society of America, Aurora, Ill.; American Trotting Register association, Chicago, Ill.; American Morgan Register association, Middlebury, Vt.; American Saddle Horse Breeders' association, Louisville, Ky., and American Breeders' Association of Jacks and Jennets, Columbia, Tenn.



A GRADE GELDING.—The result of a dozen years of top crossing, a compliment to the pure bred stallion that sired him. Fortunately one of the few as good as himself not kept for the stud. Had he been retained as a stallion it is highly probable that the majority of his foals would receive from him some of the inferior characters of the common mare in his not very remote ancestry.

The pedigree registry certificate shown as proof of the purity of breeding of any stallion should bear the exact name and seal of the association, club or company recognized by the National Association of Record Associations.

Improved Breeding Increases Selling Price.

The get of pure bred stallions sell much more readily and at a higher price than the get of crossbred, grade or scrub stallions. About 95 per cent of 300 farmers in one state (Indiana) replied to a question on this point that the get of a pure bred stallion sold for much better prices than the foals sired by a grade. Investigations in other states in which exhaustive data have been gathered on this subject substantiate this belief. The pure bred stallion, owing to his stronger, more firmly established blood lines, is more prepotent than the stallion of impure breeding.

Millepedes.

The little creature which possesses the distinction of having more legs than any other animal is that which belongs to the family of insects known as millepedes or thousand footed. There are several different species of these, but they all possess the common characteristic of having segmented bodies, each segment of which is provided with its own pair of feet. These are set so closely along the body as to resemble hairs, and when they move one after another with perfect regularity the effect is precisely the same on a small scale as that of a field of oats undulating under the influence of the wind. Some species of millepedes have as many as 350 separate and distinct legs. They are all perfectly harmless.

Encouragement Enough.

"But why should you be so dreadfully surprised and disappointed when I decline your offer?" she asked recently. "I am certain that I never gave you the least encouragement to propose to me."

"You did!" he cried bitterly. "You gave me the greatest encouragement."

"When?"

"When you told me your income was $25,000 a year."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Sarcastic Wills.

One eccentric Frenchman directed that a new cooking recipe should be pasted on his tomb every day, and another Frenchman, who was a lawyer, left $50,000 to a lunatic asylum, declaring that it was simply an act of restitution to the clients who were insane enough to employ his services.

Staging a Play.

"I can give you the part of a butler."

"I couldn't take a small part like that."

"You are evidently not used to society drama. The butler has his share of the epigrams."—Pittsburg Post.

His Intentions.

Mrs. Rasher—Has Mr. Goldcoin, with whom you have been dancing all the evening, at last declared his intentions, Mabel? Mabel—Yes, aunt. Mrs. Rusher—I am so glad! And what did he say? Mabel—He declared he would never marry.—Vogue.

Riding a Giraffe.

General Wood of the English army was the hero of many adventures, but the one he called the strangest is the time he rode a giraffe in India. With a party of friends he was being entertained by the rajah of Jowra, who exhibited his rare collection of wild animals to his guests. General (then Major) Wood was a daring horseman and on a wager offered to ride the giraffe with no bridle save a rope. The rajah warned him of the danger, but he would not listen. So the giraffe was brought to a balcony, from which the major vaulted on its back. Instantly the great creature was off like the wind, and, once fairly started, it settled down into a curious gallop that soon made the rider so sick and dizzy that he fell off like a log, receiving a blow on the head from the animal's knee and then in the face from its foot. He was unconscious for an hour, and the first use he made of his voice was to resolve that he would never ride a giraffe again.

CORNERED.

By C. WELLINGTON BLISS

Antoine Chabelier, private in the One Hundred and Forty-seventh regiment of the line, to the manner born, twenty years of age, defender of France from the Germans, who were marching over the borders, at the battle of Gravelotte, received two wounds, one in the leg and one in the arm. The wounds were made with bullets, which were cut out by the surgeon. They were shown to the wounded men, who asked for them and they were given to him.

Then a brilliant idea struck the young soldier. Being a good deal of a butterfly in the matter of his loves, before marching from Paris he had tearfully bid adieu to two young ladies, each one of whom had wept on his shoulder. "I will send Lucile one of these bullets," he said, "and Clochette the other, a very pretty compliment, the bullets having wounded me on the field of battle. I can see nothing dishonorable in the matter since if either takes it as a proposal of marriage it will be her own fault."

So he wrote a letter to Lucile, telling her that he was sending her the bullet with which he had been wounded in the late battle, and wrote a duplicate to Clochette. When he next saw these young ladies the second empire had fallen and the republic was restored. Antoine lived in one of the swell quarters of Paris, on a street midway between his two charmers. They had fled from the commune, but when tranquillity was restored had returned and again settled in their homes. The war had cost France much of its best blood, and Lucile, one of the young ladie[illegible] who possessed "the bullet with [illegible]toine had been wounded," b[illegible]ncle, had fallen heir to a [illegible]

Antoine, like most you[illegible]cial rank, having heard of t[illegible]sion of wealth, not averse to mar[illegible] a fortune, congratulated himself o[illegible] having favored the heiress with the bullet that had wounded him, but felt ill at ease for fear the other "bullet with which he had been wounded" would ruin him. His first meeting with Lucile was very tender. She did not weep tears of joy on his shoulder at his return, but there were various reasons for this. In the first place, France was a great sufferer; in the second, mademoiselle was now a prize in the matrimonial market and could not be expected to give herself away as readily as before. These were the reasons Antoine gave himself for a want of demonstrativeness on the girl's part such as she had shown at his departure for the war.

It was some time after his return that he called upon Clochette, who possessed the other bullet with which he had been wounded. She received him with the same demonstrations of affection as before, permitting him to embrace her, though Antoine thought that there was not the same genuine feeling she had shown before. She was much interested to know where he had been struck, and Antoine turned up his trousers and showed her a scar in the calf of his leg. The wound in his arm he was keeping for Lucile.

There was one weak spot in this little farce for its hero. The two young ladies were acquainted. Antoine felt hopeful that the one would not learn of the other's souvenir since high bred ladies were not likely to tell one another of their love affairs. However, he was in a hurry to wed Lucile, for once married there might be half a dozen bullet souvenirs in the hands of as many young ladies and no great harm done. Lucile put him off on the plea that she was not assured of his love for her, but declared that once convinced she would yield.

One day when Antoine called on Lucile he was concerned to find Clochette there drinking English afternoon tea. Clochette was surprised to see him, but the three drank tea together very sociably. Antoine was called upon to give some account of his war service, and both girls naturally manifested an interest in his wound. Finally Lucile said:

"M. Chabelier, show mademoiselle the place in your arm where you were wounded."

The bomb was about to burst. Nevertheless Antoine was a man of courage. He did not flinch.

"In the leg, you mean," said Clochette.

"He told me it was in the arm; indeed, he showed me the scar."

"I think I should know," said the other, "since I possess the bullet that wounded him."

"Indeed," rejoined Lucile, with hauteur, "I supposed I possessed that bullet. Is it not so, monsieur?"

"It is."

"And do not I possess the bullet that wounded you?" asked Clochette, with spirit.

Antoine saw that it was all up with him. He surrendered, but to neither.

"Young ladies," he said, "I sent one of you a bullet that wounded me in the arm, the other one that wounded me in the leg. I sent a third bullet to another girl."

"Where did that one strike you?" asked Clochette.

"In the heart."

Both girls burst into a laugh. Lucile finally forgave him, and he is now making ducks and drakes of her fortune. Nevertheless his wife is not fond of having him tell the story, which he does whenever he entertains a select party of intimate friends.

An Unconscious Slave

By ELIZABETH WEED

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

William Remington left the farm when he was seventeen years old and went to the city. He had but one idea—to get rich, go back to the country and give his old father and mother every comfort.

Remington was a natural hustler, a man of remarkable concentration. For the first few years of his business life it was work, work, work, and save, save, save. He wrote regularly to his parents. Occasionally he would ask them if they needed a little money. The reply was that they were doing well enough; he was not to worry about them, but get himself established. He would then write back that he was straining every nerve, saving every cent, to get together some capital. As soon as he could use capital himself he could help them much better than now.

They wrote him every summer to make them a visit, but he replied that he never took a vacation; he was too busy. But he was forging ahead, being promoted rapidly. One day he received a letter from his mother asking if there was anything the matter with him—they had not heard from him for two months. Remington was astonished. He had not written for two months. He had been so busy that he had forgotten to write. He wrote at once, and very penitently, explaining that all his time was required to open a new field in the business and it had absorbed all his attention. He promised that it should not occur again.

When Remington was twenty-five he had succeeded on two lines. He had saved money and made himself valuable. He was worth more than his money. The concern he was with offered to pay him each year five times the amount of his savings. He accepted and remained with it.

Remington sent his parents remittances from this time forward. But he never went to see them. He was too busy. At first he mailed the checks himself with an affectionate letter, but finally, having turned over his private matters to his clerk, they were always mailed by him on the first of the month with no letter at all.

The members of the firm were dying off, and Remington after awhile became managing partner. He was now so busy that he had no time whatever to write to his parents and never did so. But his clerk sent the remittances regularly. One day a man asked him something about his mother. He looked at the questioner, dazed. For an instant he did not seem quite sure he had a mother. The next moment a pained expression passed over his face. But three men were waiting to ask instructions on some point pertaining to the business, and his attention was diverted.

Remington would not permit any one except himself to decide any question of great or small importance. It was not long before the other partners—they were now all juniors—discovered that his health was breaking down under the strain of too much work.

"What's the matter with him?" asked one of them of a doctor.

"He's a slave to detail, same as some one to liquor or drugs."

They remonstrated with the managing partner, but he would not listen to them. Something must be done.

One Sunday morning in early spring when Remington couldn't very well go to business one of his junior partners prevailed upon him to kill time till he might recommence the week's drive by going for a sail on a yacht.

Remington did not get off that yacht for six weeks. He had been kidnaped. He swore, he fumed, he threatened, all to no purpose. The yacht was headed for the island of Madeira, and he couldn't get ashore. Finally he gave himself up to the pleasant, lazy surroundings, and the nervous furor that had been driving him on began to wear off when he reached Madeira and went into its tropical gardens filled with perfume exhaling plants. There he luxuriated in a sort of convalescence. He was ready to listen to reason. He signed a bond with $100,000 forfeit, agreeing to divide the business into departments, appointing a manager for each and solemnly pledging his word of honor not to interfere with any manager in any particular.

After a week spent visiting the different parts of the island the party returned to America.

There was nothing to do in arranging the business in accordance with the new plan, for it was so arranged already. What was necessary was for Remington to leave each department to its manager. Therefore on his return, finding the business going on just as well as it had been under his personal supervision, he started to visit his father and mother.

He found two old people who did not recognize him when he entered. Nor did he recognize them. His mother was very feeble. Remington put his arms about her and said:

"Mother, I'm Will. I've come back to take you to the city and give you every comfort—a fine house, horses and carriages, automobiles—anything, everything you want."

"And take me away from home?" whimpered the old lady. "I don't want any of those things, nor does pa."

"Thirty years lost in slavery," said Remington to himself.

CANNOT CONCEDE MEN'S DEMANDS

Vice President of Harriman Lines Gives Reasons.

GOES DEEPLY INTO DETAILS

Julius Kruttschnitt Declares That to Concede to Shop Employes the Points Desired Would Mean Chaos and Diminish the Ability of the Corporations to Fulfill the Duties Imposed Upon Them by Law.

San Francisco, Aug. 29.—That to grant the demands of the Federation of Shop Employes of the Harriman lines would mean chaos, and that it would diminish the ability of the corporations to fulfill the duties imposed upon them by law, was the statement made by Julius Kruttschnitt, vice president and director of maintenance and operation of the Harriman roads.

Mr. Kruttschnitt took up in detail the reasons for refusing the demands of the federated shopmen, saying:

"These are the reasons why we decline to surrender to an irresponsible committee of federated employes, representing a very small portion of the public, trusts confided to us by the entire public and why we will not concede to such a committee the right to dictate whether we shall or shall not fulfill for twenty millions of people in seventeen states the duties clearly prescribed by law. The employes' demands are substantially as follows:

"First—Recognition of the shop employes' federation.

"Heretofore issues arising with a machinist, boilermaker, blacksmith or sheet metal worker were taken up with his associates of that craft. When not successfully adjusted strikes of that craft have followed, but they were not serious enough to prevent the roads performing their public services, for which they were created. Under the change proposed an issue of a small road of the system in Louisiana might stop all shop work throughout the system by requiring members to strike in California, Oregon, Washington or Nebraska.

"Second—All present or future employes will join the federated association within thirty days.

"This means the discharge of all employes who will not join, or an absolute closed shop.

"Third—That the company agree that the final settlement of differences shall rest with a federated committee representing all five crafts.

Encourage Unreasonable Demands.

"This would place the employes of all crafts behind a demand made by any one craft and would encourage unreasonable demands not likely to be made by individual crafts.

"Fourth—The restriction of the number of apprentices.

"This would deny to American boys the opportunity to learn trades.

"Fifth—A flat increase of 7 cents per hour for all mechanics, apprentices and helpers, an average for the entire shop forces of 23 cents and a reduction of hours and other demands averaging 13 per cent additional.

"The Southern Pacific is now paying higher wages than any other railroad in the United States and has increased the pay of all shop crafts 12½ per cent in the last five years.

"Sixth—The abolishing of piece, premium or bonus systems, shop foremanship to be filled by promotion from federation employes. This is in direct conflict with the public opinion, recently expressed, that increased expenses of carriers should be met with increased efficiency of operation and not by increase of freight rates.

"Seventh—That no form of physical examination or personal record shall be required.

"This denies to the company the right of every citizen to require of persons offering their services evidences of competency, good character and health and deprives the companies of all protection under the fellow servant laws of many states.

"Eighth—That, if forces are reduced, employes are to indicate who should be laid off.

"This would embarrass the company in efforts to increase efficiency by ridding the service of inefficient employes.

"Ninth—That no employe belonging to the federation be discharged without consent from the employes' committee.

"This would require the company involved to meet a committee representing all its craftsmen, which committee would owe allegiance to a general committee composed of allied craftsmen of all lines of the Harriman system."

THOUSANDS OF DOLLARS FOR PRIZE PRODUCTS

HOW THE BIG LAND SHOWS ADVERTISE THE NORTHWEST

The cool weather and abundant rains in the past few weeks assure the Northwest farmers good crops. More than usual returns will be had by many of the more progressive farmers, who will exhibit at the New York and other big land shows. The habit of exhibiting at these big shows is a good one to get—it brings honor and money to the enterprising farmer. In past years the Northwest farmers have won many prizes for the best wheat—oats—potatoes—barley—the finest apples—and prize winning corn, sugar beets, alfalfa and hops are also raised. Every time a Northwest farmer wins a prize at the big land shows more settlers come into the Northwest and many times they move close by the prize winner's farm. This increases the value of his land and brings him good, ambitious neighbors, who also get the prize getting habit.

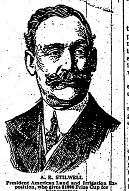
Take the great new land show—the New York Land Show, which will be held between November 3 and 12, 1911. For the best hard wheat $1,000 in gold is offered to the farmers of the world. There is a big silver cup for potatoes—a $1,000 cup. The Northwest ought to win that potato cup, as well as the wheat prize money. Then there is the Earling cup for the best oats—the James J. Hill cup for the best 100 pounds of wheat—the Busch cup for hops—the Pabst cup for barley. All these are beautiful cups, all worth $1,000, except the Pabst barley cup—that's worth $1,500. Surely the Northwest should win these cups! Where else do they raise such potatoes, wheat, barley, oats, etc.?

$500 for Apples.

President Elliott, of the Northern Pacific Railway, has offered $500 in gold for the finest apples. The apples raised in Montana, Oregon and Washington are easily the best in the world. They bring the highest prices and have the best flavor, color and keeping qualities, as the National Apple Shows have demonstrated.

It is now harvest time, and the farmers of this section should go after these prizes. The Great Northern Railway will help the farmers in their territory win these prizes. No entry fee will be charged at the New York Land Show. The Great Northern Railway will make a special arrangement to handle these exhibits. Write at once to Ed. Leedy, the General Immigration Agent at St. Paul, Minnesota, who will tell you how to pack your exhibits and where to ship them. A $1,000 prize cup or $1,000 in gold is certainly worth trying for. Send a postal to him to-day.



A. E. STILWELL

President American Land and Irrigation Exposition, who gives $1000 Prize Cup for best potatoes

Other Big Land Shows.

If the Northwest farmer will only get busy and get his good stuff together he can exhibit at most all the land shows. The Pittsburg Land Show will be between October 12th and October 28th. The Omaha Land Show will be between October 15 and 28, 1911. Then comes the New York Land Show with $11,000 in prizes; dates—November 3rd to November 12th. After the New York Land Show is the big Chicago Show, starting Saturday, November 18th, and ending December 9th.

The Northwest farmers' own show—the Northwestern Land Products Show, at St. Paul—will probably commence December 12th and continue to December 24th, 1911; and so, you see, a farmer or a community can exhibit at all the shows. Every good exhibit at any one of these shows is going to help bring new settlers to that place.

The Great Northern Railway is co-operating with the Commercial Clubs in an effort to get good displays from all sections.

JAMES J. HILL WILL SPEAK

To Deliver Principal Address Before Illinois Bankers.

Chicago, Aug. 29.—James J. Hill, the railroad magnate, will deliver the chief address on the banker-farmer program at the annual meeting of the Illinois Bankers' association in Springfield Oct. 11.

Proposed legislation affecting the bankers and railroads will be discussed in detail at the meeting. Presidents of several railroads will attend.

A Real Gas Plant.

There are two varieties of gas plant. One is a manufacturing establishment where coal is converted into gas for illuminating and heating purposes. The other variety is a real growing plant called the fraxinella. Few know why the fraxinella is called the "gas plant." This is because at certain times it releases a volatile oil that actually ignites if allowed to come in contact with a lighted match. The fraxinella is also noted for its fragrance and longevity if not disturbed. One plant in a New England garden is doing its best to outlive a third generation and elsewhere a clump is still flourishing after no less than thirty-seven years on a grave—one of the most difficult of places for a perennial to keep up a long struggle for existence, let alone a normal life.—New York World.

Gifted.

"I don't know what I'm ever going to make of that son of mine," complained a prominent Cleveland business man the other day. The old chap is self made, a graduate of the university of hard knocks and all that, and it naturally grieves him to have a son who is not aggressive.

"Maybe your son hasn't found himself yet," we consoled. "Isn't he gifted in any way?"

"Gifted! I should say he is! He ain't got a darned thing that wasn't given to him."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Big William Penn.

The statue of William Penn at the city hall in Philadelphia weighs thirty tons and is thirty-seven feet high. Some other dimensions are: Hat rim, twenty-three feet in circumference; nose, thirteen inches long; eyes, twelve inches long and four inches wide; hair, four feet long; arms, twelve feet six inches long; waist, twenty-four feet in circumference; legs, from ankle to knee, ten feet; calf, eight feet eight inches in circumference.

Beats a Good Wife.

An orator holding forth in favor of woman—dear, divine woman—concluded thus:

"Oh, my friends, depend upon it, nothing beats a good wife."

"I beg your pardon," replied a woman. "Sure, a bad husband always does."—London Telegraph.

Early Rising.

The difference between rising in the morning at 5 and 7 o'clock in the space of forty years—supposing a man to go to bed at the same hour at night—is nearly equivalent to the addition of ten years to a life of threescore years and ten.

TARIFF WILL BE MAIN QUESTION

President to Make Revision the Chief Issue in 1912.

PREPARING HIS ADDRESSES

While Taft Will Speak on Many Subjects During His Coming Western Trip the Tariff Problem Will Receive Most of His Attention—Intends to Fight Progressives on Their Native Heath.

Beverly, Mass., Aug. 29.—So far as President Taft himself is concerned the tariff will be the main issue of the 1912 campaign. While the president will speak on many subjects on his Western trip it is certain now that tariff revision will receive most of his attention.

Following his speech to the Essex County Republican club at Hamilton on Saturday the president began to prepare other speeches on the tariff. He secured copies of his veto message on the wool, farmers' free list and cotton bills and at once set to work upon addresses which he expects to deliver later, backing up those vetoes.

Mr. Taft is said to realize that he must not merely defend himself for having rejected these bills, but that he must attack the Democrats and progressive Republicans who put them through congress.

The attack upon the Democrats the president can make almost anywhere. It is understood the fight upon the progressives will be confined largely to their own territory. The president will carry the war West into the "enemy's country."

Attack Clearly Defined.

The nature of attack is pretty clearly defined already—it will be, in substance, that the progressives, who voted for a tariff board should have been willing to wait for its report; that the revision bills the Democrats and progressives drew at the special session were "ill considered" and "badly drawn," and that great industries of the country should not be put in jeopardy by such legislation when revision, if recommended by the tariff board, might be expected anyway a few months later.

It is also probable that the president will promise tariff reform so far as he can bring it about at the next session of congress.

It is quite possible that the progressives will be under fire from the president also on the subject of reciprocity. The president has heard enough from Western congressmen to know that reciprocity is not popular in some states west of the Mississippi.

Of the other main topics already selected currency reform is admitted to be of great interest because of the idea that the proposed legislation may foreshadow a central bank. The president may talk extensively on this subject.

TOUR WILL BEGIN SEPT. 15

President Taft to Visit Twenty-four States.

Beverly, Mass., Aug. 29.—Twenty-four states of the Union will be visited by President Taft on the swing around the circuit, according to a schedule partially completed at the executive offices. The president will start Sept. 15 and, with the exception of five states and Arizona and New Mexico, he will pass through every commonwealth west of the Mississippi.

Included in the twenty-four are Massachusetts, New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Michigan, Illinois, Indiana, Missouri, Iowa, Kansas, Nebraska, Colorado, Wyoming, Utah, Nevada, California, Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Montana, South Dakota, Minnesota, Wisconsin and Maryland.

BIG "SLUSH" FUND ALLEGED

Canadian Paper Offers Reward for Names of Contributors.

Ottawa, Ont., Aug. 29.—Under black headlines, "Canadian Election Campaign Fund," the Montreal Star, which is opposing reciprocity, published the following:

"The Montreal Star hereby offers $25,000 reward for information, placed in the hands of three judges of the supreme court of Canada and three judges of the superior court, three Conservatives and three Liberals, that will, in the opinion of these judges, enable the court to trace to its source the enormous campaign fund sent from the United States to Canada to be used in influencing the judgment of the Canadian people in deciding what is to be a national question of supreme importance."

Recall Election in Wichita.

Wichita, Kan., Aug. 29.—Wichita will hold a recall election, probably on Oct. 3, to decide whether Mayor J. H. Graham and City Commissioners E. M. Leach and Robert B. Campbell are to retain their offices. The mayor and commissioners met and voted to call the election as petitioned for by about 3,500 persons, who desire the removal of these city officials.

Literary Cure For Snoring.

To the snorers who ask for the cure let the cause be announced. Snoring is the result of stomachic repletion and mental vacuity. A correspondent who has suffered from both prescribes the cure—a light supper or none, to avoid repletion, and the frequent repetition of some literary phrase to provide occupation for the mind during sleeping hours. Go to bed and think of some short literary phrase to occupy your mind. The combination of the two prescriptions against snoring—the abstention from food and the meditation upon a literary phrase—may be found in Ecclesiasticus, the ninetieth verse of the thirty-first chapter. "How sufficient to a well mannered man is a very little, and he doth not breathe hard upon his bed."—London Spectator.

COLONEL JOHN M'ELROY.

COLONEL M'ELROY DROPS OUT

Judge Trimble Chosen Commander of the Grand Army.

Rochester, N. Y., Aug. 26.—Judge Harvey M. Trimble of Illinois was unanimously elected commander-in-chief of the Grand Army of the Republic when Colonel John McElroy of Washington, his opponent, ended a bitter contest by withdrawing from the race. On motion of Colonel McElroy the adjutant general cast one vote for Judge Trimble. The Sherman pension bill was endorsed.

Colonel Nicholas Day of New York city was elected senior vice commander. The election and installation of the officers and the selection of Los Angeles for the next encampment closed the encampment.

THEATER HORROR IN PENNSYLVANIA TOWN

Twenty-six Persons Killed and Many Injured in Panic.

Canonsburg, Pa., Aug. 26.—Crushed and mangled in a panic caused by the explosion of a moving picture film, twenty-six persons, chiefly boys and girls, were killed and sixty-eight injured in the Morgan Opera House here tonight.

A flash of flame, a cry of fire, a mad rush, in which men and women fought with each other and trampled down children—it was all over in a few minutes, leaving its awful toll of death and injury.

The moving picture cage was in the second gallery and the stairs were all inside, leading from the second to the first balcony and from that to the main floor. All of the occupants of the crowded house dashed for these stairs and instantly the jam at the main exit was solid. Those who had presence of mind enough to seek the fire escapes were not injured, but the majority joined in the wild rush for the stairs.

When the first rescuers made their way into the main entrance they confronted a solid wall of humanity, many of them dead, others terribly wounded. The cries of the women and children were awful to hear and half the men who started to their rescue were sickened by the horror. All the ambulances and vehicles within call were summoned to carry the dead and injured to an improvised morgue or to the hospitals. The fire caused no damage, being confined to the moving picture cage.

PINCHOT IS FOR LA FOLLETTE

Prefers Wisconsin Man to Taft for the Presidency.

St. Paul, Aug. 29.—Gifford Pinchot, former chief forester in the department of agriculture, who stopped off in St. Paul on his way to Alaska, where he purposes to get first hand knowledge of that country's resources, declared that the development of that territory was going to be one of the two big questions before the next session of congress. Mr Pinchot also came out in words of strong praise for Senator La Follette and made it plain that he favors the Wisconsin man for president in preference to Mr. Taft.

SIX MEN PERISH IN DISASTER

Four Other Miners at Point of Death From Injuries.

Ely, Nev., Aug. 25.—Of ten men who were working at the 1,400-foot level of the new five-compartment shaft of the Giroux Consolidated mines when it caught fire six are dead and four lie at the point of death after passing through the flames to reach the surface. The dead are Daniel Drea, secretary of the local miners' union; T. J. Gilmore, shift boss; John Wilhelmy, Thomas O. Dolovich, Edward Walsh, John McNulty.

Secret Baseball Signals.

"Perhaps you never realized that there is an exact science in coaching and signaling," says Hugh S. Fullerton, writing on the secret tricks of baseball coaching in the American Magazine: "that the two men out there near first and third bases, who seem to be making fools of themselves or trying to annoy the majestic man in blue serge, are the wigwag men signaling to runners or batters just what the general sitting on the bench wants them to try to do. Sometimes the general is on the lines himself, looking just as foolish as the wigwag men or more so, but somewhere, hidden in his meaningless or hackneyed phrases or his wild gestures, there is a meaning. He is telling the batter not to hit the next ball or is informing him that the next will be a straight fast ball and at the same time informing the base runner that the batter intends to hit and that he must start at top speed when the pitcher starts to wind up."

Salt Water Bathing.

Dr. Copeman of Brighton, England, writing in the Practitioner, London, gives some advice on sea bathing. "The best time to bathe is about two hours after breakfast, the period of greatest vital activity," says Dr. Copeman. "The one time which must be avoided by all is after a full meal. During the process of digestion the vessels of the internal organs are already engorged with blood, and the shock of the cold water is apt to produce a very dangerous condition of congestion, the least of many penalties that may accrue being an acute attack of indigestion. With many keen bathers it is an article of faith to bathe before breakfast. But business men, after months of unremitting toil, those who are below par or who are getting on in years, should avoid taxing their system by bathing at such a time. Even the most robust would be wise to partake of a cup of hot milk before leaving the house."

Salt.

Salt production is about the oldest industry in the world. In Italy, the cradle of the salt industry, it has been manufactured commercially for 2,500 years. Salt is so necessary to existence that in some parts of the world tribes will sell the members of their families in exchange for salt. Salt has been the cause of wars, and so important has it always been considered that in some places the passing of salt is established as a token of friendship, and women throw salt on a visitor as a friendly greeting. In some countries salt is so scarce that it is obtained through the ashes of grasses and a species of palm and other plants. While salt is produced in almost every country in the world, it is stated that nowhere can salt of such purity be obtained at anything like the cost for mining as in Louisiana.—Manufacturers' Record.

NEWS FROM STATE FAIR

Press Representative Tells How Farmers League Was Organized Wednesday.

The persistent rainy weather has made it impossible to carry out the race track program. Large crowds have attended the fair and have examined the different exhibits all the more carefully because of the rather inclement weather. The different exhibit buildings are none too large when the weather turns rainy and all at the grounds instinctively turn to the buildings, thinking to examine their contents while the weather is so wet. Yet it must be written that the state fair is very much better housed now than it was some eight years ago, when the writer last visited it. New, replaced, and enlarged buildings have transformed the entire grounds—all for the better. The fair itself is becoming more and more educative in its nature and to get full benefit of the exhibits one needs the better part of a week, to say the least. No one can see the fair of Minnesota any more in one day, no matter how assiduously he may work. He can only see some particular line in which he may be interested.

To-day (Wednesday) was farmers' day and they held out in Institute Hall, where they met to consider organization for political purposes, pursuant to a call by P. V. Collins of the Northwestern Agriculturist.

A large crowd was there in answer to the call and their meeting was the main feature of the day. Many of those present had come to the fair because of this meeting.

The meeting, after being called to order by P. V. Collins, opened with the singing of America, Band music by the Warren band and finally the singing of the State song.

Mr. Collins then spoke at some length on the purpose of the meeting and the need of organization among farmers. He said both the large parties in congress had "sold the farmers" and that it was therefore necessary for them to organize and introduce "team-work." He said the farmers were only asking for "rights inherent in citizenship" when they demanded a fair and square deal. He said he had been warned not to array farmers against the cities; class against class; but he denied that he had done so, saying it was the representation of the cities and of the big interests that had done so by their attitude toward the farmer.

Mr. Wilkinson was chosen temporary chairman, with Mr. Collins as secretary.

In his acceptance speech Mr. Wilkinson scored President Taft for his inconsistencies in demanding expert tariff sanction to the wool list and farmers free-list bills when he had considered no such thing necessary in drawing the Canadian Reciprocity agreement. Nay, in doing this latter he had not even consulted a single farmer—though their interests were most largely to be affected by the proposed agreement.

Other speakers heard were: Mr. Meehan of Farmers' Alliance fame; Gov. A. O. Eberhart, Congressman S. M. Anderson, Henry Feig and others.

After some debate it was decided to perfect organization at this meeting. The temporary organizations were made permanent, a constitution and by-laws were drawn up by a committee consisting of Feig, Morle and Spencer. This was gone thru article by article and after some amendments accepted by almost unanimous votes on every article as amended.

The name adopted for the organi-

TRAVELERS 12 ST. HILAIRE 11

Heavy batting of Travelers And Effective Work of Hess Wins Game.

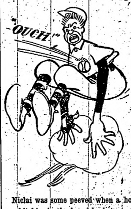
There are a few sensations that you have not yet experienced, if you faied to see the ball game played at the fair grounds last Sunday between the Thief River Falls Travelers and the St. Hilaire Spectators. The game was exciting and interesting from start to finish. One man said it was the most interesting game he had seen this season, and he didn't look as tho he had been spending his time in the backwoods, either.

The Travelers took the lead in the first inning, when Hess scored on a hit, Lambert's sacrifice and Johnstone's hit, and kept the lead thruout the game. The Saints threatend to do things several times, but the best they could do was come within one of it.

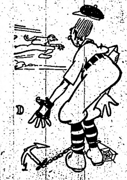
Hess and Doc. Owens each had about the same quality of support, but Hess had much the better of it because his control was good, while Owens was given to plugging men, or making a wild heave, at most inopportune times. Hess held the visitors safely in the rear for eight innings. In the ninth he weakened somewhat, allowing four runs before the side was retired, but not enough to tie the score—the referee's decision being 12 to 11 in favor of the Travelers.

By innings:	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9	T
Travelers	1	0	3	1	2	0	0	5	x	12
St. Hilaire	0	1	1	0	1	0	1	3	4	11

There were some features of the game that are better pictured than described. The two cartoons following will speak volumes to those who witnessed the game.



Niclai was some peeved when a hot one hit him in the bread-basket.



Bane couldn't have covered less ground, had he been tied to the Rock of Gibraltar.

MUST FILE LICENSE

In the hurry and bustle of their professional life, a great many of the physicians, surgeons and dentists of Thief River Falls have neglected to file their licenses with the clerk of the district court. The law requires that persons engaged in the above professions file their licenses in the county in which they reside and failure to do so constitutes a misdemeanor. This matter should be attended to before the first of the new year, because at that time the clerk is required by law to furnish to the secretary of the board a list of licenses that have been filed. Even now the neglectful ones are liable to a fine.

COMMISSION GOVERNMENT

Old and New Plan Are Compared By an Authority on Economics.

James A. Edgerton compares the old plan of city government with the new system of city government by commission thus:

The Old Plan

Government by a mayor, some minor elective officers, and a debating society called a "council."

Each officer has power to block the other officers. They call it "checks and balances." Each officer blames the next if you complain.

Needs a "boss" to hold the ramshackle together.

The citizen has to "go into politics" at the sacrifice of his earning power before he counts.

Citizenship is a learned profession.

Government by politicians instead of government by the people—oligarchy instead of democracy.

Good officials getting no credit.

The New Plan

Government by a single compact commission elected at large. No other elective officers.

Nobody they can blame but themselves if you complain.

No lost motion—no pulling and hauling.

Conspicuous responsibility.

A short ballot.

Every citizen easily masters his job on election day, makes up his own ticket and knows what he is doing.

Politicians out of business—no need for them.

No confusion, no obscurity, no chance for rascals to slip through at election time without detection.

Nonpartisan ballot.

Nominations all by petition.

The people without any moral revolution or sacrifice of earning power, sitting comfortably in the boss' chair.

Officials give good government because that's the way to keep popular.

Initiative, referendum and recall for emergencies.

HAS NEW OFFICE

C. W. McDaniel, the real estate man who moved here this spring from Osakis and had his office temporarily with Bakke Bros., on Third St. has now rented the building at 217½ LaBree Ave., formerly occupied by the Huseth barber shop, and will soon move into and use it as a real estate office. The office is now being papered and painted, so as to make itone of the neatest and most pleasant offices in the city. Mr. McDaniel has been with us but a short time, but during this time he has shown that he intends to stay, is here for business, is getting the business, and is trying all the time to get what we most need—actual settlers for our vast farming country.

WILL ADVERTISE THIS SECTION

Commercial Club Has Closed Contract For Ads In 30 Different Papers.

The Commercial Club has a contract with the C. Rasmussen Advertising Company of Minneapolis, Minnesota, for the insertion of an advertisement setting forth the advantages of this city and surrounding country. The contract embraces a four-page write-up in one paper with illustrations, a two page description in another and a four inch three column advertisement in twenty eight others. The combined circulation of all the papers is more than Two Hundred Thousand, and their subscribers are located in more than twelve of the Middle Western states. A copy of the illustrated edition will be mailed to practically every taxpayer in this county.

A number of the business men responded and inserted advertisements and thus made it possible for the Commercial Club to secure a special rate. These papers have a large circulation among the working classes and it is hoped that a good number will be induced to come this way with a view of locating here on the rich land that lies vacant. Special emphasis was laid on the agricultural posibilities in this section, and the Club is in hope that all the citizens will join in and boost our country and above all answer the inquiries that may come to them, honestly and promptly. If you have not the time to answer letters of inquiry, turn them over to the Secretary of the Commercial Club, and he will do it for you.

NEW LUMBER YARD

The Thief River Falls Manufacturnig Company will, within a short time, have in connection with their present factory a retail lumber yard, located east of the present site on the lots facing Main street. The foundation for a 54 ft. by 80 ft. shed has been laid, and work on the building will be rushed until its completion, which will take two weeks. Eight cars of lumber have been ordered, which will soon be here. The company will be able to handle all kinds of retail orders. Sam Johnson will have charge of the yard.

Just now the factory is paying special attention to a large order for the Tatalseth Department store of Warren. They are getting out the window paneling, shelving and office fixtures.

POSTAL SAVINGS DEPOSITORY.

The local postoffice became a postal savings depository August 25th. The first day 3 deposits were received. Up to Wednesday Sept. 6th there had been only nine deposits, ranging in amounts of from $1 to $5, and made by people of this city. The accounts in this city are coming in much slower than in most cities this size. The Bemidji postoffice, which was the first in this state to become a depository, has taken in nearly $3000. In Minneapolis, where a depository was established recently, the office received $1500 the first day.

The main attraction of the postal savings depository is that it has the U. S. government back of it. It would appear, however, that in this section most of the people are perfectly willing to take a chance on the local banks. Thief River Falls has four banks, all of them enjoying a good patronage becouse they are working along up-to-date and aggressive lines. They have worthily obtained the confidence of the people, and perhaps that is the reason the local postoffice does not receive more accounts.

BOY COMES NEAR DROWNING

Upsets Duck Boat and Is Rescued From Drowning By LeRoy Allan.

Last Friday Frances Burns upset his duck boat in about ten feet of water just above Squaw Point, and but for the heroic work of LeRoy Allan, who was with him, would have drowned. On Friday Frances was 16 years of age, and in order to celebrate his birthday he and Mr. Allan got together their fishing tackle and a small rifle, took the boat and went up the river to spend the day fishing.

On their return Mr. Allan was sitting in the rear and Frances was sitting on a box in the center of the boat. When they had reached the deepest part of the river, Frances lost his balance, slid over the side of the boat, turning it upside down. He went to the bottom and came up several feet away from the boat, but being unable to swim could not reach the boat. In the meantime Mr. Allan righted the boat, swam out to where the boy went down, and on his second appearance got him and brot him over to the boat where he held the struggling lad for a few seconds. But in the struggle the boat was again overturned and this time the boy came up under the boat. Again Mr. Allan rescued him, and by diligent effort managed to quiet the boy and get him to shore.

Both man and boy are sound and well today, and on Saturday and Sunday they recovered their fishing tackle, a can of bait, a fish they had caught, and the rifle.

Mr. Allan is from Arkansas and has been spending his summer vacation here as the guest of C. W. McDaniel, the real estate man. He is an expert swimmer and a man with great presence of mind. He is certainly worthy of much praise for his actions last Friday.

This accident ought to serve as a good warning to you other boys who cannot swim, but are in the habit of taking out light boats or canoes that are easily overturned.

Seriously Hurt In Runaway

Last Sunday morning when the Connelly girls, Elenor and Anna, were returning from church, driving their grey horse, the strap holding up the breeching became loose and dropped down on the horse's heels. The horse, rather nervous under ordinary conditions, then became frightened and was soon running at breakneck speed. Elenor, the driver, kept her head in good shape and successfully made the turn leading on to the road running west to the Connelly home, but in making the turn leading into the yard the buggy was overturned and the girls thrown violently to the ground. Elenor escaped with a sprained wrist, but Anna was more seriously injured, she receiving a severe hip bruise. According to reports, both girls are getting along nicely. However, it is quite likely that Anna will be laid up for some time. She was engaged to teach in the seventh grade of the city schools, and was to have begun work last Tuesday.

Several people saw the runaway and said that the horse "fairly flew." H. E. Ives, his wife and two babies, were out driving, and Mr. Ives got sidetracked just in time to avoid a mixup. The horse is a trifle skittish and prone to notice little things, but is not generally considered dangerous. The girls would have had no difficulty in stopping him had

THE SOCIALIST PARTY PLATFORM

National Socialist Party Platform And Platform Of Local Socialists Outlined.

Issued by the National Executive Committee Socialist Party. 180 Washington Street, Chicago.

Principles, Human life depends upon food, clothing and shelter. Only with these assured are freedom, culture and higher human development possible. To produce food, clothing or shelter, land and machinery are needed. Land alone does not satisfy human needs. Human labor creates machinery and applies it to the land for the production of raw materials and food. Whoever has control of land and machinery controls human labor, and with it human life and liberty.

Today the machinery and the land used for industrial purposes are owned by a rapidly decreasing minority. So long as machinery is simple and easily handled by one man, its owner cannot dominate the sources of life of others. But when machinery becomes complex and expensive, and requires for its effective operation the organized effort of many workers, its influence reaches over wide circles of life. The owners of such machinery become the dominant class.

In proportion as the number of such owners compared to all other classes decreases, their power in the nation and in the world increases. They bring ever larger masses of working people under their control, reducing them to the point where muscle and brain are their only productive property. Millions of formerly self-employing workers thus become the helpless wage slaves of the industrial masters.

As the economic power of the ruling class grows it becomes less useful in the life of the nation. All the useful work of the nation falls upon the shoulders of the class whose only property is its manual and mental labor power—the wage worker—or of the class who have little land and little effective machinery outside of their labor power—the small traders and small farmers. The ruling minority is steadily becoming useless and parasitic.

A bitter struggle over the division of the products of labor is waged between the exploiting propertied class on the one hand and the exploited propertyless class on the other. In this struggle the wage working class cannot expect adequate relief from any reform of the present order at the hands of the dominant class.

The wage workers are therefore the most determined and irreconcilable antagonists of the ruling class. They suffer most from the curse of class rule. The fact that a few capitalists are permitted to control all the country's industrial resources and social tools for their individual profit, and to make the production of the necessaries of life the object of competitive private enterprise and speculation is at the bottom of all the social evils of our time.

In spite of the organization of trusts, pools and combinations, the capitalists are powerless to regulate production for social ends. Industries are largely conducted in a planless manner. Through periods of feverish activity the strength and health of the workers are mercilessly used up, and during periods of enforced idleness the workers are frequently reduced to starvation.

The climax of this system of production are the regularly recurring industrial depressions and crises which paralyze the nation every fifteen or twenty years.

DEMOCRACY OR AN OLIGARCHY OF GOLD?

Former Sen. Aldrich is still on the job. He's on it more than ever. The job is different; that's all.

Delivering both ends of congress and both parties to the money trusts is no small task, but that's what Aldrich is trying to do.

This is not a hopeless undertaking. To the man who put over the Payne-Aldrich tariff revision, with its wool and sugar schedules, all things are possible.

The "Aldrich bank plan" is a scheme to "reform" our banking and currency laws, and thereby create a government-authorized trust for the exclusive control of the nation's credits.

Such control is at present nearly an accomplished fact. The Morgan group is practically without competition in the financial world today. There is no man, business or corporation big enough to defy "it."

The example of Heinze and Morse, the spectacle of the absorption of Tennessee Coal & Iron, the shaking down of the Knickerbocker trust, are warnings sufficient to convince the business man who is sane.

Standard Oil is now in the Morgan partnership. The banks and trust companies of the Middle West and West have long taken orders from Wall St. Railroads, insurance companies and industrial concerns, the heart and arteries of the commercial body of the United States, are in the grip of the "uncrowned king," before whom even our president and leaders of congress bow down.

But why not give this a legal form? Why not charter this monopoly? Why not turn all the government's fiscal operations over to the gigantic trust so chartered? Why not transfer the money-issuing function from the treasury department? Why not make this money trust the recipient of all government deposits without interest? Why not concentrate in the hands of a few financiers who now control the Morgan concerns all the power in the business and financial world? Why not give the power to make prosperity or to break prosperity into these hands?

That power would then be the government. No political campaign could be made against it. "Reform" would mean "hard times". The credit trust would give the order to curtail. Money would be scarce. Loans would be difficult; banks would get their orders to hold their cash reserves. The country would be helpless.

The creation of this money trust; the chartering by congress of this monster fiscal holding company, is the task to which former Sen. Aldrich has dedicated his time and strength

He calls it "currency reform."

And Aldrich is right.

It is reform—the kind of reform that would turn a democracy into an oligarchy of gold.—St. Paul Daily News.

THE UNEMPLOYED

The annual convention of the Unemployed, booked next week for Washington, will provoke the contemptuous sneer from the prosperous citizen that all these men could find work if they wanted it.

One thousand members, it is announced, are to walk from Baltimore to Washington to attend.

The fake side of unemployment is suggested by the recent remark credited to the manager of the leading employment house in Chicago; "No able bodied man need want work more than a short time. Every day in the year I have applications for men that simply go to waste because I can't fill them. Ninety per cent of the unemployed don't want to work."

B. C. Marsh, secretary of the Pennsylvania Society to Protect Children, recently studied 112 "unemployed men." He found that 106 had given up one or more jobs in six months. Employment was secured for 31, but only six of these men stuck to their work. Forty five men, when they learned that work was being sought for them, suddenly disappeared. Mr. Marsh put on old clothes one day, and tramped the streets looking for work. He was offered 16 jobs.

The starting of public enterprises for the purpose of furnishing employment is not wholly a success. An English report on such an institution states that men would give up jobs paying 20 shillings per week to take public jobs for the unemployed paying 5 to 7 shillings a week for part time.

The above, however, is not the whole picture. The number of people who have been physically enfeebled by child labor is far greater than we suppose. A host of men 25 to 30 years old find all their vitality sapped by the strain of toil at an age when they should have been at school and vegetating in the open air. Who can blame them if their blood flows cold and pale, if they have no heart for the industry that cheers the normal man.

A TRAVELINGMAN'S OPINION

In a communication to the Thief River Falls News, a travelingman speaks on the hotel question as follows:

To the citizens of Thief River Falls:

Although you could support a good hotel you have two poor ones. A poor hotel looks bad for a town of your size. Of course, we do not expect, in this part of the country, a hotel of elaborate magnificense, which has a pillared office supplied with leather-cushioned easy chairs and divans, faultless elevator service, and a Hungarian band to play at meals. But we do want a good cooked meal and a clean bed.

Citizens, your hotels are very poor; I might say, a bad advertisement. Take this to heart, citizens of Thief River Falls; get people who know how to run a hotel, and try to give the traveling public some accomodation of which the hotels you have at present are lacking. Then we traveling men will advertise your hotels.

Hoping that these few lines will reach the right spot, I beg to remain

Yours truly,

A TRAVELINGMAN.

Hon. Halvor Steenerson,

it not been for the fact that the buggy was constantly bumping him and the breeching tickling his legs. Perhaps a few days on the plow this fall would make him less sensitive to the more trivial things of life.

The capitalist class, in its mad race for profits, is bound to exploit the workers to the very limit of their endurance and to sacrifice their physical, moral and mental welfare to its own insatiable greed. Captialism keeps the masses of workingmen in poverty, destitution, physicial exhaustion and ignorance. It drags their wives from their homes to the mill and factory. It snatches their children from the playgrounds and schools and grinds their slender bodies and unformed minds into cold dollars. It disfigures, maims and kills hundreds of thousands of workingmen annually in mines, on railroads and in factories. It drives millions of workers into the ranks of the unemployed and forces large numbers of them into beggary, vagrancy and all forms of crime and vice.

To maintain their rule over their fellow men, the capitalists must keep in their pay all organs of the public powers, public mind and public conscience. They control the dominant parties and, through them, the elected public officials. They select the executives, bribe the legislature and corrupt the courts of justice. They own and censor the press. They dominate the educational institutions. They own the nation politically and intellectually just as they own it industrially.

The struggle between wage workers and capitalists grows ever fiercer, and has now become the only vital issue before the American people. The wage-working class, therefore, has the most direct interest in abolishing the capitalist system. But in abolishing the present system, the workingmen will free not only their own class, but also all other classes of modern society. The small farmer, who is to-day exploited by large capital more indirectly but not less effectively than is the wage laborer, the small manufacturer and trader, who is engaged in a desperate and losing struggle for economic independence in the face of the allconquering power of concentrated capital; and even the capitalist himself, who is the slave of his wealth rather than its master. The struggle of the working class against the capitalist class, while it is a class struggle, is thus at the same time a struggle for the abolition of all classes and class privileges.

The private ownership of the land and means of production used for exploitation, is the rock upon which class rule is built; political government is its indispensable instrument. The wage-workers cannot be freed from exploitation without conquering the political power and substituting collective for private ownership of the land and means of production uesd for exploitation.

The basis for such transformation is rapidly developing within present capitalist society. The factory system, with its complex machinery and minute division of labor, is rapidly destroying all vestiges of individual production in manufacture. Modern production is already very largely a collective and social process. The great trusts and monopolies which have sprung up in recent years have organized the work and management of the principal industries on a national scale, and have fitted them for collective use and operation.

There can be no absolute private title to land. All private titles, whether called fee simple or otherwise, are and must be subordinate to the public title. The Socialist Party strives to prevent land from being used for the purpose of exploitation and speculation. It demands the collective possession, control of management of land to whatever extent may be necessary to attain that end. It is not opposed to the occupation and possession of land by those using it in a useful and bona fide manner without exploitation.

The Socialist Party is primarily an economic and political movement. It is not concerned with matters of religious belief.

In the struggle for freedom the interests of all modern workers are identical. The struggle is not only national but international. It embraces the world and will be carried to ultimate victory by the united workers of the world.

To unite the workers of the nation and their allies and sympathizers of all other classes to this end, is the mission of the Socialist Party. In this battle for freedom the Socialist Party does not strive to substitute working class rule for capitalist class rule, but by working class victory, to free all humanity from class rule and to realize the international brotherhood of man.

Platform.

The above are the principles of the National Socialist Party platform, adopted in May 1908, and it expresses perfectly the principles and aim of the Socialist Party.

It is, of course, impossible for us the Public Ownership Party of Thief River Falls, to attain a full realization of these ultimate aims in this city. But we nevertheless, pledge ourselves to work for all measures, calcluated to strengthen the working class in their fight, for the realization of the co-operative Commonwealth, and to increase its power of resistance against capitalist oppression.

We pledge ourselves to work for:

First. Honesty, economy and efficency in the administration of the city's affairs.

Second. Eight hour working day, at ten hours pay for all workers engaged directly on municipal work.

Third. The abolition of the contract system on all municipal work.

Fourth. That the city extend the municipal ownership as much as practical and to this end we will work for, to establish publically owned coal and wood yards and also ice house to furnish these necessaries to the citizens at cost. Alsa the preseravtion of all municipal owned buildings, industries and resources.

Fifth. The establishment of a free employment agency, to be conducted by the police department.

Sixth. To give the city a more modern charter, insuring democracy in government, including direct legislation through the initiative and referendum, and the recall of officers by their constituents.

Seventh. In view of the fact that the liquor traffic, has been more subjected to state and municipal regulations than any other capitalis institution, but is almost as unregulated as ever, and the clamor is for more regulations, without knowing the simple truth that society can not relate what it does not own. The Public Ownership Party maintains That the profits derived from the liquor traffic is the cause of the evils of that traffic, and therefore, the only solution of the problem will be for society to own the distillries, breweries and places where it is disposed off and to sell it to the public at cost, and then society will not be hindered by private interest in the regulations of that traffic. The masses will still have to learn that the escence of regulation is ownership, and when that is acquired, then the temperance work will be crowned with success. But this is a state issue more than a local one. Locally we pledge ourselves to work for the enforcement of the present laws—if such a thing be possible under our high license system.

Eight. Realizing that to preserve the health of the people of Thief River Falls, is of the utmost importance, we pledge ourselves to work for the establishment of all sanitary measures possible. To this end we will first; do away with the present method of disposing of the refuse of the city and establish more modern methods. Second, to co-operate with the citizens for beautifying the city. Third, to secure efficient hospital accommodation.

Ninth. We pledge every candidate that runs for office on the Public Ownership ticket to sign his resignation from office before election, dated blank and to be placed in the hands of the Public Ownership Party.

Tenth. It is not claimed that by winning an issolated victory in a city like Thief River Falls, we can have the collective ownership of production and distribution, i. e. Socialism. But such a victory would be a step forward, a milestone on the way of human progress.

Fred Sheldrew, Grygla—Limited

There were granted in all eighteen certificates. We have only a word of commendation to those candidates who worked hard in school and in the Summer Training school to make up credits. Returns show good averages.

To judge from present indications all our schools will be supplied with teachers. School boards that have not hired teachers should take the matter up for consideration at once and let such teachers as may have put in their applications know, because some of these may have other positions offered to them—they can not afford to wait not knowing if an application will be accepted.

School boards defering action of hiring a teacher may find themselves without a teacher, for this reason, when shcool opens.

Delays in sending in Clerk's Annual reports has also defered sending out from this office of the necessary certificates to the clerks.

The Superintendent will be glad to meet all teachers and officers in the new quarters of the Court House.

Respectfully,
E. A. MOSTUE.

KILLS YOUNG GIRL AND THEN HIMSELF

Rejected Suitor Slays Niece of Robert A. Van Wyck.

Quogue, N. Y., Sept. 5.—Miss Catherine Van Wyck, nineteen years old, a niece of former Mayor Robert A. Van Wyck and of Supreme Court Justice Augustus Van Wyck, was shot and killed by William A. Childs, Jr., the son of a retired dealer in electrical supplies. After killing the young woman Childs shot and killed himself.

Childs had been attentive to Miss Van Wyck. Both were walking on the beach when Childs suddenly drew a revolver and began shooting. It is supposed Miss Van Wyck failed to reciprocate Childs' attentions.

Before bystanders could reach the couple Miss Van Wyck was dead and Childs was dying.

Two years ago Miss Van Wyck went to Europe, where her beauty attracted much attention and she was entertained by many prominent members of the American colony in Paris while she was visiting her uncle, the former mayor.

William A. Childs, Sr., is accounted wealthy. On retirement he had established two of his sons, Theodore and Arthur, in business in Southern California.

TRAGEDY AT SQUAW DANCE

White Earth, Minn., Sept. 5.—Indian Policeman Hutchins of the White Earth agency staff blew off his head with a revolver at a squaw dance held at Big Bend. Several Indians and halfbreeds are under arrest on a charge of selling liquor.

Policeman Hutchins was sent to preserve order at the dance. Hutchins, instead of confiscating the liquors he found on the Indians, got drunk, it is said, and trouble started. Drunk and almost crazy with whisky Hutchins pulled out his gun and blew out his brains. After his death the dance proceeded. Two other Indian policemen appeared on the scene and Policeman Star Bad Boy seized the whisky and obtained proof against the men who brought the whisky from Detroit.

Farmer's Skull Is Crushed.

Pipestone, Minn., Sept. 5.—Fred Schiefelbein, a farmer residing near Clear Lake, is dead as the result of an accident. It traveled along its track with great speed and left the rail, falling and striking Schiefenbein and crushing his skull.

Clinton, Ia., Sept. 5.—Oteo Brown, twenty-one years old, was shot and killed by Elvin Brown of Aurora, Ill., at a negro picnic, the murderer turning the gun on an inoffending person whose brother, he asserted, owed him $1.30. The murderer escaped.

BEATTIE FACES HARD GRILLING

Prosecutor Vigorously Cross-Examines Young Virginian.

Chesterfield Courthouse, Va., Sept. 5.—Through six weary hours in a stuffy little courtroom Henry Clay Beattie, Jr., indicted for the murder of his wife, battled for his life. Night interrupted a vigorous cross-examination by the commonwealth.

The prisoner, always cool and collected, told the gruesome story of the attack of the highwayman, the wild ride to the Owen home at a speed of fifty-five miles an hour with the lifeless, blood covered body of his wife on a seat of the motor car beside him.

Beattie, by request of the prosecution, donned the blood stained coat he wore the night of the murder and attempted to explain why blood spots did not appear on certain parts of the garment if his wife was reclined against him in the way he described.

ROADS REJECT MEN'S DEMANDS

Harriman Lines Refuse to Recognize New Federation.

SITUATION IS VERY GRAVE

Vice President Kruttschnitt Declares Recognition of Federation Would Hamper Company in Performing Its Duty to the Public—Union Leaders Considering Strike Vote and Developments May Come Soon.

San Francisco, Sept. 2.—The Southern Pacific Railroad company, through Julius Kruttschnitt, vice president and director of maintenance and operation of the Harriman lines, rejected a demand for recognition of the federation of shop employes, comprising five shop crafts unions and 25,000 men.

That such recognition, with its implications, would hamper the company in performing its duty to the public was the position taken by its officials.

Union leaders asked for it on grounds of economy and expedition and, admittedly, because of a feeling that greater centralization of capital and power made corresponding centralization among unions desirable.

The unions involved had asked their general officers for permission to strike in the event of the refusal to grant recognition of the federation.

A conference lasting three hours and twenty minutes was terminated by Mr. Kruttschnitt's final answer and following it the union representatives, sober faced, went into session by themselves to consider the strike vote, which they may accept as binding or may reject, refusing to sanction a strike.

President Kline, it was learned, presented the case for the unions and replied to questions put to him by the railroad officials, who acted without a formal spokesman during the discussion.

Mr. Kline based his pleading on economic grounds and one of the officials said "held his own" in the questioning from his angle of the case. Once or twice the discussion became lively, but it never ranged beyond coolheaded argument.

The railroad officials in their turn took the position—already publicly announced by Mr. Kruttschnitt—that the federation's power and demands would render it impossible for them to perform the duties and carry the responsibilities which are imposed upon them by law and which make them, in the words of Mr. Kruttschnitt, "quasi-public officials."

GOTCH IS AN EASY WINNER

Throws Hackenschmidt Twice In About Twenty Minutes.

Chicago, Sept. 5.—In a one sided contest, in which one George Hackenschmidt, the alleged Russian Lion, exhibited a wide stripe of saffron, Frank Gotch, world's champion catch-as-catch can wrestler, successfully defended his title, consuming less than twenty minutes of time actual wrestling in demonstrating his superiority over the big foreigner.

Gotch pinned the Lion's shoulders to the mat for the first fall in 14 minutes and 18 seconds, winning on a reverse body hold.

The second and deciding fall was won by the champion in 5 minutes and 32 seconds, Hack going down under the strain of the famous toe hold.

LAUNCH IS SUNK BY BIG STEAMER

Accident at Toledo, O., Costs Lives of Seven Men.

Toledo, O., Sept. 3.—Seven men were drowned in the Maumee river when the thirty-five-foot launch Nemo, owned by Michael Mayer, was struck by the 500-foot freighter, Phillip Minch, inbound for the Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton docks. The drowned are:

The party was bound for Kelley's island, where they expected to do some bass fishing over the Labor day holiday. With the exception of Michael Mayer, owner of the launch, all were drowned. Mayer was saved by members of the crew of the Minch. None of the bodies have been recovered.

Captain Cummings of the Minch says that the wheelman was throwing the searchlight across the river channel, looking for channel stakes, when they first espied the launch, which he thought was a mile and a half distant. The launch was then 150 feet out of the course of the channel to the westward.

The steamer blew the danger signals, but before the launch could change its course the freighter crashed into the small boat, capsizing it and throwing the occupants into the water.

WANTS GOVERNMENT CONTROL

Secretary Fisher's Plan for Development of Alaska Coal Lands.

Cordova, Alaska, Aug. 31.—In a talk to a number of prominent citizens Secretary of the Interior Fisher declared that, in his opinion, the coal of Alaska should not be turned over to private interests for exploitation.

Two plans for prompt and wise development of the coal lands present themselves, he said. One contemplated the government leasing the lands to private individuals under terms which will permit the government to control the lands; the other, he said, proposes direct government operation of the coal lands and the sale of the coal to people at cost.

STORM DAMAGE FULLY A MILLION

Charleston Suffered Immense Loss by Storm.

CITIZENS REPAIRING HAVOC

Much of the Debris Has Been Removed, but Danger of Pestilence Has Not Passed.

Charleston, S. C., Sept. 1.—"Dry out, clean up, disinfect and repair" is the watchword in storm stricken Charleston. Mayor Rhett, having hurried from New York on hearing of the hurricane, has taken the helm and is directing the work of rehabilitation. The death list has reached seventeen and the property damage is conservatively estimated at $1,000,000.

Reports are getting in from the exposed sea islands, where only two lives were lost on James island, but the property damage is very heavy. It is said by planters that long staple cotton and rice have been almost wiped out. Houses have been wrecked and cattle and live stock killed. Roadways are impassible, as the bridges have gone and trees have been felled.

First reports of damage at the Isle of Palms, a resort directly on the ocean nine miles from here, were exaggerated. Buildings were not as seriously damaged as believed. In Charleston things are approaching the normal with splendid progress. The railroads, though their yards are crippled, are giving much better train service for passengers and freight.

The trolley cars are running on all the city lines and the cars on the seashore division will be in operation regularly shortly. The telephone company reports most of its system in working order. Electric light and power service is being rapidly extended over the city.

Much of the storm debris has been removed and all the streets are clear. The board of health is imploring householders to get their premises sanitary without delay, citing the danger of sickness from continuance of present conditions. The damage about Beaufort and Port Royal is placed at $1,000,000. There was no loss of human life in that section.

FOUR KILLED; FORTY INJURED

Passenger and Freight Trains in Collision on the Erie Road.

Erie, Pa., Sept. 5.—Four persons were killed and at least forty others were injured in a collision between an Erie and Pittsburgh passenger train and a Lake Shore freight train at Dock Junction, four miles west of here.

The collision occurred while the freight train was backing onto a sidetrack to allow the passenger train, running thirty minutes late, to pass on the main line.

A relief train was hurried to the scene of the disaster in response to a telephone call, but before it reached there the entire wreck was a mass of flames. The four dead had been pinned under the wreckage. Their bodies have not been recovered.

TAFT TALKS TO LAWYERS

Denounces Recall and Suggests More Pay for Judges.

Boston, Sept. 1.—Addressing the members of the American Bar association, in convention here, President Taft urged the lawyers to take up the work of reform in judicial procedure; denounced the recall as applied to the judiciary and urged the adoption of the arbitration treaties negotiated with France and Great Britain.

The president's remarks were greeted with enthusiasm by the 800 lawyers. The greatest demonstration came when the president advocated increase of salaries for federal judges from $15,000 to $25,000 a year, and when he referred to the recall as a "wild theory."

RAILWAY STRIKE SEEMS CERTAIN

Illinois Central President Refuses to Meet Union Leaders.

PLACES BLAME ON THE MEN

Letter From President Markham Says There Are Contracts in Existence With Some of the Unions and Hopes the Men Will Live Up to Them. Believes Public Opinion Will Be With the Railway.

Chicago, Sept. 5.—President Markham of the Illinois Central railroad ended hopes of an immediate settlement of the labor difficulties of the road by directing a letter to W. F. Kramer, secretary of the Blacksmith's International union, refusing to meet the representatives of the federated shop employes as had been requested.

The letter, from the reports of the nine international unions involved, and to which Mr. Markham's communication was a reply, was considered by labor men here to be in the nature of an ultimatum.

The unions asked that Markham meet the employes of the road as represented by the system's federation.

President J. F. McCreery of the federation will meet the nine international officers and a decision as to future action by the union will be reached.

The union representatives intimated that their plans already had been made. President McCreery issued a statement that the nine crafts in the federation had turned matters over to the international officers and will await action by them.

The letter from President Markham of the road to Secretary Kramer, representing the international union officials, is as follows:

Text of Markham's Letter.

"As has been repeatedly stated to yourself and associates present at meetings with Mr. Park and myself there are in existence certain contracts between the Illinois Central railroad and seven of the organizations represented. Never before in the history of our dealings with labor organizations have we been asked to change contracts except in the usual manner provided therein, viz: That the thirty days' formal notice which has always been regarded as an essential feature of the same be given.

"The required thirty days' notice not having been given in the manner provided in each of the different contracts we regard them as still in effect and must again decline to enter into negotiations with other agencies for the purpose of making changes therein.

"The paramount interest in this controversy is that of the shipping and traveling public and, being convinced that it is the ultimate purpose of the federation to consolidate rail road service employes into one organization, the management does not feel that public opinion would sustain it in entering into an agreement which would place in the hands of one body the power to throttle the commerce of the country.

"Neither does it believe that the same public opinion will sustain any action which will result in disruption of the harmonious relations that have heretofore existed between the Illinois Central and its employes.

"You will, of course, take whatever action you may consider advisable for the protection of your respective organizations. If you will permit me to say it, it is my opinion that you can take no action that will afford any better protection than to advise them to live up to their contracts with this company just as it has always lived up to its contracts with them. If any other course is pursued and the trouble results the responsibility is yours, not ours."

INDIAN PRINCE IS DEAD

Nizam of Hyderabad, Descendant of Ancient Family, Passes Away.

Hyderabad, British India, Sept. 5.—Asaf Jah Nizam-ul-Mulk, the Nizam of Hdyerabad and the premier prince of the Indian empire, died here. He was born Aug. 18, 1866, and succeeded his father, the Nizam Aful-ul-Daula, on the latter's death, Feb. 26, 1869.

The late Nizam belonged to a family of great antiquity and importance among the Mohammedan rulers, being lineally descended from the first Khalif, Abu Bakr, the successor to the prophet. Under him were 11,000,015 people.

BRYAN'S TIP ALWAYS GOOD

Commoner Has Always Told Friends Not to Bet Upon Him.

New York, Sept. 5.—William J. Bryan, in a lecture at Grace Methodist church on "The Old Religion," strongly denounced all games of chance. His face lighted up with a broad smile as he continued:

"During the three campaigns when I ran for the presidency I always advised my friends not to bet. And," he added, amid a shout of laughter from the audience, "they always appreciated the advice after the election."

AN AFFAIR OF HONOR

By THOMAS R. DEAN

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

The civil war gave those who participated in it all the fighting they wanted for many a year to come—indeed, for the rest of their natural lives—but it left its effects in a different way on many boys who were too young to fight for the Union. Peter Briton was seventeen years old when the Confederacy collapsed, and he ever after regretted that the fight hadn't been kept up long enough for him to get a smell of powder.

When Peter was twenty-one this spirit developed with a desire to take part in a duel. He maintained that affairs among gentlemen would better be settled by the code than by bloody noses, though why blood coming from a place where there is little or no danger rather than one where death may be instantaneous did not appear in Peter's logic. He mistook himself. The reason he believed in dueling was because he rather fancied getting into a duel.

When this fad with him was at his height he went abroad. Dueling has always been more or less in vogue in all the countries in Europe and is so on the continent today. Peter went to London, but no one insulted him there and he continued on to Paris. Even in the French capital he saw no chance to participate in his hobby, so he went on down into Italy.

The middle class Italians are a peaceful people, and Peter found himself as far as ever from a duel. Fearing that he would be obliged to return home without a scrap, he resolved to pick a quarrel with some one. In a restaurant in Rome he saw a man at a neighboring table eating macaroni in a manner displeasing to a well bred American. Peter signified his displeasure by calling to the man not to make a pig of himself. The man, instead of giving a verbal reply, tossed the contents of a tumbler of wine in Peter's face and went on eating his macaroni. Peter wiped away the wine with his napkin and laid his card on the macaroni eater's table, receiving one in return.

Picking up the man's card, Peter took it to an American friend of his, Gunter, and told him the circumstances. Gunter looked at the card and exclaimed:

"Good gracious, man, you've challenged Castelli!"

"And who is Castelli?"

"The principal of the fencing school."

Peter's face fell.

"He's not only that," Gunter went on; "he's a noted duelist."

Peter turned very pale.

"He's not only a noted duelist, but he kills his man every time. There is a great deal of prejudice against him in Rome, but he finds all the pupils he cares to have among the young Roman swells who may possibly some time need to use his instruction. They find him a splendid teacher."

"But can't we use pistols?" asked Peter. "I've done a lot of good work with the pistol."

"You, having challenged the fellow, will have to fight with any weapon he may select."

"That's so. I didn't think of that."

"Of course he'll choose foils or rapiers, though he is a dead shot with the pistol."

"I don't like this fix," said Peter, giving a shiver. "What can I do to get out of it?"

"I don't see what you can do, but I'll think it over and try to hit on some plan. Since you are the insulted party you don't have to fight unless you wish to, but you don't care to put yourself in the position of a coward, I suppose."

"No," said Peter. "I don't wish to do that."

"Well, stay here till you hear from me."

Peter passed a terrible half day; then the door of his room was thrown open and two men entered and bade him go with them. They placed him in a carriage and took him to a large building that he thought was a hospital. It was a lunatic asylum. He was put into a room by himself with an iron grating on the windows and locked in.

Peter never experienced such joy of relief in his life as he now felt locked up in a madhouse, where the fencing master could not get at him. He recognized in his imprisonment a scheme of his friend Gunter, who had doubtless taken out papers to have him confined as a lunatic.

The next day Gunter came to see him and admitted the plan as his own. Gunter told Peter that he had seen Castelli and advised him that Peter was not responsible for his acts. Castelli was very much disappointed at not being able to add one more to the list of those he had killed.

Peter asked Gunter how long it would be necessary for him to remain a maniac and could get no definite response. But one day Gunter brought him a letter of apology from Castelli. Peter, greatly surprised, asked how he had secured it.

"I circulated a report," replied Gunter, "among Castelli's pupils that he had insulted a lunatic, and most of them left him. Meanwhile I had agreed to take lessons of him, and he asked me what he should do. I advised him to write you an apology, which he did."

Peter smiled a sickly smile. He went home, but kept very quiet about his affair of honor. Fortunately for him, since it occurred in a foreign land he was able to keep it secret. But from that time he lost his taste for listening to stories of the civil war.

THOUSANDS OF DOLLARS FOR PRIZE PRODUCTS

HOW THE BIG LAND SHOWS ADVERTISE THE NORTHWEST

The cool weather and abundant rains in the past few weeks assure the Northwest farmers good crops. More than usual returns will be had by many of the more progressive farmers, who will exhibit at the New York and other big land shows. The habit of exhibiting at these big shows is a good one to get—it brings honor and money to the enterprising farmer. In past years the Northwest farmers have won many prizes for the best wheat—oats—potatoes—barley—the finest apples—and prize winning corn, sugar beets, alfalfa and hops are also raised. Every time a Northwest farmer wins a prize at the big land shows more settlers come into the Northwest and many times they move close by the prize winner's farm. This increases the value of his land and brings him good, ambitious neighbors, who also get the prize getting habit.

Take the great new land show—the New York Land Show, which will be held between November 3 and 12, 1911. For the best hard wheat $1,000 in gold is offered to the farmers of the world. There is a big silver cup for potatoes—a $1,000 cup. The Northwest ought to win that potato cup, as well as the wheat prize money. Then there is the Earling cup for the best oats—the James J. Hill cup for the best 100 pounds of wheat—the Busch cup for hops—the Pabst cup for barley. All these are beautiful cups, all worth $1,000, except the Pabst barley cup—that's worth $1,500. Surely the Northwest should win these cups. Where else do they raise such potatoes, wheat, barley, oats, etc.?

$500 for Apples.

President Elliott, of the Northern Pacific Railway, has offered $500 in gold for the finest apples. The apples raised in Montana, Oregon and Washington are easily the best in the world. They bring the highest prices and have the best flavor, color and keeping qualities, as the National Apple Shows have demonstrated.

It is now harvest time, and the farmers of this section should go after these prizes. The Great Northern Railway will help the farmers in their territory win these prizes. No entry fee will be charged at the New York Land Show. The Great Northern Railway will make a special arrangement to handle these exhibits. Write at once to Ed. Leedy, the General Immigration Agent at St. Paul, Minnesota, who will tell you how to pack your exhibits and where to ship them. A $1,000 prize cup or $1,000 in gold is certainly worth trying for. Send a postal to him to-day.

Other Big Land Shows.

If the Northwest farmer will only get busy and get his good stuff together he can exhibit at most all the land shows. The Pittsburg Land Show will be between October 12th and October 28th. The Omaha Land Show will be between October 15 and 28, 1911. Then comes the New York Land Show with $11,000 in prizes; dates—November 3rd to November 12th. After the New York Land Show is the big Chicago Show, starting Saturday, November 18th, and ending December 9th.

The Northwest farmers' own show—the Northwestern Land Products Show, at St. Paul—will probably commence December 12th and continue to December 24th, 1911, and so, you see, a farmer or a community can exhibit at all the shows. Every good exhibit at any one of these shows is going to help bring new settlers to that place.

The Great Northern Railway is cooperating with the Commercial Clubs in an effort to get good displays from all sections.

Why They Died.

Naturally applicants for life insurance may be expected to put as good a face as possible on the reports concerning relatives and the causes of their deaths, but they sometimes make rather amusing statements. Some one has collected a few of these which were originally published in the British Medical Journal:

"Mother died in infancy." "Father went to bed feeling well and the next morning woke up dead." "Grandfather died suddenly at the age of 103. Up to this time he bid fair to reach a ripe old age." "Applicant does not know cause of mother's death, but states that she fully recovered from her last illness." "Applicant has never been fatally sick." "Applicant's brother, who was an infant, died when he was a mere child." "Grandfather died from gunshot wound caused by an arrow shot by an Indian." "Applicant's fraternal parents died when he was a child." "Mother's last illness was caused from chronic rheumatism, but she was cured before death." "Father died suddenly; nothing serious."—Journal of American Medical Association.

Loaded For Economy.

A fireman was up for examination for promotion to the position of engineer. He passed a fair test on the rules and machinery, but during all of it the examiner was constantly lecturing him as to the need of economy in the use of fuel and oil, so that by the time he finished his examination it was pretty well on his nerves. Having finished the technical part, the examiner thought he would put the man in a critical position to see what he might do in an emergency. So he put this question: "Supposing you are the engineer of a freight train on a single track, and you are in danger of a head-on collision with a passenger train, and you know that you could not stop your train—that a collision could not be averted—what would you do?" The man, unstrung by the vigorous instruction he had received as to economy, replied in this way: "Why, I would grab the oil can in one hand and a lump of coal in the other and jump."—Atchison Globe.

Candle Making In China.

The manufacture of candles in China is no new thing. Years before the advent of the foreigner the natives made them by crude methods and used them in home and temple. Even today millions of candles are made by the old process of dipping, at which the old Chinese are very expert. A mixture of tallow and castor oil is first prepared and the operator, placing a straw to serve as a wick between each of his ten fingers, dips them into the preparation as many times as necessary to give the candles the desired thickness. After this they are set up on end against a board to harden and the straw wicks clipped to a proper length. The finished product burns well, gives a fair light, is consumed slowly, and, best of all, in native eyes, is very cheap. These candles are usually made by small factories for sale to storekeepers, but many individuals still manufacture for family and temple use.

Buddist Priests of Burma.

Every morning after sunrise the Buddhist priests of Burma go out in Indian file, preceded by a boy with a bell, which he rings at intervals. This warns the people of their approach, and it is wonderful to see with what reverence the people regard these priests. Immediately the bell rings a Burmese woman runs out with her offering of rice, bananas, eggs or the best that her house can provide. No words of greeting are exchanged. The offerings are made and received in silence. The Buddhist priests may not receive money. This is why they have to beg for their daily bread.

Days of the Week.

While the Egyptians named the days of their week, the Jews numbered them only, the first day of the week being always the day after the weekly Sabbath. Fifteen different methods of Sabbath counting are known to have existed during the last 4,000 years, including every day of the week, weeks of different and varying length, from six to ten days, and months of various and varying length.

He'd Eat the Thistle.

A discussion on appointments to the Most Noble Order of the Thistle gave rise to a caustic saying on the part of Disraeli. Among the names suggested was that of a certain peer, who displayed more zeal than judgment in his support of the Conservative party. "Oh, no!" remarked his ungrateful chief. "I couldn't give Lord —— the Thistle. He'd eat it."—London Graphic.

zation was: The Farmers' League of Minnesota. It is to be non-partizan and yet political. The farmers henceforth will support only such for office as will see to it that they get a square deal.

The annual meetings of the league will be held in connection with the state fair every year. County and township organizations are to be effected thruout the state, and every congressional district will have a member on the executive committee, of which committee the officers are ex-officio members.

The initiation fee is $1.00 with an annual fee of $1.00.

This is the answer the Northwestern farmer gives to Taft's brand of reciprocity. Much enthusiasm and great determination was manifested. It was plainly to be seen that the Governor need not look long for anti-Taft sentiment in that bunch. Great unanimity of sentiment prevailed throughout the meeting and the esteem Mr. Collins has won among the farmers by his courageous fight against reciprocity was almost marvelous.

SWANSON—BROKKE

The marriage of Miss Ella Swanson and Tarje Brokke was solemnized last Wednesday afternoon at the home of the brides parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Swanson, near Steiner, the Rev. J. B. Smith officiating.

The bridal gown was of white silk while the brides maids wore light blue. The bride carried a fine bouquet of red roses.

In spite of the disagreeable weather a large number of friends and relatives of the contracting parties had gathered to help them celebrate the occasion.

After the ceremony a bounteous dinner was served and as the evening wore away the young folks kept warm by tripping the light fantastic.

The bride is a popular young lady having been raised from childhood in Marshall county in which county she has been teaching school during recent years. The groom is the genial Chief Clerk at the local postoffice and needs no introduction.

The newlyweds were the recipients of many valuable and useful presents of all manners and descriptions.

The Press joins with their many friends in extending congratulations to the happy couple.

CHINESE STUDENTS IN CONFERENCE.

The majority of our readers would be vastly surprised if they could drop in some day on the sessions of the Chinese student conference now being held at Princeton. N. J.

The American impression of John Chinaman is derived almost solely from the laundryman, who shuffles along the streets in his wide trousers with the silence and furtiveness of the Oriental. The type of Chinese students that one sees at any of our large universities is as different from this as the ordinary Harvard university boy is from the average Polish farm hand just over from Russia's plains.

Nearly all the laundrymen come from the most struggling class of laborers in a few provinces of China. The students are mostly the sons of wealthy merchants and are backed by plenty of money.

Consequently the Chinese student is very much of a dandy. He spends money lavishly on our choicest tailors. He has Epicurean supper parties at elite restaurants where he touches elbows with the dress coated Smart Set.

He is physically as clean a type of manhood as you could find outside a manicurist's parlor. Every hair is brushed into its proper setting, the sharp creases of his trousers are direct from the tailor's iron.

With this marked dudishness, there goes, as is not common with American youth, an intense seriousness in work. The Chinese student is not an athlete. He came to this country, not to knock little balls in the air, but to take back rich cargoes of American scientific learning to make his country young again.

And so while his American classmates are running bases and sitting in hammocks at the summer hotels, John Chinaman, Bachelor of Science, is reading solemn papers at the Princeton conference, on modern learning. His auditors listen intently, seated in solemn rows, where they took their places on the second that the clock marked the hour.

In spite of the fact that they have wealthy fathers at home, these boys work like ditch diggers. They combine culture and industry, two qualities which when united carry a man very far.

Wild Parrots Are Fighters.

Parrots when in their native wilds live in flocks and guard themselves by a complete police system which enables them to marshal their collective force quickly when any animal or bird attacks one of their number. They seem to be disciplined and trained in fighting together, and all other birds and animals are afraid to attack a parrot unless the bird can be caught alone. Even then a shrill call summons the parrot army to the rescue. It is said that in the forests all parrots die of old age and that none is ever killed by birds of prey or other wild animals.

St. Martin and the Dictionary.

St. Martin when he divided his cape with a naked beggar at the gate of Amiens gave also two words to the English language. The oratory in which this torn cape was preserved as a sacred banner acquired the name of "chapelle" (from the French "chape"), the custodian being termed "chaplain," and thus our English words "chapel" and "chaplain" are derived.—Westminster Gazette.

The Light of Crystals.

All diamonds do not shine in the dark after exposure to sunlight or electric light, but some do to a remarkable degree. A diamond rubbed with a woolen cloth or against a hard surface will sometimes shine brilliantly. The emission of light is a property belonging to many if not all kinds of crystals.

A variety of white marble found at Hastings-on-the-Hudson, N. Y., gives out a flame colored glow when pounded and bright flashes when scratched with steel. In northern New York is found a kind of stone known locally as "hell fire rock," which exhibits bright sulphur colored streaks when scratched in the dark. Pieces of rose quartz rubbed together exhibit brilliant flashes, sometimes bright enough to illuminate the hands of the person holding them. Smoked quartz and other varieties sometimes show a similar phenomenon. — Chicago Record-Herald.

Not Lively.

Anna Maria Wilhelmina Pickering, in her memoirs, edited by her son, tells a Yorkshire incident which contains a great deal of human nature. Variety spices life. The plan is monotonous until its extent entitles it to the name of prairie or desert and it gains interest through vastness.

"There was an old couple in the village whom I used often to go to see. One day when I found them sitting, one on each side of the fire, the old man said to me:

"'Well, t'missis and me, we've been married nigh on fifty years, and we've never had one quarrel.'

"The old woman looked at me with a twinkle in her eye and said:

"'It war varie conscientious, but varie dool!'"

The Bloody Hand.

The noted English family of the Holtes has for its badge a bloody hand, and this sinister badge commemorates a wager that ended in a crime. Sir Thomas Holte one day in 1612 was hunting. He invited his comrades home with him to dinner, and as he rode along he made a heavy bet on his cook's punctuality. But the cook failed him for once. When he got home dinner was not ready. The jeers of his companions at this failure, together with his huge loss in the matter of the wager, enraged him so that he ran into the kitchen, seized a cleaver and split the cook's head open with it. Afterward his family, to keep this crime alive, adopted for its crest the bloody hand of the cook killer.

An Eskimo's Dwelling.

We do not look for any great amount of inventive genius among the Eskimos, but for years they have employed a rather complete respirator, used in the preparation and taking of a vapor bath, as a means of protection from the dense smoke. This Eskimo respirator is a little basket woven of twisted strands of fine grass. It is placed with its shallow side against the mouth, and a wooden peg, which arises from the center of the basket, is held between the teeth. For this purpose water is evaporated over a big fire in a very low hut, which is tightly closed to keep in the heat. In this stifling atmosphere the employment of a respirator is absolutely necessary.—London Globe.

SCHOOL NOTES

The enrollment on Tuesday was much larger than that of one year ago. Several of the rooms are crowded and an additional teacher for the seventh grades has been found necessary and will be secured this week. In the grades the enrollemnt consists practically of Thief River Falls children. The three beginning rooms remind one forcibly of the story of the old woman in a shoe. Those who predicted a falling away of population on the closing of a local industry last spring would have their views badly shattered were they to pay a visit to the school rooms this week.

Mrs. Will Korstad is substituting for Miss Anna Connelly for a few weeks. It is expected that Miss Connelly will soon have recovered from the serious accident which befell her last Sunday.

Miss Thompson of the Washington building was unable to be present for work this week on account of the dangerous illness of a brother. Miss Esther Wilson has charge of her room for a few days.

The high school courses of study have been enlarged and remodeled to meet the requirements of the Putnam act and the state high school board. Among other changes, Norwegian has been added to the curriculum. A thorough study and knowledge of this language is certainly as cultural, useful and practical to the youth of the Northwest as are German and Latin, both of which occupy prominent places on every high school course. The state university regards all languages as of equal importance from a cultural standpoint.

Students failing to enroll on the opening of school cannot expect to make satisfactory progress or to maintain their places in their grades and classes. Those who enter late must take their own chances of promotion. It is also a mistake to think that school work does not begin in earnest for a few days. On Tuesday, opening day, books and lessons were assigned and why the children cannot recite as well on Wednesday as on a day a month hence is hard to understand. The school is organized for work immediately on opening.

The high school courses of study will be published in the local papers of next week.

Twice as many persons offered to board and room the teachers this year as on any former year. All of the instructors are now comfortably settled and have taken hold of the work in a commendable spirit.

COMMISSION GOVERNMENT

James E. Boyle Tells of Charges For the Better In Kansas Cities.

James E. Boyle, head of the department of Economics and Political Science, University of North Dakota, has made an extensive study of municipal government, and especially of city government by commission. In a letter to the Press, dated Sept. 6th, 1911, he tells of his direct observations with respect to Kansas City and Leavenworth before and after the adoption of the commission plan of government, as follows:

"It is my good fortune to be fairly well acquainted with several towns and cities in Kansas, and especially with Leavenworth and Kansas City, the two large Missouri river cities. For years these two cities remained excellent examples of conspicuous failures in municipal government. Leavenworth in particular was notoriously bad. Never in my life have I seen filthier and shabbier streets than I saw here in 1904. The police force was demoralized, the city finances were in a bad way, and the once thriving city had apparently fallen into decreptitude and decay. Even the very street cars were operated by beardless boys too young to feel or exercise responsibility for the lives of passengers in their care. The city had apparently given up the struggle, and was supine and helpless. Business men were leaving and flocking to Kansas City, Missouri, just across the line from Kansas City, Kansas. Dwelling houses and stores were empty; weeds were growing in the main streets; sidewalks were rotting away.

"In 1910 I found all this changed. The city looked prosperous; few empty houses in sight; streets in good shape; business men cheerful and hopeful; real estate gone up; bank deposits increasing.

"The only reason I could find for this great improvement was the Commission Plan of city government now in successful operation. It made a great change for the better in this despairing city.

"The other city, Kansas City, has long been a prosperous and growing city, in spite of the break-down of its city government. However, it wisely adopted the commission plan, along with scores of smaller cties in Kansas. My visit to this place and conversatoins with men there convinced me that, beyond any shadow of a doubt, this city had greatly profited by a change to the commission plan.

"In conslusion, I may state in general, thatI am satisfied that the Commission Plan is absolutely sound in principle, and that it works well in practice. It places both responsibility and power in a definite place, where all the people know exactly where to look for them. In this way it actually puts government into the hands of the people, where, in our great Republic, it is supposed to be."

Eliminate the Boss

James A. Edgerton says in one of his articles on "City Government By Commission":

"The phenomenon of the commission plan of government which gives the most satisfaction to many people is the complete disappearance from influence of the typical ward politician. The whole field of "peanut politics" seems to have disappeared. In Galveston, for example, the nominations which are recognized as emanating from the politicians who formerly controlled the town get only 20 per cent of the votes. In all the cities it is claimed that the city service has been put on a nonpartisan basis, with a great increase in efficiency. Certain it is that under the commission plan, candidates have repeatedly been elected without the help of political machines, while voters are casting their ballots without relying upon the guidance of the machines either."

Hotel Ogahmah

The Hotel Ogahmah will be taken over by Mrs. Robbecke today, at which time the former proprietor, E. A. Harrington gives up possession. Mrs Robbecke will have charge of the hotel until next Tuesday morning, when Harry Brumund, of Walker will take charge.

Mr. Brumund is known thrunout the state by traveling men as the popular hotel man of LaPorte, Minn. Mr. Brumund intends to make the Ogahmah even more popular than his former hotel at LaPorte, and will do everything within the power of an experienced hotel man to give the traveling public those things that make life worth the living while on the road. When a weary traveler strikes one of his beds he will not feel like getting up and sleeping on the floor in order to have a comfortable place. When Mr. Brumund was in town two weeks ago to see about leasing the hotel, there were many complimentary remarks passed upon him by the traveling men who were here that day. They say that if he runs a hotel like he did at LaPorte that he will enjoy the patronage of the travelers to a gratifying degree.

WILL SOON BE DAY AND NIGHT POWER

People have been asking why we do not have day and night power. The answer is that, just now, the revenue derived during the day would not be enough to pay for the expenses of running and, therefore, the city would be losing money. There will be day and night power as soon as Hanson and Barzen have installed a 75 horse power motor, which is going to be used to run their flour mill. Then the revenue during the day will be sufficient to warrant running. The motor will be here and installed the last of this week.

LOCAL CREAMERY TO MAKE IMPROVEMENTS

The Farmers Co-operative Creamery Company has decided to make some worthy improvements in and about the local creamery. The creamery will be raised and a concrete foundation put under it; a cement floor will be put in thrunout the entire building, to replace the wooden one there now; the engine room will be enlarged four feet to the north and four feet to the south; and a cement walk will be built about the building, replacing the present board walk. When these improvements have been completed, the farmers will be able to boast of one of the neatest and handiest creameries in the state.

ALBERT LEVIN BUYS BARBER SHOP.

Last Wednesday forenoon there was consumated a deal whereby Albert Levin, of Hoffman, Minn., acquired the barber shop on LaBree Ave., formerly owned by Joe Flynn. Mr. Levin comes here highly recommended as an experienced and up-to-the-times barber. He intends fixing up the shop, so as to make it one of the most attractive places in the city. Here's hoping that he meets with unalloyed success.

Mr. Flynn conducted a very popular barber shop and enjoyed a desirable class of trade, and his many friends will be sorry to hear of his selling out. He is undecided now as to where he will next engage in business. The first of the week he will leave for a few days visit at his home in Rice Lake, Wisconsin.

WILL THE CITY GET COMPETITION

Plans and Specifications for New Light Plant in Question

The council at its meeting on next Tuesday night the 19th has called for bids for the new Electric light plant. A set of plans and specifications have been voted on by that body and have been formally issued by resolution, and a copy has been placed on file at the Builders Exchange at Minneapolis for the inspection of prospective bidders.

The council may be of the opinion that those specifications are of such a nature that free and unrestricted competition will be obtained from a variety of contractors. However, an inspection of the plans and specifications will show that exactly the reverse is true.

It appers that some time ago the Council either retained, or was to retain, the service of a competent, unbiased, consulting engineer to advise the city, and assist the Superintendent of Water and Lights in getting out a comprehensive set of plans for the new plant, that would permit and attract bidders, thus insuring the city active and agressive competition on all of the better makes of boilers, engines and dynamos that are needed in the installation.

Instead of that, it appears that the council has seen fit to employ the representative of one particular manufacturer, The Minneapolis Steel and Machinery Company to do this work, and a set of plans have been received and issued which have been drawn by this representative. The agreement, it is understood, is that this representative is to receive approximately two percent of the cost of the plant as his compensation for getting out these plans, but it is further understood, that, in event of his companys receiving the contract for the work, that is based on his own set of plans and specifications, that this commission is to be waived and no charge is to be made for that work!

Notwithstanding the fact that the purpose of this is obvious, it allows a bidder to bid on public plans and specifications of his own; and then if he is successful in getting a contract based on his own plans and specifications, receive what amounts to a bonus as well.

The plans and specifications are on file at the office of the City Clerk and a careful inspection of them will show that the plant has been designed around one particular set of apparatus, this being set in place, then a building built around to fit the particular dimensions of this apparatus alone, without any provision for future changes or enlargement.

It has been reported from the Twin Cities that other would be bidders who examined the plans at the Builders Exchange in Minneapolis will refrain from figuring on the work, on account of the plans being manifestly so one sided as to confine the bids to one class of apparatus. Thus the city will be deprived of the competition that it should have, and deserves.

Th specifications as sent out also provide for the letting of the contract in one bid, including the machinery and all. Manufacturers of engines, boilers, dynamos and the other material, of the quality and reputation that the city deserves and desires, are thus handicapped in placing their proposals before the council in the best manner.

There should be provision made for allowing these manufacturers to give the city benefit of the competition that a number of bidders would bring. In getting a seggregated proposal the city would have direct recourse to the manufacturers for the satisfactory carrying out of the individual contracts.

If the conucil desires this competition, it should take steps at once to insure it; and the plans should be changed to permit it.

If the council does not desire competition and wants to allow but one bidder, with perhaps a dummy bid or two, to figure on but one make of machinery, why then waste money in advertising for bids?

The city should be protected in the expenditure of upwards of Thirty Thousand Dollars, by competition, by securing the services of an expert to see that the city gets a thoroughly modern plant, properly installed, and honestly tested to see that it meets with guarrantees.

There is neither fairness, business sense, nor legality in allowing the city to enter into any contract for a public improvement of this magnitude and importance, without securing the fullest measure of competition; and this cannot be had on plans and specifications so clearly biased and restricted.

FLAX FIBER PLANT A PROBABILITY

Flax Straw of Value to Farmer. How Much Have You?

Here is a proposition that we want you farmers, and especially you flax growers, to consider carefully and then give us a reply.

Mr. Beard, a representative of the North America Linen Fiber Company with headquarters at Philadelphia, was in the city last week looking over the local field with a view of ascertaining the advisability of putting a fiber factory in Thief River Falls. After having looked the field over carefully with some of the local men and further having taken the matter under a week's advisement with the company, Mr. Beard telephoned us last night that he had practically decided on having a plant established here and that some of the fiber dressing machines will be shipped immediately.

A full plant would consist of ten of these machines and would handle about twenty-five ton of flax straw per day. Only a few of these machines, possibly two or three will be installed here this season, but in order to ascertain as closely as possible how much flax straw can be expected he proposes the following scheme:

Every man who has flax straw that he would like to haul to market should either call at the Press office and state approximately the amount of straw that he could deliver or, if not convenient to call drop a postal card, addressed to the Press stating the number of tons he will furnish. This is essential to the getting of the machines as no company would desire to put more than one machine in any one locality unless it were certain that sufficient straw would be furnished.

If we can make a showing that will warrant them in putting in five machines they will do so.

The Press will simply act as your registry in showing this company what they may expect. It will now be up to you to show that you have flax straw to deliver in case you want the plant.

A word or two with regard to price and manner of handling flax for fiber may be opportune.

Any common flax straw-pile reasonably free from chaff and weeds would be worth about two dollars a ton. Flax may be brot to the plant in its original state without being threshed and the machine will do the threshing free of charge. The longer the straw the more valuable the fiber and hence the better price can be paid for the straw. The price may vary from two dollars to ten dollars per ton. Cut your flax stubble short and get a better price for your straw.

SIDE TRACK TO AUXILIARY ELECTRIC LIGHT PLANT.

President Pennington says that the Soo will build a side-track up to the new auxiliary electric light-plant, to be located on the present waterworks-system site, provided the city will secure a right-of-way. It would be necessary to cross the Kennison property and the creamery property. The city now has an option on the Kennison property, but as yet has secured no rights on the creamery property. However, negotiations are now under way. Such a track would be a great convenience for obtaining the coal for running the steam engines, and would eventually be the cheapest method of transportation.

School Notes

1022 pupils enrolled on the opening of school last week. This is exactly 74 more than enrolled the corresponding week of last year. Inquiry develops the fact that the grade pupils are practically all residents of this city and the nonresident pupils appear in the high school, in which department they are entitiled to enroll, as the state law governing high schools makes this provision. The three kindergarten rooms alone have 141 little children enrolled and they are all supposed to be six years of age; at least, but few state they are five. The three seventh grade rooms have 115 in attendance and several have not yet entered.

Every room in the Central is now filled. Miss Swanson, the new 7th grade teacher, having moved into the upper southwest room with her grade this week. This seventh grade will have the same special studies and instruction as the grammar grade students who are working in the Washington under the department plan.

Teachers are instructed that pupils are at liberty to purchase their supplies where they please. Mentioning names of dealers is not permitted and every precaution is taken to be as impartial as possible.

The regulations recently issued by the state high school board governing the normal training department are more stringent than those of last year. The normal students, for the one year during which they take the normal work, cannot take any other outside studies except the industrial subjects; neither can pupils not enrolled in the department enter there for one or more studies. In spite of these restrictions 20 have enrolled. This is the maximum number which the law will permit to enroll.

The various courses of studies offered in the high school appear in the city papers this week. These do not include the short course of five months which begins October 31st. This course will be for young people over 16 from country and city who can attend only during the winter months. Bulletins describing the work will appear the last week of September. Many changes might be suggested in the courses presented, but to one familiar with local conditions and the state requirements and restrictions, good reasons are apparent for the courses as they are printed.

Provision has been made to care for the school garden produce and the flax on the experiment plot.

A reception will be tendered the school faculty by the board of education next Friday evening at the Antlers Club rooms. This is an annual event to which every person in the city is cordially invited. No invitations will be issued and every person interested in the children, the teachers and the schools ought to attend. Music will be provided and a light lunch served.

Every graduate of the normal department for this and former years is teaching this month or will be next. But two graduates are exceptions to this statement. The young teachers are scattered from central Minnesota to the Canadian line and from Koochiching county over into the Dakotas. Their wages run from $45 to $60, the average being almost $50 per month. This part of the school is certainly paying its way, if school work is to be measured only in dollars and cents.

TO CONVERT US TO STANDPATISM

Taft Flings Gauntlet To Progressivism. Same As Preceded 1910 Defeat.

Washington, D. C., Sept 14.—The campaign for the control of the next Republican National Convention has developed rapidly since the adjournment of Congress. The confusion caused by the reciprocity bill is disappearing and President Taft's attack on the Insurgents in his Hamilton speech and the announcement that he will tour the West, speaking in eleven of the twelve Progressive states, has defined his real position.

The issue has been clearly joined, with the President as the advocate of standpatism. This same issue in 1910 caused a Democratic House to be elected, doubled the number of insurgent Congressmen and seated several Democrats and Progressive Republicans in the Senate.

Taft and Standpatism the Issue.

In 1910 Speaker Cannon divided the stage with the President as a standpat leader. With Senators Aldrich and Hale retired and Speaker Cannon merely Representative Cannon, the President will go to the Progressive west as the principal exponent of standpatism. When he made his western trip two years ago, the Progressives remained silent so far as the President was concerned, but now that the Presidency is the issue and Taft has placed himself in opposition to Progressivism, he is being answered by Progressive statesmen. On his western trip this year he will not again enjoy unchallenged the attention of the Republican voters of the country.

Taft and Defeat or a Progressive and Victory

In view of the disaster to the Republican party that followed the President's last western trip, and the fact that the President is again openly opposing Progressive principles, the Progressives feel that they must obtain control of the next National Republican Convention and nominate a Progressive for President, to insure the election of a Republican in 1912. They point to the almost universal success of Progressive Republican nominees for Congress in 1910, as a clear indication that a Progressive nominee for President would carry the country in 1912.

ANSWERING TAFT, CLARK THREATENS HIS TARIFF BOARD

"If Used, as President is Now Using It, as Pretext for Delaying Revision Downward We Will Cut Off Its Supply."

MR. TAFT IS UNGRATEFUL, SO SPEAKER DECLARES

"But for Democrats He Would Be Most Discredited President Since Johnson."

Quincy, Ill.—Speaker Champ Clark before leaving here early today replied to President Taft's speech delivered at Hamilton, Mass., last Saturday. In a signed interview the Speaker accused the President of not stating facts.

"The Presidents criticism of Mr. Underwood and myself," said Mr. Clark, "which is essestially a criticism of all Democrats in the House and Senate, because all Democrats stood together, is absolutely uncalled for and is as ungrateful a performance as I can remember; for if it had not been for the action of the Democrats in the House in both the Sixty-first and Sixty-second Congresses in lining up almost unanimously in favor of reciprocity with Canada he would have been the most thoroughly discredited and humilated President since the days of Andrew Johnson.

"The President says that we did not play politics about reciprocity, but that we did play politics about the tariff. The only politics we played was to keep faith with the people and to religiously redeem the promises we made in order to win the election in 1910, which is the best and noblest sort of polities. If any politics was played on reciprocity, the President himself played it—personal at that.

"He had said the rates of the wool schedule in the Payne-Aldrich Tariff bill were too high and ought to be reduced. We reduced them. In the teeth of his Winona speech, and his other declarations to the effect that said rates were too high and ought to be reduced, he vetoed our Wool bill, which largely reduced the rates and General Funston's Father Dead.

Iola, Kan., Sept. 12.—Former Congressman Edward H. He was in congress twelve years in the late eighties and early nineties, representing the Second Kansas district.

ALLEN WILL FIGHT CHARGE

Millionaire Accused of Smuggling Jewelry Into Country.

New York, Sept. 8.—United States District Attorney Wise has learned that at least one of the two wealthy men indicted in the Helen Dwelle Jenkins smuggling case will fight the case to the bitter end.

He is Nathan Allen, the Kenosha (Wis.) millionaire, formerly head of the leather trust and one time admirer of the fascinating divorcee, who, after a quarrel with Allen, is supposed to have given the government information concerning the gigantic plot whereby hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of jewelry were illegally brought into this country.

The other indicted man, John R. Collins, friend of Allen, and a wealthy coal operator in Memphis, has not yet indicated what he will do about the charges.

MAINE GOES WET, SAY FIRST RETURNS

Prohibition Repealed by Majority of 1,400.

Portland, Me., Sept. 12.—Unofficial returns indicate that prohibition has been voted out of the constitution of the state of Maine by a majority of about 1,400.

About twenty-five small towns have not been reported and the vote of these, together with errors incident to the collection of returns by telephone, leaves the exact result in some doubt.

One hundred and twenty thousand voters cast ballots on the question. With the twenty-five towns missing the vote was 60,878 for repeal and 59,563 against a change in the constitution.

As had been predicted, the cities were the chief strongholds of the repeal faction, but the majority of 12,000 in the total city vote was barely sufficient, according to the latest available returns, to offset the vote of the rural communities.

MANY FLOOD REGUGEES DYING

Five Hundred Chinese Perish Daily in Inundated Section.

Shanghai, Sept. 12.—The troops the Chinese government is concentrating to suppress disorders in the Yangtsekiang river flood district will probably see serious fighting soon.

The authorities are so overwhelmed by the disaster's extent that small effort is being made toward relieving the refugees, who are desperate.

The average number of deaths daily among the 70,000 survivors surrounding Nanking alone is approaching 500, of whom perhaps 50 per cent die literally of starvation and the balance of exposure and disease.

Looting and murder are growing rapidly more prevalent. There is still no sign of subsidence of the flood.

An explosion of gasoline finally sent the ship to the bottom with all on board.

HEARING ON DITCH PETITION.

Judicial Ditch No. 2, Red Lake and Pennington Counties, State of Minnesota.

Clerk of Court's Notice of Hearing in Ditch Proceedings.

STATE OF MINNESOTA.

The Beattie murder case on films? Nay, indeed! No such slime. Give us instead the elevating, refining influences that will make us think better and not worse of mankind.

In 15 years our navy has taken the successive steps of battle ship, dreadnaught, and super-dreadnaught—the latest models weighing 27,000 tons. Where will this finally end?

Corruption, neglect, incompetence and extravagance thrive in the darkness of public indifference, but die in the fierce glare of public vigilance. —Duluth Herald.

The Chicago-Inter-Ocean, the great field of Lorrimer comes out with a full column roast on our Senator Clapp. That sure gives us unbounded faith in our Senator. We love him for the enemies he makes.

Although many new houses have been built in Bemidji this season, there are very few empty—practically none of the newer houses.—Bemidji Pioneer.

We can go Bemidji "one better" and say there is not a house fit to live in that is unocupied in this town. Yet the building program has been fairly heavy here this season.

THE SHORT BALLOT

Politics is a profession. Politics is the business of citizenship. To make this business so elaborate as to be a profession is practically to disfranchise all the citizens who have other professions of their own. And so we have government by the 3 per cent of professional citizens instead of by the 100 per cent of busy common citizens. The Short Balot proposal is to simplify politics sufficiently to allow it to be readily mastered by the average man.

Now comes Governor Morris of Montana and says governors should have power to initiate and refer legislation to the voters for their approval or rejection. Maybe they should. It really matters not much so long as the people are allowed to pass upon it. But when it comes to initiating legislation as Taft did his reciprocity pact and then not even allowing the people's representatives to pass upon it untrammeled by the "ball and chain" of patronage we draw the line.

It is becoming more and more apparent that there is an increasing tendency both on the part of state and the federal government to multiply officers and increase their pay. Only the other day President Taft urged the National bar association to use its influence towards securing in the salaries of federal judges so as to make it $25,000 a year. The frightful extravagance prevailing in official circles in the nation and states has become a heavy burden upon the people. Those interested in the welfare of our country must become watchful in this respect, especially in an era of economic and social unrest such as this country is now experiencing, because public officials constantly seek to increase their power and their salaries.—Roseau Region.

The United States congress never intended the anti-trust law to prevent righteous and proper co-operation among farmers, laboing men and consumers. But the federal government has now indicted the officers of a New England milk producers' union for conspiracy under the Sherman anti-trust law, and there is no telling what form of agricultural co-operation will next be indicted by the United States district attorney. There is no danger that co-operative effort among farmers will ever become monopolistic and farmers joining interests do not seek to establish a monopoly. This law was not designed to prevent farmers working together to prevent being robbed by unscrupulous middlemen. While monopoly and trusts must be regulated vigorously, farmers and others should be given a fair chance, and all that farmers ask is to be allowed to work out their own salvation."

At a banquet of the American Association of Woolen and Worsted Manufacturers in New York last December 8th Emery, the chairman of Taft's

The O'Donnell High Grade Shoe for Men is a triumph in footwear. The unusually fine quality is possible because its makers specialize on Men's High Grade Shoes only. Such results cannot be obtained where a factory divides its efforts between shoes for both sexes.

We request all men who may desire to purchase High Grade Shoes now or a later time to call and examine the O'Donnell Shoe.

PRESS JOB DEPARTMENT BUSY

The Press has gone into the Brief and Paper-Book publishing business. G. Halvorson, attorney for appellant, had the paper-book of the case of George Kochendorfer, (C. E. Boughton, guardian ad litem), versus R. J. McKercher prepared here the past week and J. M. Bishop had prepared his Brief in the case of Joseph F. Lovin vs. H. M. Hicks. Both of these cases have been appealed and all the records of each case in printed book form must be turned over to the higher court. The Press with its fine standard typesetting machine, equal to anything of the kind in the world, is well equipped to take care of this kind of business.

(BY SEN. MOSES E. CLAPP.)

While there are some who favor the recall of bad officials generally, they seem to hesitate at giving the people the right to recall a bad or inefficient judge. There is absolutely no logic in this attempted distinction. It is urged that the recall applied to judges would interfere with the independence and fearlessness of judges. If this is true, and a sufficient reason for withholding it, it wolud of course apply to all officials. Originally the judges dealt with matters largely of private concern, but they deal with the making of law as well as its interpretation. The court can one day declare that the American people cannot issue greenbacks and the next day, without changing a line in the written law of the country, declare that they can issue them. The court can declare one day that the people of the United States have an income tax law; the next day, without changing a line of our statutory law, they can declare that we do not have an income tax. A more absolute truism was never uttered by Judge Harlan when he declared, in the dissenting opinion in the Standard Oil cases, that the court had read into the statute that which was not there. In other words, under our system, the court does make law; and, being a law making instrumentality, it should be as much subject to the supreme sovereignty of the people as any other function of government.

If the people are competent to elect a man as judge before he is tried, it is a queer logic that leads to a conclusion that they are incompetent to pass upon the same question after he has been tried. We all know that there has been a sinister force, sometimes successful, but at all times active, in the effort to determine the selection of judges as well as other officials. It is only just to the judge that this sinister force should find its counterpart in the recall in the hands of the people, which, instead of destroying the independence of the judiciary, would free the judiciary from the influence which has too often, at least, sought to dominate it.

I think the veto of the Arizona constitution was a most unfortunate thing. The people of that state, first, in the selection of the members of the constitutional convention, in the adoption of the constitution had twice solemnly declared that they believed in the recall of judges, and, whatever others may say, it must, I think, be conceded that the people of Arizona were competent and had the right to judge for themselves. The merest tyro in the study of public questions know that, after they have gone through the formality of disclaiming the recall, the Arizona people will proceed to put the recall in their constitution by a more decided vote than before. It is little short of bribery. It is a sad lesson, indeed, to teach the electorate of a tentative state. It is hardly the highest form of preparation for an electorate's participation in the policies of the Union. Fortunately the humiliation is not the huliliation of the people of Arizona.

In the last analysis there is but one of two alternatives; either to recognize free government as a failure, or, in the language of the great progressive governor of California, declare that successful and permament government must rest primarily on recognition of the rights of men and absolute sovereignty of the people.

would have greatly relieved people by giving them much cheaper clothing and blankets. He vetoed, thereby going over boots and breeches to the standpatters.

"The President endeavors to convey the impression that Mr. Underwood and I advocated his tariff commission. We did no such thing. What Underwood and I did advocate and vote for was a board of tariff experts to be governed by and made responsible to the House in general and to the Committee on Ways and Means in particular, because the House is charged by the Constitution with the duty of originating revenue bills. We were never in favor of a tariff board or commission under the control of the President alone and responsible to him only.

"It might as well be understood now as later that if the Tariff Board is to be used as a pretext for delaying tariff revision downward, as the president is now using it, instead of expediting genuine and salutary tariff revision, its days will be few, for we will cut off its supply. This board has already cost three or four hundred thousand dollars and has not given to Congress any information to aid in revising the tariff.—New York World.

TWO MILLION DOLLARS

If Governor Eberhart calls the legislature in extra session this winter to enact a law increasing railroad taxes, this measure can and will be submitted to the people at the election in November, 1912.

There is no doubt that the legislature will enact such a law if it is permitted by the governor to come together, for The Herald has in its possession the pledges of enough members to pass it, and it is a safe prediction that there will not be a half dozen votes against it in either branch of the legislature.

If the increase is approved by the people in November, 1912, it will be effective in 1913.

But if the Governor's negligence or reluctance to serve the people at the cost of offending the large interests puts the matter over until the regular session of 1913, the increase

AT THE AUDITORIUM

MISS ADELLE NICKERSON: AT THE AUDITORIUM LEADING LADY FOR MR. SANFORD DODGE.

Miss Adelle Nickerson is making rapid strides in her work and this season she has been engaged by Mr. Dodge to play the part of Rosalie Eventurel in "The Right of Way." Miss Nickerson has never seen the part played, so to all intents and purposes, it is as if she had created the role. Although Miss Nickerson has played such great parts as "Juliet", "Marguerite", "Portia", "Faustina", etc., the role of the sweet winsome village girl "Rosalie" is entirely different and requires as much talent to make it effective as any of the others. That Miss Nickerson succeeds so well is owing to her training and her ability.

Miss Nickerson was born in Wyoming but was educated for the stage in Boston. People born and bred in parts of the world where the climate conditions are unusual, seem to inherit naturally, dramatic talent and instinct. This is true of people who are natives of California. It is also true of the children of the Rocky Mountains, Western life is a daily drama—only it is real.

Miss Nickerson has imbibed this spirit as a child drinks milk. This, in some measure accounts for her dramatic and artistic ability. She will be seen with Mr. Sanford Dodge as "Rosalie Eventurel" in "The Right of Way." This is the role that made Miss May Buckley famous.

KARL KORSTAD STARTS NEW CLOTHING STORE.

Karl Korstad of this city has secured a store building in the town of Mahnomen, and will open clothing store there the first of next week. The building is conviently located and all ready now to receive the new stock of goods, which will arrive sometime this week.

There is a good opening in Mahnomen for an up-to-date clothing store, and Karl is just the right man to go in and make such a store a success. He is a hustler and has had a great deal of experience in the clothing business both in this and neighboring cities. More recently he has been on the road selling men's clothing. Karl's many friends in this city wish him all kinds of success in his new venture.

Prohibition is upheld by the election in Maine by the narrow margin of about 500 votes. BEATTIE GUILTY IN FIRST DEGREE Jury Convicts Young Virginian of Wife Murder.

JUDGE GIVES DEATH PENALTY

Twelve Men Spend Brief Time In Prayer, Then Vote Unanimously for Conviction.

Chesterfield Courthouse, Va., Sept. 9.—Twelve Virginia farmers knelt at dusk in the obscurity of the small juryroom at Chesterfield Courthouse, praying fervently that they might pass judgment aright on Henry Clay Beattie, Jr., indicted for the murder of his wife. They arose a moment later and silently one by one recorded a unanimous verdict of "guilty."

Pausing in solemn contemplation for fifty-eight minutes, weighing carefully the meaning of their decision and once more on bended knees beseeching divine assistance that they might not err, they filed into the hushed stillness of a crowded courtroom and with startling suddenness twelve voices, instead of the usual one of the foreman, spoke the single word "guilty." It was almost a shout.

The perfunctory motions for a new trial were made by counsel for the defense. The usual granting of permission even to argue the point was denied, as Judge Watson in a stern voice declared that all rulings of the court were on comparatively unimportant detail and in no way could have influenced the verdict.

A stay of execution was granted, however, in order to give counsel an opportunity to apply for writ of error when the court of appeals meets in November.

Judge Watson delivered an impressive speech to the prisoner. He told how the young man had stained his own life and that of the way in which he lived by his sordid acts.

"You have had a fair and impartial trial, Mr. Beattie," said Judge Watson, "and the jury has done what it considers its duty. Therefore, you have been convicted of murder in the first degree, and on Nov. 24, between the hours of sunrise and sunset, you must forfeit you life to the community. May God have mercy on your soul."

Aviator Fowler Starts Pacific to Atlantic Trip.

San Francisco, Sept. 12.—With the steady trade winds of the Pacific at his back Robert F. Fowler, the first aviator to attempt a transcontinental flight, sped up the fertile Sacramento valley and landed at the foot of the white ramparts of the Sierras, the conquest of whose summit may prove the ultimate test of success or failure for his attempt.

With but a brief halt at Sacramento for oil and gasoline he drove his biplane high over the rolling foothills and landed without a single untoward incident at Auburn, Cal., 126 miles from his starting point.

Banker's Application for Parole Will Be Heard Sept. 15.

Washington Sept. 12.—The federal prison parole board will meet at Leavenworth penitentiary Sept. 15 to hear the application for parole made by John R. Walsh the convicted Chicago banker now serving a five-year sentence for his connection with the troubles of three banks.

All pending indictments against Walsh have been dismissed. He has served one-third of his term and under the law is eligible to apply for release. The parole board's findings, however, are not effective without the approval of Attorney General Wickersham.

STREETS FLOODED WITH MOLASSES

Million Gallons Break Loose In New Orleans.

New Orleans, Sept. 12.—Mississippi river levee residents in the vicinity of Market and St. Thomas streets were overwhelmed by a flood of molasses that flowed out of a storage depot and turned streets, yards and houses into a sticky mass.

The people and the city officials wrestled vainly with it. It will be several days before the district is cleared up.

Shortly after noon the warehouse of the Sugar Planters' Storage and Distributing company burst. The "warehouse" was a reservoir used by the old municipal waterworks plant. It covers more than a block. The walls are twenty feet high, of brick reinforced with steel and concrete. The great weight of the molasses is supposed to have caused them to give way.

With a roar a section of the wall twenty feet wide broke. The sticky fluid rolled out, streaming in all directions. Its depth was fifteen feet at the start and it reached Magazine street, a third of a mile away, with a depth of ten inches. The quantity flowing was more than 1,000,000 gallons and the property loss is about $125,000.

The weight of molasses came upon two city water mains and the heavy pipe crumbled, adding great streams of water to the molasses and swelling the volume of the flood. Two boilers just beyond the walls, weighing fifteen tons each, were carried one hundred feet and one was left standing on end.

In the streets fire companies, police and the white wings brigade fought vainly. Many residences were two feet deep in the sticky mass. Men and women, overtaken in the streets, were rescued with difficulty and many barely escaped suffocation.

Two fire horses dragged a hose cart until they were leg deep in the stream, then refused to budge and an hour later were pried out with planks.

SHEEP HERDER IS MURDERED

Two Suspects Are Under Arrest for Murder and Robbery.

Marmarth, N. D., Sept. 12.—With a bullet wound in one shoulder and with his pockets rifled of about $300 he was known to have had, Thomas H. Corcoran, a sheep herder, was found dead in his wagon in this city. Two suspects, Bert Gass and Tom Carberry, seen in the vicinity of the scene of the crime on the night previous, have been placed under arrest. One of the men has a gunshot wound in the thigh which he is unable to explain.

Corcoran, a former telegraph operator, had been engaged as a sheep herder for only a short time.

COULD AGREE ON ROOSEVELT

Both Factions Would Accept Him, Says Davis.

MIGHT RENOMINATE TAFT

Minnesota Congressman Is of Opinion That President Could Not Be Re-Elected and La Follette Could Not Get Conservative Element Support.

St. Paul, Sept. 12.—That the Republicans will unite on Roosevelt and force him to take the nomination for president rather than nominate a man whom they cannot elect is the opinion of Representative C. R. Davis of St. Peter.

"It seems very doubtful that Taft can be re-elected, although he could be renominated," said Mr. Davis. "I have been through a considerable part of Pennsylvania and several other Eastern states and find that things are all torn to pieces and it looks as if Taft, while he might get the delegations to the convention, would lose a big portion of the Republican votes in the fall. The reciprocity pact which the president forced through also hits a number of states which he cannot afford to lose and that will hurt him.

"It might be equally difficult to elect La Follette and perhaps difficult to nominate him. While the regulars would hesitate to vote for a Democrat, because they would not like to give up the federal appointments, it might be difficult to round them up for La Follette.

"It looks as if La Follette would carry several of the Middle Western states in the spring and if he does this, even if he does not get enough to nominate him, it indicates a weakness in Taft, which will make the regulars hesitate before they nominate him. This is particularly true in the South, where the Republicans who go to conventions are practically all officeholders. If they get to believe that Taft cannot be re-elected they will not try to force his nomination. They would rather cast their votes for some candidate who can be elected. Politics is a business with them.

Might Agree on Roosevelt.

"I believe the regulars and progressives could agree on Roosevelt, and there is no hope of electing a Republican president unless the two factions agree. Roosevelt is about the only man upon whom they could agree.

"Personally I have taken no part in the presidential preliminaries and have tried to say as little as possible. I like La Follette and think he is an able man and would make a good president. I consider him a conservative man; he has become more conservative during the last year or two. But a lot of people look upon him as a radical, and for that reason he may not be the most available candidate.

"As for Taft, you know my views. I voted against the reciprocity bill, and voted for the other revision bills, which he vetoed. There was some excuse for his veto of the cotton schedule; at least he picked some flaws in it in his analysis of the bill, even if they were not important. But his message vetoing the wool schedule simply amounted to saying that he did not know anything about the bill and therefore vetoed it."

Mr. Davis professed ignorance regarding Minnesota and Third district politics, and said he will spend a few days in the near future visiting around the district.

GOVERNORS IN CONFERENCE

Western Governors Are First at Scene of Convention.

Spring Lake, N. J., Sept. 12.—The vanguard of thirty-five governors who are expected to participate during the week in the third annual governors' conference reached here. Fifteen state executives with their wives dined together.

A special car attached to a Pennsylvania flyer brought eight governors here from the West. Governor Shafroth of Colorado and Mrs. Shafroth were not aboard.

Governor Hay of Washington was the first of the delegates to arrive, followed by Governor Kitchin of North Carolina. He was not expected, as the legislature of his state did not make an appropriation for his expenses. Governor Marshall of Indiana has notified the secretary, William George Jordan, that he will not be present, because of a similar oversight.

It is thought that the injured child will recover.

FAMOUS AUTHORESS FOUND DEAD IN BED

Katherine Cecil Thurston Expires at Hotel in Cork.

Cork, Sept. 7.—Mrs. Katherine Cecil Thurston, famous author of "The Masquerader," "The Gambler" and other books, was found dead in a hotel here.

Mrs. Thurston had been living quietly since her divorce from her author husband, Ernest Temple Thurston, whom she married in 1901. In 1907 Thurston left his wife, declaring that for the purposes of his literary work it was necessary for him to go to the very bottom of society. He took up his residence in the Soho quarter with another woman.

When she secured her divorce Mrs. Thurston told the court that she had offered to forgive her husband if he would return to her. He refused, it was stated, on the ground that he was not worthy. He also complained that his wife was making more money than he.

DEMANDS WILL BE REJECTED

French Reply Said to Be Conciliatory but Firm.

CABINET MEETING IS CALLED

Germany's Demands Such as Could Not Be Accepted and Answer Is Immediately Written.

Paris, Sept. 12.—France's reply to Germany's counter proposals in the Moroccan negotiations has been written and will be laid before the French cabinet for approval. The task of drawing up the reply proved simpler than at first expected, doubtless because the German demands were such as could not be accepted by France.

The premier, M. Caillaux, after conferring with several colleagues, made up his mind to convoke a meeting of the cabinet and sent notices to the ministers. M. Caillaux will lay before them his answer to Germany, after which it will be dispatched by special carrier to the French ambassador at Berlin, who will hand it to the German foreign minister.

It is understood that the reply, while written in a spirit of conciliation, is absolutely firm with regard to the position France has assumed concerning questions of principle from which France will not depart a hair's breadth.

The premier's energetic and businesslike manner of proceeding has had other proof of the absolute unanimity and firmness of the government as to its policy and as a manifestation of the government's desire to do its utmost to shorten the period of uncertainty which is having such prejudicial effects on the markets of the world. It also removes any possibility of charges that France by delay assisted in bringing about further financial distress in Germany.

The broad outlines of Germany's proposals have been communicated to the public, because the government believes that the people have a right to know at this period what is being done. Foreign Minister De Selves also has indicated in a semi-official note that France's reply would be a refusal to accept Germany's conditions. In this French opinion appears to be wholly united and prepared for any contingency.

One point of view in official quarters is that Germany's financial situation, which is expected to reach a climax by the end of September, may tend to moderate Germany's demands.

SHOPMEN WILL NOT STRIKE

Executive Board of Machinists' Union Won't Authorize.

Chicago, Sept. 12.—The strike threatened by the shopmen of the Illinois Central railroad because of the refusal to recognize the system federation of mechanical employes has been averted.

Of chief influence in preventing the strike was the refusal of the executive board of the International Association of Machinists, in session at Davenport, Ia., to authorize the strike on the ground the system federation had not conducted its negotiations properly with the Illinois Central, and because the strike would imperil the working agreements now existing between the railroads and several of the international unions.

As the machinists are important in the Federation of Railroad Shopmen a strike without the benefit of financial assistance of the international union was considered to be hazardous to the welfare of the federation.

TO PROTECT MISSIONARIES

Naval Force Goes Up the Yangtse River.

Washington, Sept. 12.—All the American naval strength deemed necessary as a precaution is being concentrated as near as possible to the scene of serious disorders in China. Admiral Murdock cabled to the navy department that he sailed on his flagship Saratoga, accompanied by the cruisers New Orleans and Helena, from Shanghai for Nanking. The admiral's report contained nothing regarding the situation in China.

Against the strong current of the Yangtsekiang the three cruisers are likely to make slow headway. They are expected at Nanking by tomorrow. At that point they will relieve some of the light draft gunboats, which will push on up the river to get as near as possible to Szechuen province and afford asylum to the missionaries who have been obliged to leave Chengtu, where the soldiers and rioters have clashed.

FRUIT SEASON AT ITS PRIME.

Now is the time to buy fruit. Few housewives of the city realize that pears and peaches purchased by the box are very cheap right at the present time. The fruit market has presented a rather unusual situation this season and the fact that fruit could not be bought at reasonable prices when in an ordinary season, it is plentiful and cheap has lead the consumers generally to think that the present season is a poor one to buy fruit. This, however, is decidedly not the case. The California fruit season this year is from two to three weeks later than usual and peaches, pears, etc., are coming in in splendid quality and quantity. The housewife who is interested in having the best for winter at the cheapest possibel price should not overlook the opportunity the market is going to offer during the next few weeks. Naturally there has been little change in fruit prices when they are bought by the dozen or in other small quantities but purchased by the box the best value for the money is secured. There is going to be a plentiful supply of grapes at reasonable prices when the Michigan Concords come in. Michigan has an unusually large crop of excellent grapes this year. The early supply of apples would indicate that there is going to be a wealth of this popular fruit during the coming months. The first supply of crabapples is now on the wane and the mealy apples are making their appearance. The Montana crabapple crop will, however, be on the market in about ten days and a plentiful supply of high quality fruit may be expected according to reports received regarding the crop. Last year all of

A TERRIBLE TRAGEDY.

Again a most horrible scene has occurred at Oslo, Minnesota, when a Polander, crazed by drink, drove into Red River and was drowned. This is the result of the work of the saloon-keepers and their supporters.

Saloon men, you have driven a man into the depths of Hell and left his family unprotected. If you who stand behind the bar and deliver the crazed drug, thought for one moment of the wrong you have done, you could not be happy an hour. And if you, honorable councilmen, who have full power to close the saloons, realized the responsibility that rests upon you and the many tears you cause to flow by permitting the selling of liquor, you would be forever unhappy and would hasten to put a stop to the traffic. And you mighty voters, what can you say for yourselves? Are you exempt from guilt in this terrible tragedy, you, who vote for such men you know to be saloon supporters? No, never. Call yourselves Christians and church people and then support this terrible business. You can not serve two masters. You cannot serve God and Mammon. You are serving Mammon faithfully when you vote for such men.

I chanced to be at Oslo the day when this unhappy man was to be taken home to his family. His son had come to get him. It was a most heartrending scene. The poor grief-stricken son was almost overcome by sorrow as he watched the body of his dead father being rolled into a wagon box like a dead animal. Now he was nothing to you, saloon-keepers. No, you would think of it as unclean to touch him, but while he was alive and had money you were his best friend and thought it well to fill him with the deadly drug. You likely look upon it as no fault of yours and say, "Well, the brute ought to take care of himself." When you put up a trap, do you expect to catch something in it? Yes, indeed, and you watch closely too, to see how soon it is there. Just so, with the saloons. You want the "brutes" to come there and be caught.

After the man was taken off, the saloon-keepers went back to their places of deadly business and as I passed by I heard oaths and curses. It was the beginning of the entrapment of someone else.

"How long shall such work be permitted? How long shall Satan have such a firm grip on the people? How long until the liquor traffic be put to an end?" is the cry from the suffering wives, mothers and children. —Warren Sheaf.

board in a speech said: "There are certain things that are very difficult to get, and one thing, that according to the platform of the Republican party—and incidentaly that does not mean anything to me, except that I have been given the job according to that platform—is to try to get the cost of production. I thank you all, gentlemen, that you did not laugh(laughter) I frankly say right here that this idea of settling things on cost alone by any mathematical or algebraical or geometric ratio or problem or theory, is all nonsense. You must not think I am joking about this thing, but there is a joke about it, and the joke is this: I have no powers whatsoever. The tariffboard has no powers. There is really no such thing as a tariff board. The law says that for Certain purposes the president may employ such persons as he sees fit. I am one of such persons. That is all." (Laughter and applause.) Now, my dear reader what can we expect of such a tariff board? And what can we expect of a president that will put off revising an "indefensible" tariff in the interest of the people because he thinks congress must first have the expert(?) figures of such a tariff board, when—"there is really no such thing as a tariff board"—and the board that is has "no powers whatsoever"? Do we not feel, instinctively, that Taft has insulted our intelligence?

cannot be submitted to the people until the election of 1914, and will not be effective until 1915, or two years later than it can be done by an extra session.

If the increase is ony from the present 4 per cent on the railroad gross earnings to 5 per cent,—and many members in their letters to The Herald strongly favored making it 6 per cent instead of 5,—the additional revenue will amount to nearly a million dollars a year.

That million dollars a year for two years will be lost if there is no extra session. The extra session might cost from $25,000 to $100,000, but it would gain the state $2,000,000. If there is no extra session the state will save the expense of a session, or $25,000 to $100,000; but it will lose $2,000,000.

That sum, once lost, can never be regained.

Now two million dollars, in this day of large sums, isn't a particularly impressive amount, but after all it is a good deal of money. Certainly it is too much to lose unnecessarily. And there is no necessity of losing it. The legislature is in favor of saving it, and the people are in favor of saving it. All that is needed is that Governor Eberhart shall call the legislature together; the legislature and the people will do the rest.

Two million dollars isn't a vast sum compared with Mr. Carnegie's fortune or Mr. Rockefeller's. Compared with the fortune of the average taxpayer who is now paying not only unfairly high freight and passenger rates but a part of the taxes that ought to be borne by the railroads, it is a good deal of money.

Two million dollars would build 2,000 miles of good roads at $1,000 a mile; and Minnesota needs good roads.

Two million dollars would build 200 rural consolidated schools and equip them to teach agriculture and domestic science as well as fundamental branches, allowing $10,000 to each school.

Two million dollars, spread over ten years, would so equip the fight against tuberculosis that in that time the state could come very close to wiping it out within the borders of the commonwealth.

Two million dollars would drain the greater part of the swamp land of the state, turning it from a dreary waste to a smiling, fertile and productive garden place.

A small part of two million dollars would provide what the state needs about as much as it needs anything—a thorough and comprehensive physical survey of the state's public domain, so that the state would know what it possesses and be able to sell homeseekers the kind of land they are seeking.

Two million dollars—but the list of things the state needs which two million dollars would provide for it is too long to be enumerated.

The real question is this:

Shall Minnesota permit its governor to lose forever by his neglect of a plain duty this vast sum which belongs to the state and the people of the state?—Duluth Herald.

FRUIT SEASON AT ITS PRIME.

the apples were received from the west. This year Michigan, Iowa, Wisconsin, southern Minnesota, in fact that group of states known as the central states are furnishing a splendid supply. The plum season is now on the wane, but there are still some fine Italian plums, ideal for canning and preserving purpose on the market.

Season for It.

The curious condition of the local fruit market and the reasons why now is the time to invest in fruit are the results of the change in the California fruit season. The Califronia season is away behind. Last year California fruit began to move in this part of the country the latter part of June and the movement was very heavy in July. This year few cars moved early, but during the month of July there was practically no California fruit marketed in the northwest. Now there is a plentiful supply and when the people realize this fact big sales may be expected.

There is not going to be any low prices on canned or pressed fruit during the coming winter owing to the fierce competition during the early season between the big canning companies, evaporated fruit companies and pressed fruit concerns. In their eagerness to get the supply of fruit the competitors bid the price away up for the early fruit so that canned goods are going to cost the jobber a stiff price and the consumer will also come in for a like price in case he must buy canned goods. The advantage therefore in buying the pears and peaches at their present low prices is very evident. The Bartlett pears from California and Washington are on the market and the season for the Elberta an Crawford peaches from Washington is also at hand. Last year Texas furnished 50,000 cars of peaches, while this year only 20 per cent of a crop is being furnished. The Texas crop, however, has no especial effect on local markets except in so far as to influence the price of early fruit. Peaches during the early season were scarce and high, but they are now plentiful and reasonable. The central states are showing a much larger crop of fruit than last year which is having its influence on the market.

It is not often that the fruit crop is underestimated as it has been this year, but this mistake on the part of the big concerns means that the unexpected quantity of fruit will be given to the consumer at lower prices. The value of fruit as food is too well known for the consumer to overlook taking advantage of the opportunities offered.—Grand Forks Herald.

any person found violating any provision of this chapter, take him before a magistrate and there make complaint. When the district rangers shall have information that such violation has been committed, they shall without delay make similar complaint, and have action for trespass committed in the discharge of their duties.

Section 12. At any time district rangers, with the approval of the state forester, may employ suitable persons to be known as fire patrolmen permanently to remain upon and patrol such territory, state or private as may be assigned to them as long as may be required to prevent and extinguish any fire. Each such patrolman so employed shall be supplied with the necessary equipment. The state forester and the district ranger may, and if they are absent and fires are actually burning in the forest the fire patrolmen may summon any made person of the age of 18 years and upwards to assist in stopping the fire, and may incur any other necessary and reasonable expense for the same purpose, but shall promptly report the same to the district ranger.

Any person summoned by any official of the state who is physically able and refuses to assist shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and shall be punishable by a fine of not less than $10 and not more than $25.

Section 15. Where and whenever in the judgment of the state forester there is or may be danger of starting and spreading of fires from slashings and debris from the cutting of timber of any kind and for any purpose, the state forester will notify the individual, firm or corporation, by whom the said timber has been or is being cut, ordering them to dispose of the slashings and debris as he may direct. Where conditions do not permit the burning of the slashings and debris over the entire area so covered, the state forester may require the person, firm or corporation by whom the timber was cut, to dispose of such sashings and debris in such a way as to establish a safe fire line around the area requiring such protection, the said fire line to be of a width and of a character satisfactory to the state forester.

When any person, firm or corporation shall have been notified by the state forester to dispose of slashings and debris, either by entirely consuming the same or establishing a fire line sufficient for the protection of adjoining property, and fails to comply with such instructions, the said person, firm or corporation shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine of not less than $50 and not exceeding $100 and costs of

Commission Government.

In an address before the Boston Economic Club, January 21, 1908, Mr. Sidney J. Dillon, of Des Moines, Iowa, explained the commission plan of city government as adopted by Des Moines in June, 1908. In his introduction he said:

"After giving due weight and attention to the various problems which enter into the question of local self-government, one will find that there are but three vital elements—each exerting a wide influence—which constitute the basis for the success or failure of every municipal government. These elements are: first, the character and ability of the officials holding municipal office; second, the system, by which these officials are elected, and the affairs of the city administered; and third, the extent of well-directed activity and interest, manifested on the part of the citizens in the conduct of all matters pertaining to the management of their local government. It is perhaps difficult to determine which of these factors is the more important, for while capable men in office may accomplish a great deal, even tho the system be unwieldly, yet the fact remains, that, unless the public,—the best citizens—participate in public affairs, we will not be able to induce representative men to run for office. And further, until we have had some modification of our present municipal election laws, it will not be possible to nominate, or elect, these representative men, even tho they should consent to serve the municipality.

"Last June (1908) the citizens of our city adopted a new charter, which has since become famous as the Des Moines plan of city government. This charter presents, perhaps, the most radical and important experiment in municipal administration ever made in this country. The new municipal system is such, that it will afford us an opportunity of demonstrating the fact, that the conspicuous failure of city government, in the United States, is due in part to politicians of mediocre ability now in office, and in part to the fact that our system has been based upon a misconception of the functions of a city government. The fact is we have not had, until the past decade, a satisfactory system of government in the United States.

"In drafting this charter there were four particular objects which we wished to accomplish by the Des Moines plan. First, we wished to create a municipal office which would have so many attractive features, that it would serve as an inducement to men of ability and character to seek political positions. We also wished to eliminate, as far as possible, those things which have heretofore been the means of squelching the ambition of desirable men seeking political recognition; we wished further to minimize, as far as possible, the chances of election of politicians—those parasites who, through manipulation and corrupt influence, are enabled to hold office, year after year; not for the benefit of the people, but for the purposes of personal self-aggrandizement. The second object we had in view was to so centralize the authority of government in a small deliberative body that we might have a fixed responsibility, and be able to turn over to this small governing board the complete power and control of city affairs. The third object we had in view was to simplify the present complex system; to dispense, if we could, with the numerous boards, committees and departments, with their over-lapping and conflicting duties, and to substitute for the present confusion in government, which results from a divided authority, a definite and fixed responsibility for every act of the administration. The fourth object was to establish a more democratic form of city government; to extend the power

GOVERNOR'S PROCLAMATION

Says Fire Waste Is Increasing and Becoming More Apalling.

That the fire waste is increasing year by year and becoming more and more appalling within the state of Minnesota is certain.

To determine by a congress of representative men, interested in the preservation of the wealth of our state, what the loss of property has been by reason of fire, the cause therefor, and how such waste can be reduced, will contribute greatly to the advancement of this state and to the economic welfare of its people.

The magnitude of loss of property by fire, as well as the cost of fire prevention, is not grasped by the average man. It is estimated that approximately one-half a billion dollars is annually expended by the people of the United States for this purpose,—a sum one-half as great as the annual budget of our federal government. Nearly two hundred fifty million dollars represents the loss by fire. A sum which would be equaled if a per capita tax of $2.71 were collected for every man, woman and child in the United States. In no European country does the per capita loss exceed 50 cents.

During the past fifteen years computations indicate that approximately two billion dollars and twenty thousand lives have been "sacrificed to fire."

Minnesota has borne too great a part of this enormous loss of property.

The loss of timber in our state by forest fires is almost beyond computation. Property destroyed by fire is a total and absolute loss. Every indication points to an increase of loss by fire in our state during the year 1911.

The season of the year when fires are wont to increase in number is at hand. The heating stove of the householder is again to be utilized, and the smoke therefrom must penetrate the swallow's nest before escaping.

It is believed that more than fifty per cent of our fire loss is due to incendiarism or negligence. Much can be done for the prevention of fires by criminals, or fires caused by carelessness. Carelessness in the use of fire and lights in housekeeping is common. Carelessness in the use of matches is universal. Inflammable rubbish in factories is too often found. Dark and dirty hallways where matches are scratched and where cigar and cigaretet stubs are thrown are too frequently the cause of fires. Tenants visit dark basements by means of candles, or old-fashioned oil lamps. Unsafe oil stoves are sold and employed. Oily waste is not rarely found in packing houses, factories and lumber yards. Property is not carefully watched and those things that produce fire are improperly guarded.

It is meet that our people should be instructed and caused to realize that fire waste is impoverishing our commonwealth.

Taking into account these vital considerations for the welfare of our state, I hereby do proclaim the 8th day of November, 1911, to be known as Minnesota Fire Prevention Day, and urge that it be so recognized and observed in all the departments of the state, in all public and private institutions of learning, and by all organizations and persons interested in the social and economic uplift of our people. It is urged that the Press, as the strongest factor in the development of public sentiment, impress the importance of this movement upon our people.

And I do further proclaim the holding of a Minnesota Fire Prevention Congress, to be held in the Palm Room, Saint Paul Hotel, in the city of Saint Paul, on said 8th day of November, and earnestly invite the entire citizenship of the state to participate and co-operate in carrying out the plans of this gathering, that its purposes may be fully realized.

In testimony whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the great seal of the state to be hereto affixed at the capitol, in the city of St. Paul, this 7th day of September, A. D. 1911.

Adolph O. Eberhart,
Governor.

Secretary of State.

HUNTING TRIP IS DISASTROUS

Bernhard Williams Receives Serious Shot-Gun Wound Sunday Afternoon.

Last Sunday afternoon, about three miles west of town, while returning from a chicken hunt, Bernhard Williams, the 14-year-old son of George Williams, accidentally discharged his shot gun, the charge entering the right side and tearing away a large portion of the abdominal wall and injuring two ribs; so that the boy now lies in a serious condition at his home, though he has a good chance for recovery if everything works for the best.

Williams was in company with Godfrey Carlson, another young boy. While the boys were driving home, the dashboard fell off the buggy and Carlson got out to get it. When Bernhard reached for the board his gun slipped and was discharged. The shot were B B's.

Dr. Hieber dressed the wound Sunday and removed a portion of one rib. He found that a strip of flesh about 4x6 in. had been completely shot away, leaving bare the abdominal organs. From the boy's actions and present condition it is quite likely that he did not receive any very serve internal wounds, the majority of the charge passing thru the pit between the liver and ribs. His condition on Thursday, though critical, was sufficiently good to warrant hope of recovery.

C. O. WOLD DEAD.

C. O. Wold, one of the old settlers of town of Clitherall in Ottertail county, dies at his home there Sept. 12th, 1911. Mr. Wold was born July 29, 1835, in Grue, Norway; married Johanna Paulson in 1862; moved to Chicago in 1869 and finally came to Ottertail county in 1870, where he settled on a homestead in said town. He is survived by a wife and eight children who mourn the loss of a kind husband and loving father. Deceased was known and respected by many of our citizens. The children are Marius Olson of Thief River Falls, Minn., Mrs. S. T. Gunderson, Sisseton, S. D.; Charles Olson, Effington, S. D.; Soren O. Wold and William Wold, both of Timber Lake, S. D.; Joseph Wold, Anoka, Minn.; Axel Wold, Rudser, N. D.; and Elvisa Wold, Battle Lake, Minn.

The last days of the deceased were brightened and cheered and his pains lightened and alleviated by the kindly ministrations of all those about him and the thoughtfulness and sympathy of the neighbors.

Interment took place near Battle Lake. Thus resteth another true and tried pioneer.

Socialists Name City Ticket.

The socialist local of the city finished their referendum the 17th and have placed the following candidates in the field upon the platform published in the Press Sept, 8th: For Mayor, W. A. Boreen; aldermen at large, Fred Roth and Lorin B. Lorimor; alderman of 1st ward, C. C. Gulrud; alderman 2nd ward, Arthur Tanem; alderman 3rd ward, Frank Mousley; alderman 4th ward, B. Dan Bjorkman.

The socialists go before the people on this ticket asking their support not because of the men placed in nomination but on the principles enunciated in their platform, the first ever drawn for a city campaign here. With them a platform is a pledge because every candidate if elected can be held answerable to the same for he must sign his resignation before he runs for the office and the socialist local here will sit as judge upon his official acts and if these are found not to accord with the platform upon which he was elected they simply date his resignation and that removes him. This virtually makes the platform a contract between the official and the public which the latter can enforce without litigation.

The strength manifested by the local socialists and their rapidly increasing numbers from week to week is proving a surprise even to the socialists themselves. Seven new members were incorporated at the last meeting.

SCHOOL NOTES.

The workmen are this week completing the construction of the fountain on the high school campus. It promises to be a decided ornament to the grounds and a creditable memorial of the class of 1911.

There are only 19 non-resident children enrolled in the grades in this city. More than half of these are children living just outside the boundaries of the school district and who walk one mile or more to school, so the grade pupils are practically all residents of district 18. There are 68 non-resident students in the high school, all of whom are entitled under state law to enroll therein for the ordinary high school studies. The following places are represented in this enrollment: Newfolden, 8 pupils; Plummer, 7; Middle River, 6; St. Hilaire, 4; Town of North, 4; Town of Rocksbury, 8; Highlanding, 2; Karlstad, 4; Holt, 2; Town of Smiley, 2; Steiner, 3; Lancaster, Badger, Roseau, Warroad, Rollis, Brunkeberg, Erie, Deer Creek, Convick, Viking, Harwood, Lambert, Centuria, Brooks, Adams, Kuehnel, Warren, Germantown.

The department of public instruction has notified all superintendents and teachers of agriculture in the Putnam schools to attend a conference at the college of agriculture on Friday and Saturday of this week. The authorities desire to unify and systematize the work in the special schools.

The maximum enrollment of twenty permitted in the normal training department by the state high school board has been reached and still more wish to enter. This restriction works an injustice to this section of the state where the population is dense and far removed from state normals. The maximum would better have been set at 25 or 30, but what fits the southern and central portions of the state ought to suit the northern—in the estimation of those who are not familiar with northern conditions.

The unfortunate accident which befell Bernard Williams the first of the week is the cause of deep regret to his school friends. He is a member of the eighth grade in the Washington building.

Manual training is now taught in the fifth, sixth, seventh and eighth grades. Sewing is also taught the girls in the same grades with the exception of the last, where they have elementary cooking.

The reception to the teachers at the Antlers Club rooms last Friday evening was an enjoyable social occasion. A pleasing program was rendered and some light refreshments served.

Whether the condition of the grade schools in the city, wherein every room except one in the Knox is filled to the limit and in several instances

ALL BIDS ARE REJECTED

After Two Days Discussion, Counsil Considers Revised Plans Advisable.

Last Tuesday evening the city council opened and partially considered the bids for an auxiliary electric light plant. The meeting lasted to a late hour and was adjourned until Wednesday evening, at which time, after further consideration, the bids were called too high and were rejected. Thursday afternoon the council met again to decide what had best be done to secure the installation of a plant at less cost.

On Tuesday evening four bids were opened for a completely equipped plant. The bids were submitted by representative St. Paul and Minneapolis manufacturers, three being for steam and one for oil. The bids were as follows: North Western Electrical Equipment Co., steam plant, $41,533; The J. G. Robertson Co., steam plant, $39,997; The Minneapolis Steel and Machinery Co., steam plant, $39,848; The Fairbanks, Morse & Co., oil engine plant, $29,992.

Inasmuch as there was only $40,000 appropriated to cover all expenses connected with the plant, and that it would be necessary in case of a steam plant to buy the right-of-way for a side track at a cost of at least $3,000, it was evident that some changes would have to be made. Then, too, there had been considerable criticism aroused over the one-sidedness of the plans and specifications, it being claimed that a fair and representative competition could not be obtained. The plans will be changed now so as to allow fair competition between all concerns for the complete plant, or parts of the plant, allowing oil engine as well as steam engine equipment, it is hoped.

Do we want an oil engine plant?

On account of the low bid ($29,992) of the Fairbanks, Morse & Co., on an oil engine plant, and their claim to the effect that they could save the city several thousand dollars a year, considerable interest has been aroused in the oil engine proposition. If these people can "deliver the goods" in the way their representative, Mr. Garland, says they can,—and is willing to guarantee that they can—then a committee should be appointed to investigate some of the plants now in operation.

"Taking the cost of a steam plant at $40,000 and of an oil engine plant at $30,000, there would be a saving of $10,000 to start with. The steam plant would require a side track at a cost of at least $3,000 to be added to the original cost, making a total cost of $43,000. No side track would be required with an oil engine plant, and the freight charges would be less for oil than coal. The oil engine plant would make a desirable plant for auxiliary use on account of no stand-by losses, ability to start quickly on demand, and low cost of attendance. At the same time if the plant is depended upon for all the power, the saving over a steam plant will be much larger. The Fairbanks, Morse bid was on a plant furnished complete and put in operation, Fairbanks, Morse & Co., St. Paul.

FRIDAY, SEPT. 22, 1911.

A $30,000 profit from a 300-acre crop of potatoes, grown by a man near Sabin, shows what can be done in this line by those willing to learn how and then take the pains to do it.

It is a queer campaign that has been fought in Maine this year over the resubmission of state prohibition. The advocates of prohibition stumped the state from end to end, conducting a campaign of education and one that was wholly open and aboveboard. Their opponents did not put a man upon the platform anywhere, for no man of standing and influence could be found to publicly uphold and defend the liquor traffic; but, acting upon the theory that money talks louder than anything else in elections, they opened their purses wide and scattered their money right and left. The present governor has made no attempt to enforce the prohibition law, and his attitude and the course he has followed since he took possession of the executive mansion were of great assistance to the wets in the campaign just closed.—Warren Register.

Considerable interest is being manifested already concerning who shall represent Minnesota at large in Congress for two years following the next general election. A number of men have been suggested from different sections of the state, but the main argument put forth in favor of the most of them is that they are entitled to this honor as a fit recognition for partisan services in the past. This is entirely too low a standard to put on the man suitable to represent this state at large adequately, especially as the state has already a number of congressmen who content themselves with reaping honor from the position they hold, but whose services for the state and nation are yet to be heard of. The voters of this state are not inclined to send a decorative figure to Washington to represent them, when the time is at hand for the initiation and advancement of fundamental question touching the future welfare and prosperity of the state. The people are growing tired of halfway men and measures, and will demand ability and merit in men who seek to represent them. One question alone affecting this state directly and the nation indirectly is big enough to engage the attention of a creative and powerful man at Washington, namely, the reclamation of the 5,832,308 acres of rich but idle swamp lands lying unproductive in our state at present. And of equal importance to future generations in the state is the conservation of the commowealth. These are not visionary figures and imaginary conditions. They are facts that can be translated into utility by the right man if he is called upon to apply himself to their solution. In order that the vast areas of these lands in Minnesota may be developed, the federal government must be interested in the project. It costs too much for the state to reclaim these lands alone. According to figures arrived at by competent men after careful examination, reclamation of these lands in our state would increase its value in excess of all expenditures for such reclamation at least $250,000,000.00. These figures being based on the present amount of population. As population increases and land becomes more valuable, who can foretell the value of these lands, reclaimed, in half a century hence. It is no new venture to such a scheme, as in 1902 congress passed the national reclamation act making possible the expenditure by the government of over $60,000,000 for arid land reclamation by irrigation. A national swamp reclamation act would be of equal benefit and prove the greatest source of development in this state that has as yet been even suggested. But in order to accomplish such a thing, Minnesota must send to Washington a congressman-at-large like the Hon. L. C. Spooner of Morris. His knowledge of the needs of the state in these and other matters is not surpassed by any other citizen. As a statesman he is far seeing and couples with his enthusiasm over the future prospects of the state, a keen intellect and a determination that surmounts and overcomes difficulties. Let the ambitious office seekers retire for once, let those who are so anxious to be honored subside in order that a man like Mr. Spooner may be given an opportunity to serve the state.—Roseau Region.

The O'Donnell High Grade Shoe for Men is a triumph in footwear. The unusually fine quality is possible because its makers specialize on Men's High Grade Shoes only. Such results cannot be obtained where a factory divides its efforts between shoes for both sexes.

We request all men who may desire to purchase High Grade Shoes now or a later time to call and examine the O'Donnell Shoe.

These shoes give a tailored style that cannot be found in ordinary footwear and identify the wearer as a well dressed man.

"The Place To Buy Shoes".

HAS TAFT COMMITTED SUICIDE?

In his speech to the Essex County Republicans at Hamilton, Mass., Mr. Taft referred contemptuously to "the desire" of Democrats and Republican insurgents at the special session to "gratify what was supposed to be popular desire for the reductions of duties."

On the pledge that they would revise the Payne-Aldrich duties the Democrats carried the House in 1910 elections. Because of popular dissatisfaction with what Mr. Taft had declared at Winona to be "the best Tariff bill the Republican party has ever passed," a Republican majority of 39 in the House was changed to a Democratic majority of 61.

The same year the Democrats also elected Governor in Maine, Massachusetts, Connecticut, New York, New Jersey and Ohio, all states that had given a Taft majority in 1908. Legislatures were also elected that sent to the United States Senate Democrats to succeed Republicans in Maine New Jersey, West Virgina, Ohio, Indiana, Missouri and Montana. In those sections represented by insurgent Republicans who had fought the the Payne-Aldrich tariff the Democrats made fewest gains. In California the regular Republicans were beaten by the insurgent Republicans.

In the House on Aug. 14th, thirty insurgent Republicans and one independent voted with the solid Democratic majority for the Wool Tariff bill. The vote stood 280 to 90, or a three-fourths majority. In the Senate on Aug. 15th, eight insurgent Republicans voted with the solid Democrats for the same bill. The vote stood 38 to 28 in favor of lower duties on wool and woolens.

The eight insurgent Republican Senators who voted for the Wool Tariff bill and so incurred Mr. Taft's hostility are Bristow, Brown Clapp, Crawford, Cummins, LoFollette, Poindexter and Works. Of them Brown of Nebraska alone represents a state that gave its electorial vote to Mr. Bryan in 1908. The others represent Kansas, Minnesota, South Dakota, Iowa, Wisconsin, Washington and California, states which gave Mr. Taft 65 electorial votes in 1908. Mr. Taft has declared war on these Senators and other insurgent Republicans who voted for tariff revision. He has already attacked them on the stump and is about to "swing around the circle" on a speech-making tour though the territory where their views prevail.

In other states that gave him their electorial vote in 1908 and two years later, after the passage of the Payne-Aldrich traiff, elected Democratic Governors and United States Senators and helped to turn over the control of the House to the Democrats—in Massaheusetts, New York, New Jersey, Ohio, Indiana and West Virginia—Mr. Taft appeals for popular support by deriding "the supposed popular desire" for tariff reductions. He has made the issue in 1912 and opened the fight.

of the people, and to place in their hands the means whereby they might exercise an effective control over city officials and the acts of the administration."

The plan adopted by Des Moines is similar to the plan already outlined in this paper. The plan has been in operation there for three years, and Judson C. Welliver in Munsey's Magazine for August, 1911, sums up their progress in part, as follows:

"From being a dirty, ill-governed, crime-ridden town, the Iowa capital has become one of the show places of the middle West. The new civic center, formed by grouping public buildings on both sides of the Des Moines river, is widely regarded as the finest effect of the kind in any American city. That the handsomely boulevarded, generously parked, gorgeously lighted, well-ordered place which Des Moines is to-day, could be developed in so short a time from the Des Moines of four years ago, is simply a wonder. If it could be brought to the realization of other cities, it would be certain to prove the most potent argument for the new system."

GRAND OPENING.

Sanford Dodge has "The Right of Way."

In casting about for a successful play for next season Mr. Sanford Dodge decided to produce "The Right of Way." With this end in view he secured from Charles Frohman's agents the American and Canadian rights for this wonderful drama. He will use Eugene W. Presbrey's version which is conceded to be a most finished dramatization of Sir Gilbert Parker's popular story which by the way, is founded on absoute facts.

The story is not in any way a discussion of religion still it propounds some questions that are difficult to answer, and in fact can only be answered by the individual opinion and dictates of the individual brain and conscience. The play is constructed and executed with artistic care and detail and is intensely interesting with thrilling climaxes and terse, telling dialogue.

As Charley Steele, the brainy lawyer, Mr. Sanford Dodge will prove a revelation to those who have known him in "Sack and Buskin" of the legitimate drama. Those who have read the thrilling novel "The Right of Way" will want to see it produced and those who have not will be just as intensely interested as the play is a virile, living, throbbing chapter of heart beats from experiences that might befall any or all of us. At Auditorium Sept. 29th. Tickets at Peoples Drug Store, Phone No. 24.

It is just as easy to make a good picture (when you know how) as to spoil one. Borry is in the class that knows how.

uncomfortably crowded, is a source of satisfaction or not to the citizens is hard to decide. Some persons see in it indications of prosperity and business activity and good times locally, even though it involves the construction of an addition to the Central or Washington in the near future. That man grasped the opportunity to increase his ability ---to add to his equipment a sound, sure, thorough knowledge of bookkeeping or stenography---or both, and facing you right now is just the same opportunity.

E. H. MADISON.

Kansas Progressive Congressman Dies Suddenly.

EXPIRES AT BREAKFAST TABLE

Congressman Madison of Kansas Is Stricken Suddenly.

Dodge City, Kan., Sept. 19.—Edmond H. Madison, representative from the Seventh Kansas district in congress, died at the breakfast table at his home here.

Representative Madison had not been in good health for a year. He was a sufferer from stomach trouble, but at no time had his condition been alarming. At the time of his death he was preparing to accompany President Taft on his tour through Kansas next week.

Representative Madison was one of the best known progressive Republicans in congress.

PRESIDENT DEFENDS TRUST DECISIONS

Praises Action in Standard Oil and Tobacco Cases.

Detroit, Mich., Sept. 19.—President Taft, at luncheon with the board of commerce here, made the first of what may be termed the political speeches of his six weeks' tour of the country. He talked of the "Trusts" and clearly outlined his views concerning them.

He defended with vigor the decisions of the United States supreme court in the Standard Oil and tobacco trust cases and there was a distinct campaign note in Mr. Taft's challenge to his ancient political enemy, William Jennings Bryan, to point out what particular contract or restraint of trade he would condemn which would not be condemned within the definition of the statute as laid down by Chief Justice White.

Mr. Taft added, rather significantly, that persons who do not understand the decisions and really do not understand the law have had a great deal to say about them. It was not fair to the court, he declared, to say that it had read the word "reasonable" in the anti-trust statute.

"I am entirely opposed to an amendment of the anti-trust law," said the president. "It is now a valuable government asset and instrument. Tested and brought into beneficial use by twenty years of litigation and construction by the highest court why should we imperil its usefulness by experiments?"

PREMIER DIES OF WOUNDS

Stolypin Succumbs as Result of Assassin's Bullet.

Kiev, Sept. 19.—The Russian premier, Peter A. Stolypin, is dead here from bullet wounds received at the hands of an assassin during the gala performance at the municipal theater Thursday evening. The official time of his death was announced as 10:12 p. m. (3:12 p. m. New York time). Almost until the last the premier was conscious, and for half an hour during the early part of the evening his wife alone was at his bedside.

Toward the end Stolypin suffered greatly. He groaned incessantly and threw himself about on the couch on which he lay. Finally the heart action became weaker, and, as the body grew cold, the premier realized that death was overtaking him. At a lucid interval a priest administered extreme unction.

MOUNT ETNA STILL ACTIVE

Lava From Volcano Separates Into Four Streams.

Catania, Sicily, Sept. 16.—Clouds of smoke from Mount Etna hides the sky. The volcano continues to throw out lava, cinders and ashes.

The river of lava flowing to the north has separated into four main streams, the largest of which is moving toward Alcantara and is two miles from Francavilla. The railway station of Solicchiata is in immediate danger.

It is estimated that the present eruption has caused so far a property loss of $30,000,000.

DENIES MISUSE OF PATRONAGE

Taft Makes Eight Speeches on First Day in Michigan.

APPEALS FOR MORE MILITIA

President Is Greeted With Greatest Cordiality on Western Trip—Would Put All Appointive Positions Under Civil Service Restrictions If He Made the Laws—Is Greeted by Senators at Detroit.

Bay City, Mich., Sept. 19.—With a speech on the relation the militia bears to the regular army and the national defense President Taft brought his first day in Michigan on his Western trip to a close.

It was the president's eighth speech of the day. He spoke at the dedication of Bay City's new armory. The same sort of enthusiastic welcome that greeted him elsewhere was given him in Bay City.

Mr. Taft's address was short. He referred to the need of a strong and able militia at home and on the Panama canal and said this nation went too long without it.

"It is true," he said, "that the Lord looks after children, drunken men and the United States. At least we have put ourselves in the same helpless category in the past in reference to what we have done in regard to national defense."

With the passage of the Dick law, however, the president declared, the militia gained its proper footing.

After his speech at the armory the president dropped in at a banquet of the board of commerce and then retired on his private car.

Asks Help for Arbitration.

Saginaw, Mich., Sept. 19.—President Taft stopped at Saginaw en route to Bay City and the northern part of the state, long enough to ask the people of this city to help him influence the United States senate to act favorably on the arbitration treaties.

The president stayed in Saginaw only a half hour. He motored through streets packed with people. The auditorium, where the president spoke, is built to seat 5,000 persons and every seat was filled and a thousand persons stood in the aisles. The president spoke for ten minutes and repeated much of the address he delivered at Erie, Pa., Saturday night.

Detroit, Sept. 19.—President Taft plunged into the political phase of his long trip through the West and delivered one of the set speeches which may have a determined effect upon his future. Mr. Taft chose the "Trusts" for his first appeal to the people.

In a second speech he answered the charge that he has used patronage to further his own ends.

Challenges Charge of Using Patronage.

"They have charged me with using patronage to accomplish something," he said. "If I have I am not conscious of it. But I challenge the men who make the charge to come forward and join with me in legislation which will enable me to put every local officer, be he postmaster, internal revenue collector, customs collector or anybody else filling an office of the United States in any of the states of the Union, under classified civil service. But they won't do it—at least they won't do it now.

"If I had the making of the laws of this country the first thing I would do would be to include in the civil service every collector, deputy collector and everybody connected with the internal revenue system in local collections and put the whole service on an effective, nonpartisan basis. I know that it would be a source of economy. I know that it would give the president a great deal more time to devote to other duties. I know that it would save a good many congressmen their seats and I know that it would tend to the elevation of the public service."

Mr. Taft will spend four days in Michigan, going from here to Sault Ste. Marie. He was greeted here both by Senators W. A. Smith and Charles E. Townsend. Governor Chase S. Osborn, detained at Lansing, sent a warm message of welcome.

CHILD BURNS BABY SISTER

Boy With Mania for Fire Causes Two-Year-Old's Death.

Charlotte, N. C., Sept. 19.—That the two-year-old child of E. G. Friday, a farmer of Iredell, was burned by her brother, four years old, the older child deliberately igniting a small torch and applying it to the clothing of his baby sister, became known here. The girl died shortly afterward.

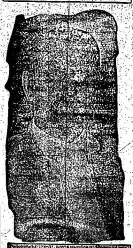
When asked his reason for the act the child replied, "Just because." He repeatedly has set fire to furnishings of the house and is possessed of a mania for fire.

Boy Drowned in Tub of Water.

St. Paul, Sept. 19.—The one-year-old son of Harry E. Nelson, a milkman of this city, was found by the hired man, Gus Olson, drowned in a tub of water just outside of the kitchen door.

JAMES A. TAWNEY.

Probable Chairman of Boundary Waterways Commission.



Copyright, [illegible] by American Press Asso.

TAWNEY PROBABLY WILL BE PROMOTED

May Be Made Chairman of Boundary Waterways Commission.

Washington, Sept. 19.—Former Representative James A. Tawney of Minnesota probably will become chairman of the American section of the International boundary waterways commission, as a result of the death of Thomas H. Carter of Montana. Mr. Tawney, Mr. Carter and Frank H. Streeter of New Hampshire were appointed members of the commission by President Taft. Upon the organization of the commission Mr. Carter, on motion of Mr. Tawney, was named chairman. With the death of Senator Carter Mr. Tawney becomes the ranking member of the commission. The new chairman probably will be elected as soon as the vacancy on the commission caused by Senator Carter's death is filled.

Mr. Tawney, who was named an honorary pallbearer at the Carter funeral, will be unable to come to Washington to attend. W. L. Busby, secretary of the commission, received a telegram from Mr. Tawney Monday as follows:

"Regret it is impossible for me to reach Washington in time to act as pallbearer at funeral Tuesday morning. Convey to Mrs. Carter and family my most sincere sympathy in their great loss and in the loss that the country sustains in the death of Senator Carter, who was loved by all who knew him."

REWARD ON SLAYER'S HEAD

Bullet Which Passed Through Body of Mrs. Bolton Found.

Anoka, Minn., Sept. 19.—The state has made no particular headway in its search for "Jim," the farmhand wanted for the murder of Mrs. Walter Bolton and F. E. Rhodes on a lonely farm in Anoka county. Sheriff John Casey received reports that suspects had been captured at Elk River and Madison, Minn., but when an effort was made to confirm the news it was learned no arrests have been made at either place.

County Attorney Albert Pratt announced that $200 reward will be given by Anoka county for information leading to the arrest of the double murderer.

At the Bolton farm the bullet which killed Mrs. Bolton was found in the wall of the cellar. It had passed through the kitchen floor, indicating that the woman was killed in the kitchen with a rifle.

LAURIER SURE OF VICTORY

Soul Would Be at Peace If He Were as Sure of Eternal Salvation.

Ottawa, Ont., Sept. 19.—Asserting that the limelight of campaign publicity had driven the annexation bogey to haunts known only to opposition leaders and that an overwhelming majority of Canadian voters are prepared to vote favorably next Thursday upon ratification of the reciprocity agreement, Sir Wilfrid Laurier stirred to remarkable enthusiasm an audience which filled the largest auditorium in the capital city of the Dominion.

"If I were as sure of my eternal salvation as I am that Canada will ratify reciprocity three days hence, my soul would be at peace," declared the premier, and his hearers gave him cheer upon cheer.

Strike May Be National.

WILEY UPHELD BY PRESIDENT

Pure Food Expert Praised by Chief Executive.

SHAKEUP SEEMS PROBABLE

Mr. Taft Admits Lack of Harmony in Department of Agriculture and Hints at Future Action.

Beverly, Mass., Sept. 16.—Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, federal pure food expert, has been upheld by President Taft in his findings upon the charges preferred against the pure food expert by the personnel board of the department.

In his review of the case the president praises Dr. Wiley and holds Dr. Rusby guiltless also. The recommendation of Attorney General Wickersham that "condign" punishment be visited upon Dr. Wiley is passed over by the chief executive with the remark that at the time he made it Mr. Wickersham was not in possession of as much data as is now available.

The executive admits that there has been a lack of harmony in the department of agriculture and hints that action upon it will follow later.

This is taken to mean, by some, that there will be a general shakeup, involving, perhaps, the retirement of Secretary Wilson.

The action of the president fulfills a promise made when he left Washington to settle the famous case, which has already extended over several months, before leaving Beverly.

© 1911, by American Press Association.

DR. H. W. WILEY.

In his decision, which is in the form of a letter to Secretary of Agriculture Wilson, the president declares that Dr. Wiley was justified in all that he did in the matter of employment of Dr. H. H. Rusby as an expert chemist; that he was no party to the correspondence involved in the case; that Dr. Wiley acted in accordance with numerous precedents and that he cannot but command the sympathy of every one for his earnest effort to maintain the pure food law.

The president also recommends the retention of Dr. H. H. Rusby in the government service and rules adversely to the decision of the personnel board of the department, which advised that besides Dr. Wiley, chief of the bureau of chemistry, Dr. L. F. Kebler, chief of the drug laboratory of the bureau, be "allowed to resign."

The Illinois naval reserve gunboat Dubuque dragged its anchor and was dashed against the government pier by the wind. It was towed back to its mooring in the inner harbor.

RATE DECISION IS CONDEMNED

Governors Appoint Committee to Protest to Supreme Court.

INVASION OF STATE'S RIGHTS

Committee Headed by Governor Harmon of Ohio Will Carry Protest Before Supreme Court.

Spring Lake, N. J., Sept. 15.—Governors of twenty-five states of the Union voted to unite in protest to the United States supreme court against what they consider an invasion of state's rights by federal courts.

The decision of Judge Sanborn of St. Paul in the Minnesota rate case is the particular "invasion" to which the governors object. By their action they establish a precedent in American history.

Judson Harmon, governor of Ohio and former attorney general of the United States, will head a committee of protest. His colleagues will be Herbert S. Hadley, governor of Missouri, and Chester H. Aldrich, governor of Nebraska. The motion to appoint such a committee to voice the views of the conference was made by Governor Emmett O'Neal of Alabama, which placed the membership at five. Action was declared unanimous, although Governor William W. Kitchin of North Carolina, the twenty-fifth delegate, who alone opposed it, did so, he said, solely because it would be a departure from precedent.

Harmon Supplied Suggestion.

Governor Harmon supplied the original suggestion for the plan, according to Governor O'Neal. In the sharp debate which followed the measure's introduction Governor Harmon took no part.

Introduction of the motion was unexpected by the majority of the delegates. Governor Aldrich's ringing denunciation of what he termed the invasion of the functions and rights of the states by the minor federal courts, discussed during the forenoon session, provoked enthusiastic applause and was followed in the afternoon by an address by Governor Francis E. McGovern of Wisconsin on the same topic. With the subject fresh in mind, the governors debated the question for an hour or more before Governor O'Neal introduced his motion.

In his speech Governor Aldrich referred in terms of condemnation to the decision of Justice Sanborn of the United States circuit court in the Minnesota rate case. He explained that the point of the decision was that the state's intrastate rate law was unconstitutional because it could not be enforced without interfering in its operation with the authority of the interstate commerce commission. This, he thought, was clearly an invasion of state's rights.

RACING AUTOMOBILE DASHES INTO CROWD

Ten Dead and as Many Injured at Syracuse, N. Y.

Syracuse, N. Y., Sept. 16.—In full view of a crowd of 50,000 persons, shortly after President Taft had left the state fair grounds, a big racing automobile plunged at seventy miles an hour through the race track fence, crashing into the crowd, killing six men outright, decapitating a boy, fatally injuring three who died later in hospital and seriously injuring eleven more, three of whom may die.

Lee Oldfield, brother of Barney Oldfield, took the place of Fred Belcher, who was down on the program to drive the ill fated car, and he was driving at terrific speed when, on the last mile but one, judges noticed that something was wrong with one of the wheels.

As Oldfield approached the starting line for the last mile the judges signaled to him to stop, but so engrossed was he in driving the big Knox car that he did not see the signal. As he swerved into the back stretch the tire of the damaged wheel exploded and the machine sped into the crowd, which was gathered close to the fence.

There was a tremendous crash and a great cloud of dust as a twenty-foot section of the fence was swept away. The victims were either ground to death or badly mangled under the wheels of the big auto.

MAJORITY DECIDEDLY SMALL

Wets Appear to Have Won the Contest in Maine.

Portland, Me., Sept. 15.—Returns received at the office of the secretary of state, with only six towns missing, and these six supplied by returns received in Portland, showed:

For repeal of prohibition, 60,517; against repeal, 60,383; majority for repeal, 134.

Reports received this morning say that reciprocity failed to carry in Canada at the election held yesterday. After the keenest election in Canadian history the conservatives won cut.

GRAND OPENING.

Event Extraordinary.

Mr. Sanford Dodge will soon appear at the Auditorium in a splendid new scenic production of "The Right of Way." This wonderful play was dramatized from Sir Gilbert Parker's powerful novel by Eugene W. Presbrey, one of the foremost of American playwrights.

"The Right of Way" was an instantaneous success from its initial production in New York City to the present time and it appears to have become more popular with the advance of time, owing to the fact that more people are becoming acquainted with the story through the reading of the book. It bids fair, eventually, to rival "Ben Hur" and other works of a like nature.

If you have not read the story, now is your time to do so. If you have, you will do well to read it again before seeing the play, but whether you have read it or not you will be intensely interested in the drama itself, as it will be presented by Mr. Sanford Dodge and his excellent company at the Auditorium, Sept. 29th. TIMES HAVE CHANGED.

When I was young I used to go down the long potato row, and whack the weeds out with a hoe. Or, early in the summer morn, with one old mule ,morose, forlorn, I'd go to cultivate the corn. All through the summer day I toiled, my raiment reeking wet and soiled, and I was fried and baked and broiled. And when at night I sought my bed my feet were like two tons of lead, and till next morning I was dead. When to the country I repair, and see the wondrous changes there, I always go up in the air. For now the farmer surely feels like Cleopatra as he reels along on plows with painted wheels. He drives a large and handsome team; his implements are like a dream; spring seats are spiked to every beam. He blithely tills his fertile lands, and never soils his lily hands, nor in the mud and gumbo stands. His pants are creased and show no dirt; his feet are by the thorns unhurt; he often wears a parboiled shirt. And when he goes to town he makes his journey in a brace of shakes; his auto runs to beat the snakes. He has a gas plant of his own, a bath-room and a telephone, and often he has scads to loan. Thus are the old world's changes rung!—Walt Mason.—In Farm Journal.

THIEF RIVER PRESS

THE PURPOSE OF ALL IS THE PROGRESS OF HUMANITY

VOL. XXIV THIEF RIVER FALLS, MINNESOTA, FRIDAY SEPTEMBER 29, 1911 NO. 4

MINNESOTA HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

THE COUNTY SCHOOLS

Supt. Mostue Presents a Well Arranged Report for the Public.

The fall of the year is with us. This brings us to think of the precautions to be taken for the seasons coming. Let me remind school officers to consider and provide for the necessities of their respective districts so as to insure in time a successful school year. These necessities may be few or many, small or great, but they should be considered in time so as to add to the efficiency of school when once begun.

Will the school clerks kindly report at your earliest convenience the name of teacher employed and the grade of certificate held by her. If teacher is not employed will you likewise let this office know. The Supt. wishes to have everything arranged before schools begin so as not to interfere with work of visitation. The Supt. will be found in his office on Saturdays after Oct. 1st.

I would like to hear from those school children who intend to enter the Industrial Co. Contest. State your success in raising the corn and in growing garden vegetables.

Will teachers also inform this office as to what progress is made in domestic science work in their school as this information is needed to determine if a contest is to be held.

Text books are loaned to pupils free of charge or sold at cost. It is difficult to arrive at the average cost per pupil. However, 20c per pupil will be a fair average. Dist. No. 18, Thief River Falls, has built the only brick school house during the year; its cost is $45,000. Of the rural districts, district No. 55 has built a frame structure costing $800, and district No. 57, at Reiner, a structure costing $1300. School district No. 56, at Erie, has had the misfortune of having the material of a house burned. This is a hard blow for this young and prosperous district. Not daunted by adverse circumstances the district is building a modern structure that will be ready for occupancy this fall.

Pennington County has 67 organized school districts. Of these districts No. 70 and 219 are joint districts with Marshall County and districts No. 58, 33, 148, 133, 227, 108, 43, 124, and 17 are joint with Red Lake County.

The unorganized school territory is spread over parts of the townships of North, Clover Leaf, Goodridge, Kratka, Reiner, Star, Hickory, Deer Park and Mayfield. The County Board of Education is sustaining three schools in this sparsly settled territory namely in Hickory, Clover Leaf and Kratka.

There are 57 school houses within the limits of the county. The estimated value of these with sites is $125,311.00. Of this sum $105,000 falls to the lot of Thief River Falls, $2500 to St. Hilaire and $17811, to the rural districts.

Twenty-two districts will qualify for state aid this year as against 14, for last year. 14 of these schools will have eight months school and 8 will have seven months.

Of the 200 volumes in the 28 school libraries in the couny 727 volumes was bot last year.

We hope to see these libraries increase in number in the future as they form one of the strongest and useful adjuncts to the school work. Every school, if needs be, should have a library.

The aggregate indebtedness of the district whose school houses are within the county is $70,400.00.

Morstad and Iverson Boys Have Been Doing Some Pilfering.

Last Saturday Sheriff LaBree and Chief of Police Lang rounded up Fred Iverson, Robert Iverson, Leonard Morstad and Malvin Morstad, the boys being suspicioned of several thefts around the city. September 13th some of these boys broke into Arpin's boat house and helped themselves to various articles such as boat lamps, mirror, curtains, kerosene can, etc. Last July someone entered Pete Eberhardt's work shop and took several articles; it having since developed that the boys had a hand in that, and also the loss of several articles taken from A. C. Hanson.

Last Friday when chief Lang was notified of the theft of the articles from Arpin's boat, he set out to find them and the goods were soon located at Torrison's second hand store. The next morning Lang interviewed one of the boys. The boy confessed to having a hand in the several robberies, implicating at the same time the other three boys. Two of the boys were in town, one was brought from Fertile by Lang, and one was gotten in the county east of here, by LaBree.

Sentence has not been passed on any of the boys. Judge of the district court, Grindeland, will probably pass sentence on Malvin Morstad and Robert Iverson, two of the boys who are under age. They may be sent to the reform school at Red Wing. The other two boys, Fred Iverson and Leonard Morstad, 17 and 19 years of age, have waived examination and will be held over for the grand jury in January. They were let out on sufficient bond last Tuesday.

These boys have been making it a practice for some time to take what they could lay their hands on and it is high time that they were taken care of. It might be for the best interests of the community and of the boys if they were sent away for awhile.

DO WE WANT FLAX FIBRE?

People Here Live Beyond The Mississippi. Ought To Be Shown.

Last Wednesday evening the Commercial Club met to consider the flax fibre mill proposition which was presented by Mr. Beard, representing the North America Linen Fibre Co. of Philadelphia. The proposition was discussed freely in an informal manner. To the majority of those present it seemed that Mr. Beard did not have enough facts and figures to prove that it would be advisable for the people of this vicinity to make a $25,000 investment in a $5,000,000 corporation.

The general sentiment was that if Mr. Beard wanted to get further data or revise his proposition, the executive committee of the Commercial Club would be pleased to further consider the matter. He may or may not have a good thing for this community. If it's good, he will have no difficulty in securing help.

Mr. Beard proposed that a $75,000 plant be installed; $25,000 in stock to be furnished by the local public and $50,000 by the Fibre Company. The plant would include a suitable building, dryers, and 10 fibre machines, each valued at $3,500. Each machine could handle 2½ tons a day, making a total of 25 tons a day for the ten. Mr. Beard was not sure what could be paid for flax straw, perhaps from $2 to $10 per ton, depending upon the kind of straw. The best results are to be obtained when the straw is put thru straight, as in the bundle form. However, straw pile straw could be put thru with satisfactory results. It appears to be something of a problem to figure out how the farmer can get the seed from his flax and still market the straw at a profit. Someone suggested that a header be used on the flax, and the straw bound afterwards. Another suggestion was that the flax be hauled in and threshed as it goes thru the fibre machine.

This kind of fibre machine is a new thing. So far as it has been possible to determine there is not a single one of these machines in successful operation out side of the factory, or experimental plants. Mr. Beard had with him several samples, as towels, sacking, twine and paper, which he claimed had been made from the fibre of these machines, and also had several praiseworthy letters from the experiments.

Mr. Beard said that the company was incorporated for 5,000,000, but had with him no financial statements showing the condition of said company. It appeared to some members of the Club that a company with so much money with a first class fibre machine to put on the market, could amply afford to send a machine here and keep it in operation until the absolute success of the venture was determined. If the company could point to a successful mill in operation here, it would not be long before the surrounding sections would be clamoring for one also, and the North America Linen Fibre Company wouldn't have any difficulty in getting a subscription of $25,000, or anything else that they wanted.

It would look as tho what the fibre company needs now worse than anything else is flax straw to put thru their machines, and they can certainly get a guarantee of plenty of that if they come across with the right kind of a proposition.

Many a man labors under the misapprehension who was never known to labor under any other circumstances.—Madame Sherry.

CITY IS INVESTIGATING

At a meeting held last Thursday afternoon the council decided to suspend operations relative to the installation of an auxiliary electric light plant until the oil engine proposition has been further investigated. A committee consisting of Dr. [illegible], Goodnow, Torrison and Martin Evenson were chosen for this investigation. The council chose one member, commercial club one, and these two chose the third member, so as to have a fair and unbiased representation.

The committee left Monday and will not return until a thorough investigation has been made. They will not confine themselves to one kind of oil engine, but will see several. The Fairbanks Morse Co. people came up here a week ago Tuesday with a very low bid and a very attractive sounding proposition. Whether or not they have the best engine may be questionable. The business of the committee is to find out by personal inspection whether or not an oil engine can be depended upon to deliver the goods.

If their report is favorable, then the plans will be adjusted so as to allow oil engine bids. If their report is unfavorable, then the plans will be drawn so as to allow a representative steam-plant completion. For a steam plant the plans will be revised so as to keep the bids somewhat lower than those received on the 19th. Mr. Earl D. Jackson, consulting engineer, will probably attend to the plans and specifications. In all his dealings with the city Mr. Jackson has shown himself to be an efficient and impartial engineer.

Hnason and Barzen's Motor Has Arrived.

Now that Hanson and Barzen's 75 horse-power motor has arrived, and the wiring has been completed, the city will enjoy light and power as many hours out of the twenty-four as the engine and dynamo are able to stand. It will no doubt be necessary to give the dynamo a rest during some period of the day, for instance from 5 or 6 until 8 or 9 o'clock in the morning. The reason why we have not had more continuous power before is that the expense of running during the day was a losing proposition to the city. There are a great many business houses that depend upon a day current for running motors, and of course are anxious to have as much day current as posible so that they will not have to use engines as auxiliary power.

The Presbyterian Ladies Aid meets with Mrs. Hugh Jones, Friday October 6th. Everybody cordially invited.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Bjerkhoel returned Wednesday from Hallock where they had been called to be at the bedside of Mrs. Bjerkhoel's mother, Mrs. Sundberg, whose death occurred Tuesday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Martin Evenson left Monday evening for the cities where Mr. Evenson will spend a couple of days on business and then they will visit friends in Wisconsin before returning.

Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Dobner leave this afternoon for Lake City, Minn. where they will remain until they decide upon a more southerly located city for their permanent residence. Mr. Dobner's health is the cause of their leaving and C. H. Dobner has returned from Kalispell and will take over his work in the bank.

COMMISSION GOVERNMENT

Further Extracts From Mr. Dillon's Address Before Boston Economic Club.

In this week's issue are printed further extracts from the address of Sidney J. Dillon, Des Moines, which was delivered before the Boston Economic Club, in 1908. Exponents of the commission plan of government claim that one of the main benefits derived fom it is that it secures a definite and fixed responsibility on city officials.

A Story.

"Perhaps it would not be out of place here to tell a little story which went the rounds of Des Moines during the recent campaign. It seems that we have, among the men of our city, one who is given to the practice of raising fancy chickens in the basement of his house. One day either a cesspool or drainage overflowed, and the water entered his basement drowing a number of his chickens. The owner went down to an Irishman at the City Hall, who had charge of the street works. He made inquiries of this man, and asked what could be done in the matter. In turn the Irishman referred the householder to his alderman. The alderman, on being applied to, disclaimed all responsibility in the matter, and said that the raiser of the fancy chickens would have to see the city engineer. The city enineer proved to be a young man who did not like to undertake any responsibility in such a matter, and so he referred the complainant to the Board of Public Works. The Board, in turn, referred its caller to the city clerk; the city clerk directed him to the mayor; finally the man wound up again in the office of the Irishman. He had gone the rounds of all the city officers, and each of the officers had shifted the responsibility from his shoulders to that of someone else. 'Well,' said the man, addressing the Irishman, 'I followed your directions, and I followed the directions of every city officer to whom I went, but I haven't accomplished a single thing. Yet the water keeps on flowing into my basement. It's drowning my chickens all the time. What are you going to do about it?'

The Irishman scratched his head and said, 'By golly! I don't know. I guess you will have to raise ducks.'"

How It Works In Galveston.

"I remember very well that while I was in Galveston, last spring, I happened to be sitting in the office of Mayor Landry, and talking to him at the time. While I was there some lady came in with a complaint about sanitary conditions in a certain part of the city. The Mayor said, 'you can go right down there, and so-and-so——I do not recollect his name, he is the Superintendent,——he will attend to what you want.' I followed her in order to see what would happen. The superintendent took a note of her business, and, in a little while, despatched a man to see what the trouble was. In a little while that matter was settled. But, if that had happened in Des Moines, the lady would probably have been writing to the mayor or been going down to see him yet."

In some cities it is a much mooted question as to whether the mayor and aldermen should receive a salary commensurate with the duties which they are called upon to perform. In Thief River Falls an alderman receives $50 a year and the mayor $100 a year.

Compensation.

"A further provision which has reference to the securing of competent men for municipal office is that which provides for official compensation. Formerly, in Des Moines, we paid our aldermen $250 a year, and we have never been able to fully understand how it happened that so many men wanted to occupy the office. In order to dignify the position of councilmen under our new charter and make it worthy of a

PROGRESSIVE REPUBLICANS

They are Enthusiastic Over the Prospects of Victory a Year From Now.

Washington, D. C. Sept. 28.—The campaign of the Progressive Republicans for the control of the next National Convention is assuming proportions that bid fair to cause a political upheaval feared but not yet expected by the Interests that are accustomed to running National Conventions.

Progressive Strength Doubled in The East.

Walter L. Houser, manager of the Progressive Republican campaign returned this week from the West. He declared in an interview published in the Washington Times that the movement for the nomination of a Progressive had grown beyond the utmost expectations of the Progressive leaders. He said that the problem at the headquarters was to keep up with the demands of the movement. Mr. Houser declared that the Progressive Republican movement is being well organized in the Western states, and that its strength there has doubled in a few months.

Progressive Sentiment Strong In The East.

"This movement is growing beyond the most sanguine expectations" said Mr. Houser. "Not only is there overwhelming sentiment in the West, but there is plenty of it in the East. The Progressives in the East are unorganized and are praying for leaders. Every day, for instance we get letters from Massachusetts asking for help and leadership."

The West is controlled by the rural vote, which from all reports seems to be overwhelmingly for the Progressive Movement.

Legitimate Business to Cease Being Cat's Paw.

The East is controlled by a business and industrial vote. The election of 1910 showed an unusual Progressive tendency on the part of this vote. All evidence points to the growth of this tendency. The economic soundness of the policies advocated by the Progressive Republicans, and the economic unsoundness of the policies of the "Special Privilege" interests, are becoming evident to the legitimate business of the East. The vote of this class, it seems, is not much longer to be used to pull chesinuts from the fire for Special Privilege.

The leadership and organization which is needed to make the Progressive sentiment of the East effective probably will not long be lacking. The people of the West and the people of the East will then be working together to secure national legislation this will make "the will of the people the law of the land."

A Political Upheaval Likely.

The politicians who count on the old methods of control by patronage packed conventions, and defective election machinery, to run the next National Republican convention, undoubtedly have yet to realize the power and the sweep of a movement that originates with the people and that has their enthuisastic support. In the next few months there is likely to occur what will seem to them a political upheaval, but which will be but a logical sequence.

"MADAME SHERRY"

The clamoring demands of the play going public of the country has forced owners and producers of "Madame Sherry" to send on tour the alternate New Amsterdam Theatre Company which, with its companion organization has been playing to overflow audiences at the New Amsterdam Theatre, New York since the late summer. All New York authorities are agreed that no such sensational musical comedy successes has been scored by a native production in the past twenty years. Karl Hoschna is the composer of "Madame Sherry." The book was furnished by Otto Hauerbach. In its original French form the piece was a rage in Paris, and, an English version produced by George Edwards at the Apollo Theatre, London, was the furore of an entire season. At present all New York is attending the production which bids fair to remain at the New Amsterdam Theatre, the largest of the New York Broadway playhouses, until the close of the pre- [illegible] production is remarkable in many ways. The New York newspapers acclaimed it as a memorable advance in material and form over any native predecessor.

Most of its airs are already current throughout the world, reports to the publishers of the score averring that "Ev'ry Little Movement Has A Meaning All Its Own," the theme number of the work, is as popular today in San Francisco, London, Paris, Vienna, Berlin and Sydney, Australia, as it is in New York.

"Madame Sherry" will play the Auditorium Theatre for one night Monday Oct 2.

Manager Smith had an opportunity to get this attraction which only plays the large cities as the company was forced to lay over here from 7 P. M. until the morning Winnipeg train allowing Thief River Falls the only open date.

Special augmented orchestra carried by company.

TO MOTHERS.

A word to mothers of boys. Dear Sisters, do you love your boys?

Withi recent years an isidious vice has sprung up all over our land and our brightest boys are falling victims to its prey.

This vice is the narcotic habit in all its forms and especially in its worst form the cigarette.

The evil has grown to such mighty proportions that our state legislature and some school boards have listened to the brave band of white ribbon women, and have given us the new tobacco and cigarette laws.

Parents, will you do your part? Will you aid in the educational work? Voters, will you aid in the enforcement of the law? You can get evidence needed for conviction if you try. I ask you to look in the faces of so many of our boys who have formed this habit and see how the better nature is crushed out by this vice. Nobody is safe as long as our laws are violated.

Your boy may be tempted and fall, just as good boys have fallen. Place the batteries of enforced law about him. The man who would wrong your boy by selling this poisonous drug to him deserves greater punishment than he who robs you of your property, yet you are raising no voice, lifting no hand to protect him. Why? Partly because you do not know the dangerous nature of the deadly cigarette. Committees of learned men have investigated the nature of the cigarette, bringing in the same report. They are all injurious. Again a committee of United States Senators have given the matter thorough investigation, they taking the matter before eminent physicians, and presidents of Colleges all over our country. They bringing the same verdict. The school boards of New York, San Francisco, St. Louis and many other cities are pushing vigorous campaigns against the habit.

Some Superintendents of Schools are taking hold of the matter. We are so glad of this; others would, could they have the co-operation of the school board. It is said that four girls graduates from high school to one boy, and women are capturing all places of honor and profit because the brain is free from nicotine poison. Unless there is an improvement in the personal habits of our

CHARLES B. LOOMIS

Famous Humorist Overtaken by Death After Long Illness

FAMOUS HUMORIST IS DEAD

Charles Battell Loomis Succumbs to Cancer of Stomach.

Hartford, Conn., Sept. 25.—Charles Battell Loomis, famous humorist, author and lecturer, is dead at the Hartford hospital. Death was due to cancer of the stomach. The end was peaceful.

Mr. Loomis was taken ill last December, and subsequently underwent four operations. During the summer he was able to be about and wrote several short stories.

PRICES RAISE AT DEFEAT OF PACT

Foodstuffs Are Led by Wheat in General Ascent.

Chicago, Sept. 23.—Foodstuffs which might have been affected by an influx of Canadian products had Laurier and his government not been defeated in Canada rose sharply in price in all American supply centers.

Wheat led the advance and was followed by flour when millers ignored their previous price lists and adjusted their quotations to figures more commensurate with the advanced cost of the grain staple.

Oats, too, felt the effect of the Canadian vote and as a result consumers may expect soon to pay increased prices for breakfast foods. The initial meal of the day, in fact, seems destined to bear the brunt of the higher living costs within the next few months, as it needed only the day's developments in the trading pits to add force to the recent advances in coffee and sugars.

The greatest advance in wheat was recorded at Duluth. There traders were paying as high as 3 cents a bushel more for the grain than they did before reciprocity was rejected across the Northern border.

Official Paper of The City.

FRIDAY, SEPT. 29, 1911.

Would it not be a paying proposition for the city to put a little useful work on to the three main highways leading into the city so they would be in good shape for the freeze-up. We venture to say that there is as much traffic over these as any country highways in the state.

Crookston business men showed their civic spirit and progressiveness the first of the week by pulling off a successful automobile tour thru the country north and west of here and taking in the Roseau county fair telling the people they met, what a good town they were from.
ED.

Governor Eberhart seems to have decided that he may expect better returns in 1912 by running around the state "Patting the people on the back" so to speak than by sticking in little old St. Paul and seeing that they get fair treatment in their dealings with the railroads and other corporate interests.
ED.

While the Thief River business men are anxious to have any ligitimate manufacturing concern that would find it profitable to do so, and there are many openings for such, locate here and while they might be induced in some instances to give a bonus of some sort to such, still the city can hardly be expected to enter the promotion business. When the proposition put before the commercial club Wednesday night can be shown to be of the right kind it will undoubtedly be taken care of.

The number of school visits since assumption of active school work of the office, Jan. 1st, 1911 is forty.

This concludes the first report for the Pennington county schools. The hope is entertained that our schools will advance materially both in number, financial betterment and efficency of educational attainments in the coming years. We need the co-operation of school officers, the enthusiasm and energetic work of the teacher and the good will and united action of our school patrons to effect this progress. May the good work progress to the best interest of all but especially to our dear school public.

Respectfully,
E. A. MOSTUE,
Co. Supt of Schools.

man's attention, we are to pay our mayor $2,500 a year, and our councilmen $3,000 a year. This salary while not wholly adequate, represents a fair compensation. In the judgment of the committee who drafted this charter it should have been higher. But it was necessary to consider public sentiment. We were forced to submit this charter to a vote of the people, and it was doubted very much whether we could educate the citizen up to a point where he would be willing to accept a charter, which provided for a large and increased salary."

The O'Donnell High Grade Shoe for Men is a triumph in footwear. The unusually fine quality is possible because its makers specialize on Men's High Grade Shoes only. Such results cannot be obtained where a factory divides its efforts between shoes for both sexes.

We request all men who may desire to purchase High Grade Shoes now or a later time to call and examine the O'Donnell Shoe.

SCHOOL NOTES.

* * * * * * * * *

A conference of the superintendents, teachers of agriculture and school officers of the Putnam and Lee-Benson schools was called by the state high school board at the college of agriculture, St. Anthony Park, last Friday and Saturday. Messrs. Hay and Haskin of the local school were present. Some schools near the cities were represented by the superintendent, teacher and the whole board of education. The discussions disclosed the fact that much variance of opinion existed as to the best method of conducting the work in the schools and of extending it into the rural communities. Steps were taken to standardize the studies of the so called industrial subjects.

The associated schools in the country will have the benefit of frequent visits by the superintendent of the central school, of a well planned course of studies for rural schools prepared by the state and central school, of the introduction of work fitted to the conditions surrounding the school, and of the elimination of the useless material from the studies. Many other features might be sugested which will be introduced into these schools which will mark them as practical and progressive. In some sections of the state so many rural schools have applied for association that a limit has been set on the number taking up the work.

New desks have arrived for Miss Swanson's room. A reseating of three upper rooms in the Central will relieve the crowded conditions there.

All the normal students of the classes graduated from the local normal training department are engaged in teaching. Frequent calls for these teachers from adjoining counties convince the school people that a state normal located in Thief River Falls would fill a most pressing want. The local normal department was the largest in the state last year. The last call for a teacher, received last Monday, offered a position in a rural school at $60 per month for a first grade teacher.

36 students have enrolled for the agricultural course in the high school. They purpose following this practical outline of work through the full four years. In this connection it might be stated that entrance to the college of agriculture is now as severe as to the college of engineering, and the latter is considered the heaviest in the university.

The report that students cannot enter the high school only at the first of the term has been given circulation this is far from the truth. The schools are made and conducted for the pupils and are open to all comers at any time, but all admit that students entering a month after schools begin do so with a heavy handicap, which may prevent their completing the work of that year. Better begin work when work begins, but better enter any time than no time at all. The teachers are here to aid all children and at all times, but parents cannot expect satisfactory advancement from students who attend but a part of the school year.

Mrs. Stokke is substituting this week for Miss McGinn in the Central fifth grade room.

Miss Anna Connelly is fast recovering from her illness and will soon be back in school.

The football boys are experiencing some strenuous work under the direction of Mr. Roseland. The team is light but promises to become a formidable machine before many days.

FARMERS, DON'T SELL YOUR POTATOES NOW.

The potatoe crop of the north this year is small compared with the usual yield, it therefore stands that the price will be high during the entire season. Many potato counties have been obliged to import quantities already, which perhaps is one of the surest signs there is a shortage. The price offered by buyers in our city today, Mr. Farmer, are from 20 to 30c per bushel below market prices. Potato buyers in cities where there are potato storage houses are paying from 65c to 75c per bushel cash; they must at least expect the $1.00 mark in a short time to make a good profit. Store your potatoes, if you don't, Mr. Buyer will, and when your potato bins are empty the potatoes will be a ($) or more.

Capitals We Have Had.

It is asserted sometimes that the United States has had five capitals, but the statement is not correct. The United States has had but three capitals—New York, Philadelphia and Washington. In the period preceding the adoption of the constitution no place was legally constituted a capital. In a loose and unofficial sense it is possible to describe as a capital any city which was the seat of government. Taking the sessions of the Continental congress as establishing a seat of government in the Revolution and the confederation, the following cities may loosely rank as capitals: Philadelphia, Baltimore, Lancaster, York, Princeton, Annapolis, Trenton and New York. The articles of confederation were passed by congress in Philadelphia, and the federal convention charged to prepare a constitution convened at the same place.

Shocked the Parisian.

"We came through with flying colors," boasted the middle aged man who had returned from his first visit to Europe. "About the only serious mistake of the trip was made by my wife. She drove the clerk in a Paris shop to indignation and despair by inadvertently asking if the dress trimmings she was looking at were imported. The girl nearly took her head off. 'Imported?' she said. 'Where from?'"—New York Sun.

The program rendered by the Schubert Co. is entirely devoid of waits. Pleasing the people is a trade with this famous organization, and they know that tiresome waits are not a part of an enjoyable program. Although their program is bright and entertaining, and contains a great deal pure fun, it is so refined in character and the laughs so wholesome, that it is endorsed and patronized by the mast select people everywhere. Hear them Oct. 3, at the Auditorium.

AT THE AUDITORIUM MONDAY OCTOBER 2D.

Because everyone all over the country is humming, singing or whistling some numbers of the score of the big sensational musical success, "Madame Sherry," the impression is current in some quarters that the production's charm is in greater part musical. Report says that the mirth qualities of the play are no less engaging than its scroe. The love of a man for a maid under odd circumstances, love of the soulful, romantic sort, love that blossoms in the heart of youth and flourishes as true love ever does, when things do not go smoothly, is the reigning spell of the production, according to report, but this love, this courtship is so beset on so many sides, and attended by so many adventures, that while itself remaining an appealing interest, all its necessary situations arouse amusement. Some idea of the fun developed may perhaps be gleamed by a summary of the character of the play which besides the lovers include an Italian house janitor, his Irish wife, a lively fun-loving actress, a New York man about town, an excitable Venezuelan, an amusingly whimsical uncle of the man in love, and others including the pupils of a dancing school, and the guests of a yachting party.

HAYRACK PARTY ENDS FATALLY

MANY MIRACULOUSLY ESCAPE

Company of Young People Returning From Celebration Struck by Fast Train.

Neenah, Wis., Sept. 25.—Sixteen deaths will probably result from the crash of a mile-a-minute Chicago and Northwestern passenger train at Neenah into a party of thirty-one young persons loaded upon a hayrack.

A big billboard along the railway tracks obscured the view from the locomotive as well as from the wagon. Dust and fog did the rest.

Twelve persons on the hayrack were killed instantly, one has died since, and three out of eight others injured are believed to be fatally hurt. Nine of the thirty-one persons on the wagon escaped without a scratch, and so did both horses. Nobody on the train suffered except from the jar.

The collision occurred at 3:40 a. m. Train No. 121, northbound, whirled through the wagon load of people at an angle or 45 degrees. This peculiarity was owing to the fact that the highway crossing is a dangerous one.

The victims were returning from the Peter Hanson farm, where they had gone to attend the celebration of a wedding anniversary. All but two, who were from Chicago, were residents of Menasha.

Names of the Victims.

The dead are: John Dhill, Chicago; James Cheslock, Gustave Finn, Mabel Finn, John Hart, Steven Lisek, Dominick Ommieschinski, Mabel Renz, John Schedick, Joseph Sienyo, Frank Siegardt and Isabelle Suchowski.

Armless, legless and headless bodies covered the right of way as the train of nine coaches was brought to a stop 800 feet from the scene.

Several of the bodies were mutilated so badly that identification was possible only by fragments of clothing.

Six bodies were found on the engine pilot, where they lay until removed by the train crew and passengers. Two of the persons killed were hurled through a flagman's shanty with such force as to overturn the little structure. One of the bodies was that of Miss Finn, who was projected through one of the side walls of the house and was still alive when removed. She died a few hours later. Another of the victims killed was thrown over a barn fifty feet from the right of way.

CONSERVE THE SOIL, SAYS TAFT

Country Must Provide for Double Present Population.

Kansas City, Sept. 26.—President Taft's speech to the National Conservation congress was devoted almost exclusively to the conservation of the soil. The president explained that at last year's session of the congress in St. Paul he had expressed at length his views with regard to other phases of conservation, and added that, since congress so far had not deemed it necessary to pass conservation legislation, he would confine himself to the one branch of the subject.

Mr. Taft reviewed the history of farming and farm products in this country for the last fifty-six years, and declared that, while he does not agree with those men who say that in fifty years the United States will be unable to feed its own people, there is need for intelligent understanding among the farmers of the trend of events.

The president said that if the population of the nation increases proportionately in the next fifty years the United States will have double the number of its people.

"It is necessary then," he said, "that not only our acreage but our production per acre must increase porportionately so that our people may be fed."

FOUR MEN PERISH IN FLAMES

Boarding House Burns Following Explosion of Gas.

Youngstown, O., Sept. 23.—Four persons were burned to death and more than a dozen others were seriously injured in a fire which for a time threatened to destroy a large part of the town.

The blaze followed the bursting of an eight-inch gas main near a Polish boarding house which, filling quickly with gas, caught fire and was burned to the ground in a few minutes. The police believe the bodies of additional victims will be found in the ruins.

The dead were Polish workingmen.

R. L. BORDEN.

Successful Candidate in the Canadian Elections.

AGREEMENT IS BADLY BEATEN

Reciprocity Treaty and Laurier Government Defeated.

Montreal, Sept. 22.—The Laurier government and reciprocity have suffered an overwhelming defeat in the Canadian elections.

By a veritable political landslide the Liberal majority of forty-three was swept away, and the Conservative party was accorded a majority upward of forty.

Seven cabinet ministers who had served with Premier Laurier were among the defeated candidates.

The Liberals lost ground practically in every province of the Dominion. Where they won their majorities were small. Where the Conservatives won their majorities were tremendous. Ontario, the leading province of Canada, declared almost unanimously against the administration and reciprocity.

Robert L. Borden, leader of the Conservative party, shortly will become the prime minister of Canada. He will be supported in parliament by a working majority of members far more than ample for his purposes.

The government defeat means that the Fielding-Knox reciprocity agreement, ratified by the American congress, in extra session, will not be introduced when the Twelfth parliament assembles next month, and that a revised basis of trade with the United States, looking to closer commercial relations, will not be possible in the immediate future.

The Conservatives are committed to a policy of trade expansion with the empire and a closed door against the United States.

TURKEY ASKS AID OF POWERS

Would Restrain Italy From Hostile Action in Tripoli.

Constantinople, Sept. 26.—The porte has addressed a circular to the Turkish representatives abroad instructing them to invoke the good offices of the powers with a view of restraining Italy from hostile action in Tripoli.

A more tranquil feeling prevails, as it is now known that the reported landing of Italian troops in Tripoli is untrue and the porte has postponed the sailing of transports with war material for Tripoli. Orders have been sent to the Tripolitans to avoid doing anything calculated to disturb good relations or give Italy a pretext for hostile action.

BOGROFF HANGED AT KIEV

Assassin of Premier Stolypin Is Executed.

Kiev, Russia, Sept. 26.—Dmitry Bogroff, the assassin of Premier Stolypin, who was condemned to death by court-martial, was hanged here.

PROBABLY FOUR HUNDRED DEAD

Fire on French Vessel Reaches Ammunition Hold and Terrific Explosions Follow.

MANY RESCUED FROM WRECK

Nearly One Hundred Injured Members of the Crew Taken From the Sunken Craft.

Toulon, France, Sept. 26.—Between 350 and 400 officers and men were killed and the French battleship Liberte was totally destroyed when the magazines of the vessel exploded. The battleship Republique was damaged badly, and the battleships Democratie and Vertie also suffered severely from the masses of twisted iron and armor plate hurled upon their decks.

The explosion was preceded by, and was the result of an outbreak of fire. The flames reached the magazines before there was time to flood them.

A number of men already have been extricated alive from the wreckage, and hope is strong there are others within the broken hulk who can be reached.

Exactly from what cause or when the fire broke out has not been discovered, but it is believed it had smoldered for hours. The position of the fire made it impossible to flood the magazines; nevertheless efforts to do so were made and finally the commanding officer, realizing that the ship was doomed, ordered the bugler to sound the "sauve que peut" (let him save himself who can), and shouted to the men to jump for their lives.

Many Rescued From Wreck.

The work of rescue was quickly begun. The ambulance station was installed in the arsenal, and Admiral Marin-Darbel, maritime prefect, went out to the wreck and superintended the work of extricating those imprisoned. The first body recovered was that of an officer, which was hauled from under an awning with a boat hook. Forty bodies have been taken out, and ninety-four injured have been transferred to the hospital.

Electric shears, to cut through the plates of the Liberte, and a powerful floating crane, to lift the masses of steel, were used in conjunction with a crew of divers who are at work exploring the interior of the hull.

The Liberte appeared as if her bows had doubled over on the stern. Men buried in that part of the wreckage above the water could be heard groaning and screaming for help, which often the rescuers were unable to give.

Officer Tells Story.

One of the survivors, a warrant officer, said:

"The fire broke out in the general store, among cans of oil, turpentine and paint and other inflammables. In spite of every effort the flames reached the coal bunkers, and after that it was difficult to prevent them gaining the powder magazine.

"After the explosion an enormous fragment detached from the bows of the Liberte and other pieces of iron fell on the Republique, smashing the bridge and plunging between the decks. The bugler of the Liberte was hurled through the air from the ill-fated ship to the deck of the Republique, where he was picked up badly hurt. In his hands he still held the bugle with which he was sounding the alarm."

It now is considered almost established that the disaster was due to the deflagration of "B" powder, as in the case of the Iena.

ORDER ISSUED CLERKS STRIKE

Illinois Central Employes at Memphis Quit Work.

THREATEN COMPLETE TIEUP

J. J. Carrigan, President of Clerks' Union Issues Mandate and Nearly a Thousand of His Followers Cease Work—Sympathetic Strike Among Workmen Follows Move by Clerks and Action Is Taken at New Orleans and Jackson, Miss.

Memphis, Tenn., Sept. 26.—If an order issued by J. J. Carrigan, president of the clerks' union of the Illinois Central railroad, is obeyed, all members of that organization throughout the entire system will strike.

In Memphis not only the clerks but practically every member of the employes' federation in the local freight sheds and shops of the Illinois Central and Yazoo and Mississippi Valley railroads left their desks and tools.

That the walkout of the shopmen at Memphis is initiatory to a general movement of organized labor on the Illinois Central and its subsidiary lines is believed.

Tieup Will Be Complete.

Representatives of the Striking employes assert the tieup will be complete. S. S. Norris, general superintendent of the Illinois Central, declared that the railroad will be in a position to cope with the situation.

More than 500 men are out here. The clerks first left their work and then the machinists, boilermakers, blacksmiths, carmen, sheet metal workers and the unionized laborers. Clerks at the freight sheds were replaced by employes from the general and commercial offices.

"In December, 1910," Mr. Carrigan declared, "officials of the Illinois Central entered into an agreement with the clerks employed on the Yazoo and Mississippi Valley railroad by which recognition was granted the union south of Memphis. The next day we were notified that the agreement had been annulled."

Clerks Out at New Orleans.

New Orleans, Sept. 26.—What is believed will be a general strike of organized railway clerks of the Illinois Central and Yazoo and Mississippi Valley railroad systems was started here when nearly 300 clerks engaged at the various yards, depots and offices of the two systems in this city walked out, resulting practically in a complete tieup of business at the affected stations.

Sixty-one Quit at Jackson.

Jackson, Miss., Sept. 26.—Sixty-one clerks, weighmen, messengers and other employes of the Illinois Central railroad at Jackson have gone on strike.

WICHITA MAYOR RECALLED

Objection to Policy in Contemplating Purchase of Water Works Plant.

Wichita, Kan., Sept. 26.—Mayor J. H. Graham and Commissioner E. M. Leach were recalled by the voters of Wichita at a special recall election. Commissioner R. B. Campbell, against whom the recall also was directed, was re-elected by a majority of 38 votes.

Dr. W. W. Minick was the successful candidate for mayor, polling 1,885 more votes than Graham. J. H. Harts defeated Commissioner Leach by 1,300. The Socialist candidates polled a small vote.

One of the charges on which the recall was based was the policy of the administration in contemplating the purchase of a privately owned water works plant for Wichita, instead of establishing a new water system. Allegations also were made of the neglect of the enforcement of the prohibition law.

M'NAMARA IS RE-ELECTED

Bridge Workers Vote Gold Badge to Times Explosion Suspect.

Milwaukee, Sept. 26.—McNamara was re-elected by acclamation secretary of the International Association of Structural Bridge and Iron Workers in convention. A $75 gold badge was voted to Mr. McNamara, whose trial is pending in the Los Angeles Times explosion case.

The initiation and contribution fee of $25 will be increased to $50 if the various locals ratify the action taken by the delegates in convention.

The executive board was increased from four to six members.

Berthold (N. D.) Farmer Suicides.

Minot, N. D., Sept. 26.—William A. Brown, a prosperous farmer, aged forty-six, living three miles east of Berthold, committed suicide by shooting himself through the heart with a forty-four caliber revolver. Brown was a widower and owned three quarter sections of fine land. He was in good financial condition and had money in the bank. He leaves two children. A hired man, E. W. Nelson, found the body in the granary. [illegible]

CROOKSTON SCHOOL OF AGRICULTURE.

Farmers are paying more attention to the live stock end of their business than ever before, but not more than they should. In most cases losses come because the right animals are not kept and bred, because the feed used is not suitable, or because diseases attack the stock. The right kind of information is going out among the farmers through the Agricultural schools and colleges. The state Agricultural school, located at the experiment farm, near Crookston, realizes fully the importance of giving strong courses in animal and dairy husbandry. Two expert feeders and teachers are employed to give attention to that work. Prof. F. H. Sargent has special fitness for the dairy line, and Prof. R. B. Baxter for the care, breeding and feeding of horses, swine, beef cattle and sheep. Not only are there representatives of dairy cattle, but in the state farm herd will be found other types, as well as representatives of various breeds of farm animals. The boys who attend the state agricultural school at Crookston learn how to become expert stockmen. There is nothing so profitable to a man as the income from a well selected and well bred herd. The young men watch the care of the animals, they become good actual operations of the feeding and judges of stock and when they go out, put into practice the training received. The school has twelve specialists teaching and showing by actual demonstrations, scientific agriculture. There is a splendid opportunity offered to young men in attending such a school where every day brings home some need and valuable fact that will increase his success later. Supt. Selvig is using every effort to make these departments turn out young men ready to manage large stock farms and to become good farmers.

Men Who Never Unveil.

There is a wandering tribe of the Sahara called the Tuaregs, a strange people, supposed by some to have descended from the crusaders and distinguished by the wearing of veils, a custom that has occasioned much discussion. The Tuaregs guard their eyes against the glare of the desert by two veils, one rolled round the temples and falling down in front of the eyes, the other reaching from the nostrils to the edge of the clothing, covering the lower part of the face. All manner of learned arguments have been adduced to explain this custom, but hygiene is obviously the only motive. This is shown by the statements of the Tuaregs themselves and by the sobriquet "mouths for flies," which they apply to all who do not wear the veils. It is said that the Tuaregs never remove their veils, even at mealtimes. Indeed, they are so much a part of their wearers that any one deprived of such covering is unrecognized by his friends and relatives.

"Losing the Drop."

"When a man whips out a gun and get the drop' on you there's nothing else to do but throw up your hands and let him have whatever he wants."

"That's where you fool yourself," said the man from the southwest. "If a man has the nerve he can face a gun and get away with it—sometimes. I remember seeing in a border saloon an Englishman pull a gun on a Mexican whom he had caught cheating in a game of cards.

"'You give me back the money you've won from me or I'll blow your head off!'

"'You will?' said the Mexican, looking calmly into the muzzle of the Englishman's revolver. 'Well, you won't do it just now; that gun's not loaded.'

"'What's that?' exclaimed the Englishman, turning the revolver toward himself to look into the chambers. And on the instant the Mexican drew a knife and planted it to the hilt in the Englishman's stomach."—New York Times.

A Styrian Peasant Superstition.

A lawsuit for libel brought by an apothecary in Pollau, in Styria, against a young peasant reveals an extraordinary superstition prevalent among the country people. They believe that apothecaries and doctors have the right to kill at least one man and one woman every year in order to make medicines out of their bodies. An accidental movement of the apothecary at Pollau, Herr Kobermauser, when giving medicine to a boy named Puts led the latter to believe he was going to be killed. He ran away, but got such a fright that he fell ill. The inhabitants believed his story and boycotted the apothecary, who was at length compelled to prosecute. Puts was sentenced to fourteen days' imprisonment, but his parents, who had spread the story, were acquitted on the ground that they had acted in good faith.—London Standard.

A Theory and a Fact.

The late Senator Frye attributed his robust health to correct habits and fondness for sport and the world outdoors. Two months each year he enjoyed at his camp by the Rangeley lakes the keen delights of the rod and gun. If there was one achievement of his life of which he was inclined to boast it was that of having caught the largest square tailed trout ever taken with a fly. But some time ago at a dinner this boast was challenged by no less an authority than Professor Agassiz. That great naturalist asserted that the Maine senator was in error, for it was a scientific fact that no true trout ever attained the weight mentioned—seven pounds. The following season the senator was fortunate enough to catch an eight pound specimen of the same species, which he packed in ice and sent to Professor Agassiz. The professor acknowledged his defeat in the following laconic line: "The theory of a lifetime kicked to death by a fact!" "That," commented Senator Frye, "is the only case I have ever heard of in which a theorist ever paid the slightest attention to a stubborn fact."—Boston Transcript.

A Great Spectacle.

"In the Andes, half a thousand feet higher than Pike's peak, is to be found the Peruvian Garden of the Gods, admired by every traveler fortunate enough to visit it," writes William V. Alford, F. R. G. S., in the Century. "It is locally called the Rock forest, though in no sense of the word is it a forest. It simply resembles one when viewed at a distance of ten miles. The traveler may be forgiven the error of thinking it a forest as he sees it for the first time and forgets that he is no longer where trees grow, but within half an hour's ride of the highest city in the world, Cerro de Pasco, perched, like a condor, on the high peaks of the Andes.

"The Garden of the Gods in Colorado boasts of a few spectacular rocks. But they are few in number, and the area which they cover is not large. The Andean garden covers nearly 100 times the ground and in beauty and interest surpasses its northern counterpart in the same ratio."

Conservation Congress Convenes at Kansas City.

FARM METHODS WRONG

Speakers at First Day's Session Declare Continuation of Present System Will Result Disastrously to the Country—President Wallace and Governor Hadley Discuss Subject in Addresses.

Kansas City, Sept. 26.—Plain words were used by speakers at the opening session of the third annual National Conservation congress here in pointing out that the continuation of present day farming methods will result calamitously for the country. Not only a change in treatment of the soil but of the country people as well was urged. Only by bettering social conditions on the farm, it was declared, could the young persons be kept there. About 3,500 delegates attended.

Statesmen, scientists, educators, farmers and representatives of every branch of American business and social life were in attendance.

The program of the morning session was largely routine. Governor Herbert S. Hadley of Missouri delivered an address of welcome, to which President Wallace and Hon. J. B. White, chairman of the executive committee of the congress, responded.

The afternoon program included an address by Judge B. B. Lindsey of Denver, whose subject was "The Country Child vs. the City Child."

Warning to the Farmers.

Governor Herbert S. Hadley of Missouri, in his address of welcome, said that experts had shown that over 40 per cent of the farm lands of this country are cultivated in a manner tending to decrease rather than to increase their productivity. Such a policy must inevitably result, he said, in the impoverishment of the nation.

In his address President Wallace declared that many farmers of the present day have more faith in moon signs than in agricultural colleges and experiment stations; more faith in ordinary politicians than in college professors and scientists; more faith in yellow journals than in the best agricultural papers and that the Nineteenth century farmer was no farmer at all, but a robber of the soil. He strongly urged scientific farming as the only means by which the cost of living can be reduced.

Mr. Wallace outlined two drifts of population—from the farm to the city and from the city to the land—and the work of the congress as related thereto.

COMMISSION GOVERNMENT

Extracts from "The Story of the Short Ballot Cities". Results Obtained.

The following paragraphs telling of results obtained in commission governed cities is taken from "The Story of the Short Ballot Cities," written by Richard S. Childs for The Short Ballot Organization, 383 Fourth Avenue, New York. The cities mentioned are of a larger population than Thief River Falls, but the only difference that makes in a comparison is that business is done here on a smaller scale.

Galveston, Texas.

This commission in Galveston was able to make decisions and get things accomplished in half the time that it took the old board of aldermen to get a resolution referred to a committee. The commission planned and built a sea wall to protect the city against further floods, raised the ground level of a large part of the town, got the city government running again at onethird less than actual cost, made a number of important improvements and at the same time reduced the debt and the tax rate.

Houston, Texas.

Commission plan in effect in 1905. The commission reduced the tax rate from $2.00 to $1.70, while assesments are said to be proportionately lower than before. A floating debt of $400,000 was paid off and in 1909 the cash on hand was $900,000. The city has bought a waterworks and made enormous paving additions (which are not assessed on property in Houston), has acquired new parks and deepened the ship channel instead of languishing in the hope of a federal subsidy. The price of gas has been forced down from $1.50 to $1.15 per thousand per thousand. In advertising herself to attract new industries, Houston states, "her city hall is a business house; she has no wards, no ward politicians and no graft."

Dallas, Texas.

Commission plan in effect in 1907. In first two years the commission wiped out a dificiency of $290,000 and established a credit balance. At the expiration of the first term of the commission, a petition signed by 3,700 voters was circulated amid much enthusiasm asking for commissioners all to run for re-election. The chamber of commerce advertises the commission government as a desirable feature of the city to attract new industries.

DesMoines, Iowa.

Commission plan in effect in 1907. In its first year the commission saved $184,000 in running expenses, as compared with the previous year under the old government. It made better bargains for the city in electric light charges, obtained interest on the city deposits for the first time and cleaned the streets and alleys better (the alleys had formerly not been cleaned at all.)

Cedar Rapids, Iowa.

Commission plan in effect in 1908. The commission has reduced the tax rate and the debt, while making certain big improvements, such as the acquirement of a big island in the river, out of current expenses instead of bond issues. The island is for municipal buildings in a handsome park setting, in accordance with a "city beautiful" plan devised by an expert. The police and fire department forces have been enlarged despite the reduced tax rate.

Leavensworth, Kansas.

Commission plan in effect in 1908. The commission has reduced the bondal indebtness by $112,950, while th

O. O. BERGE COMMITS SUICIDE

Former Resident of This City Shoots Himself in a Crookston Store.

A week ago Thursday afternoon O. O. Berge, who recently left this city with his family for Crookston, entered the O'Brien hardware store, purchased a 32 caliber revolver, loaded it and walked to the front of the store, where he fired two shots into his head. Berge fell to the floor and the men in the store rushed to him, summoning medical aid and an ambulanse.

He was hurried to St. Vincent's hospital, where Dr. Norman discovered that one bullet had entered the right side of his head and skirting under the skin lodged on the opposite side of his head, and the second had entered his jaw, going diagonally thru the head. Berge never regained consciousness, tho he was very delirous.

He died at the hospital Saturday morning, and the remains were later shipped to Grand Forks, where funeral services were held under the auspices of the A. O. U. W. He leaves a wife and two chidlren to mourn his oss, a daughter 18 years and a boy 14 years or age. His suicide was not due to drink, because he was a strict temperance man, but was probably the result of temporary insanity caused by worry over business affairs and domestic troubles.

Mr. Berge was 40 years of age and fairly well known here, he having worked for two years in the clothing department of the Langseth Mercantile Co. Last January he was dismissed from this Co., and since that time had been able to secure work at odd times only. He was of a rather melanchbly disposition and not inclined to associate much with his fellow workers. In dealing with a customer he was rather arbitrary in his manner if the goods shown did not please, or the customer wished to see other goods.

Before coming here Berge was engaged for 11 years in the Ontario store at Grand Forks. He had a home and some property there, and when he left is said to have had some money. It would seem from a record of his life that he had been gradually approaching the stage of periodic insanity and something happened in Crookston Thursday afternoon to bring things to a climax.

FIRST GAME OF SEASON

To-morrow morning the High School foot-ball team leaves for Bemidji where they will tear up the gridiron in opposition to the fast Bemidji High School team. This will be the first game of the season for the local boys and it will serve as an opportunity for coach Roseland and the boys to see where they stand. Both teams are rather light, possibly averaging 147 pounds, but very fast, and an interesting game is expected.

There has been a few slight changes in the playing rules, but not enough to change the game materially from last year.

The following gives the position and name of the local players:

Ends—John Brudie, Ben Lonson.

Tackles—Edgar Wold, Jens Grothe.

Guards—Francis Burns, Alfred Adolphs.

Halves—Duncan Stanton, Ward Long.

Fullback—Oscar Cerney.

Quarterback—Elmer Iverson (capt.)

Subs—Will Shea, Albert Teal, Arthur Johnson.

THE FLAX FIBRE INDUSTRY

Ancient and Present Day Methods of Making Fibre. Possibilities of McAdam Machine.

There has been considerable comment of late relative to the installation in Thief River Falls of the McAdam flax fibre machine, it being claimed to be the first and only [illegible] machine that has proved an [illegible] success in the manufacture [illegible] flax fibre. Mr. Beard, special representative for the introduction of the McAdam machine, is still in this vicinity working up the proposition.

While the proposition is being further investigated, and awaiting the arrival of Mr. McAdam, the inventor, the following article giving a review of the flax fibre industry, and telling of the possibilities to be realized from a successful flax fibre machine, will be of interest to the public.

Present Crude and Expensive Methods of Treatment.

The cultivation and preparation of flax are the most ancient of textile industries; distinct traces of their existence during the Stone Age being preserved. Flax continued to be the most important of vegeable fibres till near the close of the Eighteenth Century, when cotton attained its great importance as a fiber of commerce.

From ancient times flax has been treated for linen purposes by primitive, slow and laborious hand processes. Chemists and inventors have striven to discover means to improve the old method and to reduce the time and expense of preparing lines and flax products. Until the perfection of the McAdam machine, little improvement had been made over the most archaic methods.

Under the present system of preparing linen fibres for the market in vogue in several European countries, the flax straw is pulled by hand and stacked like wheat; it is then "rippled" or cleaned. This process consists in tearing off the seeds by pulling the flax through a flax comb made of a series of iron teeth 18 inches long, placed within a distance of one-half inch of each other. These are fastened in a block of wood which is placed at the end of a plank or long stool, on which the operator sits.

The next process is to free the fiber from the woody core or "boon" of the stem. This is effected by setting or rotting, the bundle of flax being immersed in stagnant or running water. Great care is necessary in this operation since if it is too long continued decomposition may extend to the fiber and render it useless. The process of dew-retting is also employed, for which a moist meadow is required, the flax being sperad over the ground at the rate of a ton to the acre.

For pool retting the bog-holes in Ireland are used, and elsewhere steep-holes are prepared. The sheaves are kept entirely under water, but without touching the bottom.

After this operation, which usually requires from five to ten days, the flax is roughly stacked and left to further exposure to the air.

After retting, the next process is breaking. The flax is passed thru a brake or revolving rollers to break the boon. The brake, worked by manual labor, consists of a frame, on the upper side of which are a number of groves; a moving hinge is placed at one end and provided with a similar grooved piece on its lower side, but so placed that the projections pass into the hollows of the lower. The flax placed between these, and [illegible] bringing down the hinged part, is [illegible]. In some countries this process is [illegible] by means of a "bott-[illegible]" which is made of wood rid[illegible] for pound[illegible].

The next step is that of scutching, [illegible] the fiber from the woo[illegible]. In European countries [illegible] is almost invariably performed by hand, the flax being held in a groove made in an upright stand and struck by a flat blade. In Great Britain efforts have been made to perform scutching by machinery, but the process impairs the fiber.

The next process is that of heckling, by which the longest and better portion of the fiber called "line" is separated from the shorter and ravelled portion called "tow". The hand-heckle is a many-toothed steel comb, and the fineness of the flax increases with the number of times it is heckled, each time with a finer instrument.

The initial processes of preparing linens for manufacturers have from time immemorial been chiefly performed by the farmers by means of crude and simple hand processes and implements.

Many experiments have been made for the purpose of improving these operations or of avoiding the necessity of some of them but little success has been had and the processes now in use present little improvement over the most ancient methods.

Among the circumstances which have retarded the improvement, of both of the growing and preparing of the flax, is the fact that until comparatively recent times the whole industry has been conducted only on a domestic scale. In many countries it has been, and is still, the practice for every small farmer to grow flax in small patches and to have it retted scutched, cleaned, spun, wove, bleached and finished entirely within the limits of his own premises, and all by members or dependants of the family. Thus the flax industry has long been kept away from the most powerful motives to apply to it labor-saving devices, and apart from the influence of scientific inquiry for the improvement of methods and processes. Says the Encyclopedia Brittanica:

"The cultivation of the plant and the preparation of the fibre have therefore, even at the present day, not come under the influence (except in crtain favorable localities) of scientific knowledge and experience, and the greater part of the flax in use at the present moment is prepared precisely by the methods employed in Egypt when the descendants of Jacob dwelt in the land of Goshen."

Field For The Company's Operations

An enormous amount of flax is raised in the United States, Canada, and Mexico annually of which the only portion utilized is the seed, and vast quantities of the stalk are allowed to go to waste.

In the United States in 1908 approxiamtely four million acres of flax were cultivated. This was grown principally in Ohio, Indiana, Nebraska, Iowa, Kansas, North and South Dakota, Wisconsin, Illinois, Minnesota, Michigan, Kentucky, Missouri, California and Washington. The seed produced from this acreage was 25,851,000 bushels valued at $24,713,000.

FAVORABLE TO OIL ENGINES

Council Listens To Committee's Report and Decides Oil Is IT.

The committee which left here last week for the purpose of investigating the oil engine proposition, returned Monday morning, and on Tuesday evening at a meeting of the city council made such a favorable report that the council decided to pass up the steam plant proposition entirely and advertise for oil engine bids. In this week's issue there is an advertisement for bids for the erection of a brick building in which to house the apparatus. Next week will appear the advertisement for oil engine bids.

The investigating committee, consisting of Dr. Grundy, Goodnow Torrison and Martin Evenson, made a very satisfactory report in regard to what they saw. Their mission was not so much to investigate the technical points of an oil engine as to find out whether oil engines were actually running and giving satisfaction in those places where they have been installed. They visited Redwood Falls, Minn., and the Wisconsin cities Nenaska, Neenah, Oshkosh, Kimberely and Beloit. In every one of these places they heard favorable reports, both from the engineers in charge and the citizens at large. In no case would they change back to the steam engine, and in some places they are installing oil engines at a sacrifice of their steam engines on account of the large amount of money that will be saved per yera with the new system.

In Redwood Falls a private concern had been using a 145 h. p. Corliss condensing engine, water auxiliary, and furnishing light at 2.1c per kilowatt. When the water began to fail, the company found that if they depended on steam power, it would be a losing proposition at 2.1c. Now they have installed a 120 h. p. oil engine, and at the above price are making a good profit; in fact, light could be furnished much cheaper than it is, if the plant was being operated by the city for the benefit of the citizens as a whole.

In Neenah the plant was run by the city. They have had in operation for six years two 75 h. p. oil engines, and at the present time are installing a 225 h. p. engine. Arc lights are run at a cost of $32.03 per light.

In Kimberley there are installed in a paper mill 1000 and 225 h. p. engines, which are giving perfect satisfaction, thereby showing that large units work just as well as small ones.

In Oshkosh where they have oil engines installed is an ice plent and in a brewery, the engineers claim that they woudn't have enything else, because these engines are such little bother and run so well.

In Beloit they saw Fairbanks-Morse and Co. 150 and 100 h. p. engines on the experimental floors, and so far as the committee could determine they were equal in every way to the Diesel type found in other cities visited. The Fairbanks-Morse engines are being installed in Beloit, and many of them are giving pleasing results in the south.

Mrs. Robert Burt, together with her 10 year old son, left Peoria, Ill., about a week ago with the intention of visiting Mrs. Burt's mother, at Elm Creek, Manitoba, was turned back when she reached the Canadian boundry, being adjudged insane by the officials.

PROGRESSIVE REPUBLICANS

Fisher's Break in Kansas Tickles Progressives. Norton's Letter.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 4.—There is some kind of amusement in the Capitol among the politicians of all sorts at the President's brief remarks in Michigan on his use or misuse of the patronage and on his profound silence regarding the matter in Illinois, Kansas and Iowa. It is not of record that he visited any of the Michigan Republicans with his wrath, it was reserved for members of the party from further west, from the Progressive Republican states, who dared to oppose the Aldrich law or to amend the Taft-Wickersham railroad law to feel the actual effects of the Presidential displeasure.

"Beverely, Mass., Sept. 15, 1910. Your letters of the 9th are at hand, and I have delayed replying until after the primary elections. The President directs me to express to you and to your friends his deep appreciation of the work which you have done, and the powerful assistance which you have extended to the administration from the beginning—an assistance that has contributed much to the legislative and other successes which have been secured.

"The President recognizes that your efforts have been wholly disinterested, that you have fought sturdily and generously for what you believe to be his interest and the welfare and success of the party. While Republican legislation pending in Congress was opposed by certain Republicans, the President felt it to be his duty to the party and to the country to withhold Federal patronage from certain senators and congressman who seemed to be in opposition to the administrations efforts to carry out the promises of the party platform.

"That attitude, however, ended with the primary elections and nominating conventions, which have now been held, and in which the voters have had opportunity to declare themselves. The people have spoken as the party faces the fall elections; the question must be settled by Republicans of every shade of opinion whether the differences of the last sessian shall be perpetuated or shall be forgotten.

"He recognizes the danger that in certain cases expressions of feeling were so intense as to make it difficult in some instances for factions to come together and work loyally for the party but, as he stated in his letter to the Republican congressional committee, he believes it can be done and should be done. The President is confident that you will yourselves meet your local and State situation in this spirit, and that you will write to your friends and ask them to do likewise.

"The President feels that the value of Federal patronage has been greatly exagerated, and that the refusal to grant it has probably been more useful to the men affected than the appointments would have been. In the preliminary skirmishes in certain States, like Wisconsin and Iowa, and elsewhere, he was willing, in the interst of what the leaders believed would lead to party success, to make certain discriminations; but the President has concluded that it is his duty now to treat all Republican congressmen and senators alike, without any distinction. He will now follow the usual rule in Republican congressional districts and States and follow the recommendations made by Republican congressmen and senators of whatever shade of political opin-

YULE AS "BOB ACRES."

An engagement of more than ordinary importance and attractiveness to local lovers of the drama will be that of William Yule, the clever comedian, at the Auditorium on Monday Oct. 9th, when he will present for the first time in this city Richard Brinsley Sheridan's famous comedy "The Rivals." Mr. Yule has shown distinct artistic instinct in adding this great play to his already extensive and scholarly repertoire, for it is a play every student of literature should see. Mr. Yule will appear as the swaggering yet timid country squire, "Bob Acres," a role which should give him every opportunity for the full display of his unquestioned talent in low comedy.

Mr. Yule is supported, as usual, by a highly capable company which includes the charming young leading lady, Miss Violet Eddym, already known to us, and Miss Clara LaMar, Mr. Randall McAlister, Mr. Henley Edwards, Mr. Walter Hutchins, Miss Leonora Harrington, Mr. William Goetz, Mr. Frank Halliday and others.

The sale of seats for Mr. Yule's engagement will be held at Peoples Drug Store, on sale now. Phone No. 24.

Sincerely yours,
CHARLES D. NORTON,
Sec'y to the President.

The notorious Norton Letter has not been forgotten, but it was not until the other day that people in Washington began to refresh their memories as to its exact terms. People are chuckling over the sentence which reads, "In the preliminary skirmishes in certain States, like Wisconsin and Iowa, and elsewhere, he was willing, in the interests of what the leaders believed would lead to party success, to make certain discriminations; but the President has concluded that it is his duty now to treat all Republican congressmen and senators alike, without any distinction." It seems as if the President had just engaged in another preliminary skirmish in Kansas when Senator Bristow replied without quibling to Senator Fisher's indiscreet and disingenuous remarks about his own Progressivism.

Fisher's Break in Kansas.

Secretary Fisher came to Washingtration and of the Progressive Republicans in Washington, the more keen will be the general appreciation of the fact that the constructive work has been done by the Progressives and that it is they who have a really constructive program with regard to railroads, trusts and the development of the natural resources of Alaska. On their record and on their program they are willing to go to the country and to submit the rank and file of the Republican party the question whether Senator La Follete or President Taft shall be chosen as the Republican candidate in 1912. ton with the reputation of being an astute wire puller, a refined dialectician, a controversialist skilled in making the lesser appear the greater reason. His former political associates in Illinois are active in the revolt in that state against Lorimer and Speaker Cannon, who is the best known of the President's supporters in Illinois. Secretary Fisher has parted company with them and has gone over, bag and bagagge to the standpatters. It is reported that he is not in sympathy with the movement for direct legislation in that state or for Presidential preference primaries anywhere. Mr. Fisher is more often spoken of as a Taft campaign manager than any one else.

Altogether Progressive Republicans have some reason to be grateful to Secretary Fisher. He has served to make a little clearer the already clearing issues. The Progressive leaders feel that the more the people consider the records of the adminis-

AVERTS AWFUL TRAGEDY

Timely advice given Mrs. C. W. Willoughby, of Marengo, Wis., (R. No. 1) prevented a dreadful tragedy and saved two lives. Doctors had said her frightful cough was a "consumptoin" cough and could do little to help her. After many remedies failed, her aunt urged her to take Dr. King's New Discovery. "I have been using it for some time," she wrote "and the awful cough has almost gone. It also saved my little boy when taken with a severe bronchial trouble," This matchless medicine has no equal for throat and lung troubles. Price 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free. Guaranteed by all druggists.

(Con. from page 1.)

Practically all the flax straw was destroyed or burned. The United States Department of Agriculture, Farmers' Bulletin, February 26th, 1907, says:

"During the season of 1904 the entire area of flax in the United States was approximately 3,700,000 acres. The seed crop in acres new to cultivation has always ben a paving one, though the remainder of the crop has been allowed to go to waste or has been burned. Millions of tons of straw have been burned each year, much of which, in quality and length for the productnon of fibre, far excels the average straw from which the Russian peasant makes the fibre which chiefly supplies the linen fabrics of the world."

The Russian flax fiber crop for 1907 sold for $75,000,000, the seed crop for $17,000,000.

Owing to the fact that the preparation of flax fiber by present methods require a vast amount of labor, it has not been feasible to utilize the flax raisel in this country in competition with the far cheaper labor of Europe.

The chief reason why flax raised in this country has not been utilized for its fiber is because in the rich fields of the West the raising of the crop for seed alone has been very profitable, and the necessity of using a large amount of hand labor under the old methods in order to produce merchantable fiber and tow, and the high wages demanded in this country has precluded the profitable utilization of the straw in competition with the peasant labor of Russia, Belgium, Germany, Ireland, and other foreign countries. There is no room for doubt that the finest quality of flax fiber may be raised in this contry.

The climatic and soil conditions in many parts of the country are equal or superior to those of Europe. In Bulletin 71 of the "North Dakota Agricultural College," published in 1906, appears the following:

"In the early years following the Revolution it is well known that fine types of fiber were made throughout all the original States. Latter Pensylvania, Tennessee, and Kentucky were noted for the fine quality of flax fiber which could be produced there."

In Bulletin No. 27 of the West Department of Agriculture, published in 1895, it is said:

"From the investigations and experiments of the Department with the culture, however, in the past few years, it has been demonstrated that a good quality of flax can be grown by farmers in many sections of the United States. With the increased skill and knowledge of culture that comes with practice, they will be enabled to grow a quality of flax fiber that will compete with much of the flax produced for the linen and flax twine mills of the United States."

In Bulletin No. 274 of the U. S. Department of Agriculture published in 1907, referring to the annual waste of straw, it is said:

"Millions of tons of straw have been burned each year, much of which, in quality and length for the production of fiber, far excels the average straw from which the Russian peasant makes the fiber which chiefly supplies the linen fabrics of the world."

A few years ago it was urged against the Beet Sugar Industry that beets suitable for the manufacturing of sugar could not be raised in this country as was being done at that time in Germany and other countries on a large scale. Experience has shown that this claim was unfounded and to-day the beet sugar industry in this country has grown to enormous proportions. The crop of flax now grown in this country is very large and constitutes one of our staple industries. With recurring cops of larger and larger proportions, which are issued by the impending utilization of the fiber, as well as the seed, the stability of the linen industry may be absolutely established.

It is apparent from the foregoing that a machine that will turn out merchantable flax fiber for manufacture into the various linen products for which flax is used, without the necessity of using hand labor except that required to feed the machine

Official Paper of The City.

FRIDAY, OCT. 6, 1911.

What a difference there would be in the roads at the present time if the split drag had been used when it should have.

The weather man appears to have jarred the water wagon rather hard. Or maby it is the result of the recent Maine Election.

One of the local papers made a very serious mistake in calling the trip of the Oil Engine Committee a junket. It was a business trip in the interest of the city and proved to be a good investment.

Daniel W. Lowler of St. Paul has filed as a candidate for the nomination as governor on the Democratic ticket. His idea in so doing must be to assist the present incumbent of the govenor's chair in his fight for re-election.

If President Taft only had a supreme court vacancy to which he could appoint that man LaFollet it would make his path look less thorny. La-Follets indirect opposition to Senator Stephensen caused the latter to invest $120,000 in his Senatorial toga. At that rate it will keep brother Charlie hustling to finance next years election.

The city council showed unexpected wisdom in reconsidering their first hasty move in the matter of letting the contract for the new electric plant. The city will undoubtedly be the gainer to the extent of several thousand dollars because of it. The The Press feels that it has been justified in its objection to the Councils first move in the investment of such a considerable sum of the peoples money.

THE DOLLAR AND THE CROSS.

We are going to have a religious revival led by men whose combined wealth runs into hundreds of millions. J. P. Morgan is at the head of it. The movement will be "organized by buisness men on business lines," and is to beat anything "in the history of the human race since the days of the Reformation."

Which is really going some!

Now, why this sudden access of spirituality on the part of organized dollars? Why have the multimillioned leaders of American business got religion at this particular juncture? Why are they so determined to ram it down the throats of all the rest of us?

You are having a hard time in this world trying to get enough to eat. If the country goes to war, you do the fighting and leave your wife and babies to struggle alone. In the piping days of peace, you live, perhaps, in a tenement and work in a sweatshop.

But from the blood-stained field, the squalid tenement, the stifling sweatshop and factory, you look upward comforted by the conviction that beyond your earthly horizon lie peace, happiness and eternal reward for those who bear their present burdens with meekness and fortitude and are dead.

Do you get it? Your fathers and grandfathers got it, all right. And you are going to get it if the "biggest revival in human history" can pound it into your thick old head.

JOHNSON WAS HAMPERED.

Official In The Indian Service Says Washington Men are Inefficient.

Fergus Falls, Oct. 2.—William E. Johnson has written a letter to the country papers of this vicinity giving his reasons for his resignation from the government service. He says in part:

"After five years of service, I am laying down my commission as chief special officer of the United States Indian service. A political ring has been formed in the interior department which resents anything like aggressive action in supervising the liquor traffic among Indians. In the past few months these men have done everything in their power to hamper, undermine and prevent successful efforts for catching bootleggers. I refused to be chloroformed, but these men finally got me so bottled up that I could do but little, except to mark time and draw my salary. I saw no other way to maintain my self-respect except to resign. The immediate cause of my resignation was the New Mexican complications. In the past ten years the Pueblo Indians of northern New Mexico have been systematically plundered of their pasturage and robbed of their lands in a way that would have put Boss Tweed to shame. This system robbery is carried on with the knowledge and under the protection of the Indian administration of New Mexico. The Indian office is fully informed of the rascality, but the dead hand of politicians prevents any move to protect the Indians."—Crookston Daily Times.

ANSWERS FINAL CALL

Conductor Sallow Succumbs To Cancer of Stomach Sunday.

After an extended strife with the dread diseace cancer of the stomach, Charles H. Salolw answered the Final Call last Sunday morning at 8:30 o'clock. Mr. Sallow had arisen and it was while in the act of dressing to go to breakfast that he suddenly felt much weaker and again took to his bed. The end came in but a few minutes.

Mr. Sallow was one of the old and trusted employees of the Soo Line being at the present time freight conductor.

Mr. Sallow and family have made this city their home for the last four years and during that time have made many friends who will mourn to learn of Mr. Sallow's demise.

Deceased was born in Germany Sept. 14, 1862 and was married to Mary J. Jordan on Aug. 29, 1889.

Two daughters Bessie and Florence with Mrs. Sallow remain to mourn his loss.

The funeral services were held yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock under the auspices of the Order of Railway Conductors. The A. O. N. W. Lodge also marched in the funeral procession to the last resting place of their deceased brother in the Greenwood cemetery.

In recognition of the sad bereavement all business places closed their doors from 1:30 to 3:00 o'clock.

ABOUT THAT LOG JAM

Reports have been circulated in various ways that the log jam at the source of Red Lake River is the cause, or has much to do with the cause, of the present low stage of water in the river. Early last Summer when the low stage of water caused the mill to shut down and seriously hampered the water-power plants, a committee, consisting of Milton Forder, J. C. Berg and Capt. Eberhardt, was sent to investigate the log jam. They reported that the logs were not interfering materially with the flow of water and that the shortage of water was caused by a lowness of water in the big lake, aided perhaps by the present drainage system. If there had been any chances of getting a reliable water supply, this city would not now be putting in an auxiliary electric light plant.

tax rate has remained stationary. Kansas is a prohibition state, but Leavenworth had always defied the law and allowed the saloons to exist, subject to peiodical fines which brought in $80,000 a year. The commission closed the saloons and disposed of this illegal revenue without disturbing the tax rate. Over $200,000 was spent in special improvements the first year as against an average of $25,000 in previous years. In the first two years under the new system six miles of street were paved as against twelve miles in the preceding twenty-five years.

Chris Amundson, John Jarnason, Duncan Stanton and Bill Mullry went partridge hunting last Monday. When the party reached a point four miles northwest of here, Bill got lost, and the rest of the party had to come home without him. However, Bill was able to right himself eventually so that he came out at the Connelly farm west of here. After receiving specific directions there as to the way home, he reached here none the worse for wear.

SCHOOL NOTES.

* * * * * * * * * *

Reports from the state university announce the admission of James Curran, Morlan Bishop and George Hicks to the university band. This musical honor is of more consequence than appears on the surface, as the competition for enrollment in this organization is exceedingly keen among the aligible members of the 500 students of the university. It is rare that a freshman makes the band, but Morlan turned the trick.

Mrs. Larson, a new arrival in the city, has taken Mrs. Will Korstad's place as substitute in Miss Connelly's seventh grade room at the Washington. Mrs. Larson taught a similar grade in North Dakota for several years just prior to coming to Thief River Falls.

Mr. Haskin has started classes in elementary agriculture in the grammar grades. The work will be largely on the laboratory plan and will prove interesting, as it is instructive, to the students of these grades.

Children still continue entering the rooms, all of which are already filled and some uncomfortably crowded. Parents ought to visit the schools and discover how a young lady teacher can direct the energies of from 40 to 50 restless little bodies, any two or three of whom can overtax the patience of the ordinary parent.

The football boys may try their first game with Bemidji next Saturday. The tema is light but made up of good material.

Exhibits from the sewing, cooking and manual training departments will be prepared and forwarded to the meeting of the state educational association at St. Paul about Oct. 28th The high schools receiving special state aid for industrial work will enter the contest at this time.

The state high school board sent a peremptory notice to the normal training department last week that the maximum enrollment therein must not be over twenty. This works a decided hardship on many students possessing the necessary qualifications to enter and who must postpone such actoin for one year at least. Two departments could be filled here to the maximum. It begins to look as though nothing short of a sixth state normal school at Thief River Falls will satisfy the demands of the upper part of the state for normal preparation.

Nearly every higher educational insituation in Minnesota and North Dakota has one or more graduates of the local high school enrolled in its ranks. To date, not one of these students has failed to perform the tasks assigned him or her, and this in the face of the fact that our own university, not to mention other schools, has failed or conditioned scores of students last year and this fall. This uniform success is creditable to the students and brings not a little honor to Thief River Falls.

The city council has ordered a high and dry crossing at the northeast corner of the high school campus. This will earn the city authorities the sincere thanks of 500 students and 17 teachers who wade through seas of mud at this corner every time it rains. SCHOOL NOTES would suggest that walks be built two blocks apart, connecting Markley Av. and St. Paul Av. Half the enrollment at the Knox building has for years waded through the mud of the cross streets connecting these avenues, and scores of children sit all day in school with wet feet when the weather is inclement. At best these streets are very low and rarly become dry.

Amusements

AT THE LYCEUM.

Mr. Halvorson was unable to appear last Sunday night and accompany Mr. Morck in a violin duet.

Mutt and Jeff still continue to make a big hit at the Lyceum each week.

Next week there will be the usual good pictures and illustrated songs. Mr. Morck continues playing the violin and Harry Kimpton will be at the piano.

MR. YULE'S NEW PLAY.

We have come to look for Mr. William Yule each season, and a season without seeing this capable and eminent young comedian, would be indeed incomplete for theatregoers. This year he has added a new play to his repertoire—"The Rivals," by Richard Brinsley Sheridan. "The Rivals" makes a very particular appeal to English-speaking people as it is by one of the most brilliant of all English dramatists, and reflects the manners and dress of a period when England was most alluring and picturesque.

The plot of the comedy is exceedingly funny and the characters are masterpieces, for who has not heard of "Bob Acres," the boorish squire; "Mrs. Malaprop," the lady who takes such liberties with the English language that every word she speaks elicits laughter; the fiery Sir Lucius O'Trigger; the love-sick Lydia Languish; the dashing Captain Absolute, and his bombastic father, Sir Anthony Absolute? All these are part and parcel of one's education in English literature—therefore it is a treat to meet them face to face in flesh and blood.

Mr. Yule will give "The Rivals" with a beautiful and complete scenic production.

The sale of seats for this engagement is on sale now at Peoples Drug Store, and the date he will be seen here is Monday, Oct. 9th.

HYPNOTIST AT AUDITORIUM

The offering at the Opera House Oct. 10 to 15 promises to be a novelty and one that will attract much attention and draw large crowds. Harnum a Hypnotist and Scientist will entertain with exhibitions of hypnotism and practical psychology. It is claimed that he has the greatest laughing show on earth and critics in cities where he has played say that all records for laughing are broken. He hypnotises people from the audience and has them go thru all kinds of ludicrous scenes and laughable situations. The comedy produced is clean and in no way offensive. Being one of America's foremost psychologists and the best stage demonstrator of hypnotism he is in a position to instruct as well as entertain. People interested in any phase of psychology will enjoy his lectures and scientific tests and those wishing to laugh will havve the opportunity it is claimed. Harnum changes his performance each night. Prices 10c-25c-35c- and 50c.

FIRST NUMBER ON LYCEUM COURSE OCT. 16.

Victor L. Berger has been secured for the first number on the Lyceum course, he appearing at the auditorium Oct. 16th. Mr. Berger is the socialist representative in congress for the people of Wisconsin, and has the honor of being the only socialist who holds such an office.

He has three topics on which he lectures; "The French Revolution" from a socialist's point of view; "Socialism in Milwaukee," and the "The Trust-Question", from a socialist point of view. He will most likely speak here on the trust question a subject which he has given much study and has become famous thruout the United States by his able talks. His maiden speech in congress dealing with tariff and its effects on the laborer, has been more widely circulated and discussed than any speech of modern times.

This Lyceum course is a new thing, at least a new thing since the city has grown to its present proportions, and is financed by local men. They intend to make it a permanent feature of this city's attractions, if this year's experiment meets with success. If there is any money left over after all expenses are paid, it will be used towards securing a better and more expensive course for next year.

This year there will be five numbers, secured at a cots of .675.00, exclusive of the other expenses incurred in staging any attraction. This will be a better course than is generally stged the first year, owing to the hearty support that was given it at the start. It is expected that a great many parties from surrounding towns and the country will take advantage of hearing these splendid numbers. Season tickets are sold at $3.00 for one and $5.00 for two, making a cost of 50 cents per attraction.

OGAHMAH IS BEING REFURNISHED.

H. A. Brumund, who took charge of the Ogahmah Hotel Sept. 20th, is living up to all the good things prophesied for him at that time. The hotel is now nearly refurnished thruout. Splendid new office furniture is in evidence; the dining room is twice as well lighted as ever before; wood-work has been repainted; new beds, and they are as good beds as can be found in any modern hotel, are being put in all the rooms; there is a new and respectable looking bus, and, best of all the meals are uniformly good. Mr. Brumund richly deserves the large patronage that is fast coming his way.

OUR NEW BARBER

Through the effors of Mr. Furan, of the firm of Furan & Benson, have succeeded in engaging the services of Mr. A. G. Kellam of Minneapolis, recently of the Lumber Exchange Barber shop & Turkish Baths.

Mr. Kellam is an expert workman having studied the art of scientific massage as well as the other phases of the business for several years, and those who will patronize him will be convinced.

Mr. Kellam has expressed his intention of making Thief River Falls his future home.

The addition of Mr. Kellam to the Furan & Benson shop, has raised the standard of tonsorial workmanship of the town and has truely placed that shop as second to none in this city.

Mrs. Burt was put on the south bound flyer and put off when the train reached this city. She stayed in the depot over night, and next morning Sheriff LaBree and attendant took charge of her. LaBree telegraphed her husband, foreman in a paper mill at Peoria, and he replied that he would call for his wife in a week, if arrangements could not be made at this end for sending her home right away.

Mrs. Burt is perfectly rational at times, but often has crying spells, and when in this condition labors under the impersion that people are slandering her character.

RAIL STRIKE IS NOW IN EFFECT

Shopmen on the Harriman System Obey Order to Quit.

Chicago, Oct. 3.—Statements issued by railroad officials and union leaders who are directing the strike of shop employes on the Harriman railroads, including the Illinois Central still show a wide variance in estimates of the number of men involved. According to Julius Kruttschnitt, vice president of the Southern Pacific, but 4,000 men left their work on the Union Pacific lines.

J. A. Franklin, international president of the boilermakers, was equally positive that 20,000 or more are out.

There is a close agreement between the estimates of the number of Illinois Central strikers. W. L. Park, general manager, estimated that 63 per cent struck. Union officials claim that the total is close to 90 per cent.

"There were only 7,000 shop men who are members of the federation on the 18,000 miles of the Union Pacific," asserted Mr. Kruttschnitt. "Of this number at least 3,000 remain at work and we have applications from others who are anxious to go back to work."

ESTIMATE 150 TO 300 PERISHED

Victims of Flood at Austin and Costello, Pa., Not as Numerous as Reported.

PROPERTY LOSS HEAVY

Relief Trains Arrive With Provisions for Survivors and Rescue Crew.

Austin, Pa., Oct. 2.—Estimates of the loss of life in the flood that overwhelmed the town of Austin diminished when an army of volunteer rescuers worked its way into the masses of wreckage. In the opinion of many on the ground the number of deaths will not reach 150, while the less hopeful place the list of fatalities at 300.

The property loss will exceed $6,000,000, and it is the general opinion that the town never will be rebuilt. Two, at least, of the large plants will not be reconstructed and a majority of the business men of the place have been financially ruined.

State officials in charge of the situation, after a hasty canvass of the population, expressed the belief that not more than 150 are dead in the wreckage. Only twenty-four bodies have been recovered.

A battalion of state police surrounded the town and no person without a pass was permitted to enter.

Few Dead at Costello.

Reports from Costello and points further down Sinnemahoning grew more encouraging as the day advanced. At Costello, while there was a heavy financial loss, it was said that no more than two persons were dead. Beyond that point no fatalities had been reported.

The survivors will not suffer from hunger or lack of care, as the supplies and medical assistance rushed to the scene seem ample to care for them. E. F. Bicknell, national director of the Red Cross, arrived, bringing with him $15,000 in cash for immediate aid to the flood victims. Of the eight injured in the hospitals, none is fatally hurt.

The immediate scene of the obliteration of Austin covers an area three-eighths of a mile wide and one and three-quarters miles long. This comprised the business section and the valley portion.

Nearly a mile above stood the mammoth concrete dam of the Bayless Paper and Pulp company, 600 feet long, fifty-two feet high and thirty feet thick at the bottom, tapering to a thickness of three feet at the top.

Big Reservoir of Water.

Back of this dam lay a reservoir of water one mile and a half long and an average of thirty-five feet deep. Directly in front of the dam stood the plant of the Bayless company with four main buildings.

Five minutes after the dam burst the stage had been swept of its scenery and its setting. Along the foothills were thrown telescoped houses. At either end of Main street brick buildings acted as buffers as the twenty-five foot wall of water rushed townward with its mass of debris.

Almost hill-high, the wood, steel and brick were piled, a strange mixture of the contents of stores and homes and of varied length timbers and sticks.

Wreckage of the dam had been as complete as it was sudden. Two immense sections from top to bottom, 150 feet wide, were thrown out bodily like the immense gates of a canal lock. The outward swing was more than fifty feet, and on either side the remaining structure gradually began to crumble.

EIGHT ARE BURNED TO DEATH

Parents Leave Children to Fight Fire. All Die.

Indiana, Pa., Oct. 2.—Eight children of Mr. and Mrs. William Dias, of Heshbon, near here, ranging in age from thirteen years to three months, were burned to death when fire destroyed the family home.

The parents, after discovering the flames, left the children in their beds and went to the first floor, where they made an attempt to extinguish the fire. The blaze spread rapidly, however, and they were unable to return to rescue the little ones.

TURKISH TRANSPORT TAKEN

Latest Report Says Sixty Thousand Arabs Are Intrenched Fifty Mile From Tripoli.

Paris, Oct. 3.—The Matin's Malta correspondent says it has been learned through an indiscretion of a wireless operator on a British warship which has arrived there, that Tripoli was occupied Sunday night and the Italian flag hoisted on the governor's castle.

Rome, Oct. 3.—The Tribune announces that the Italian cruiser Marco Polo has captured the Turkish transport Sabah, loaded with ammunition and troops, on the way to Tripoli.

Malta, Oct. 3.—Word received from Tripoli says the Turks and Arabs are intrenching behind the city.

Sixty thousand Arabs, said to be armed with Mausers, hold a strong position fifty miles behind the town. An advance guard is stationed twenty miles from Tripoli.

The Turkish garrison has left the forts.

NOT MUCH BLOODSHED YET

Turko-Italian War May Be Concluded by Mediation.

London, Oct. 3.—From present appearances the Turko-Italian war promises to be the shortest and most bloodless war in history. Thus far its distinguishing characteristic has been the absence of fighting and, with Germany acting as peacemaker, it may be ended before fighting takes place.

It is concluded that no mediation will be accepted by Italy until she has accomplished the military occupation of the Tripolitan coast. After that negotiations will be much easier and are not unlikely to be successful if Turkey will accept a money indemnity for allowing Italy to establish herself in Tripoli as Great Britain did in Egypt.

The news filtering in from various points continues to be of a negative kind. Tripoli, it seems, has not been bombarded and is not likely to be if the Turks do not oppose the landing. The warlike operations are confined to a blockade and the capture on either side of a few small vessels.

It is now admitted by the Turks that Prevesa, in European Turkey, is not occupied. Italy's announcement that she has no intention to carry the war into European Turkey will do much to allay apprehension over Balkan complications.

Turkey's ministerial difficulties have not been solved, but generally the situation looks more hopeful.

ITALIANS BOMBARD PREVESA

Destroy Government House and Sink Torpedo Boat.

Saloniki, Turkey, Oct. 1.—An Italian naval division bombarded the seaport of Prevesa, destroying the government house and sinking a Turkish topedo boat in the harbor.

Constantinople, Oct. 1.—The official version of the engagement off Prevesa says an Italian cruiser, accompanied by torpedo boats, attacked two Turkish torpedo boat destroyers as the latter were leaving Prevesa. One of the Turkish vessels found refuge in Prevesa harbor, while the other was struck by several shells and ran ashore. The crew was rescued.

ONE MILLION DOLLARS FOR A GOOD STOMACH.

This Offer Should Be a Warning to Every Man and Woman.

The newspapers and medical journals recently have had much to say relative to a famous millionaire's offer of a million dollars for a new stomach.

This great multi-millionaire was too busy to worry about the condition of his stomach. He allowed his dyspepsia to run from bad to worse until in the end it became incurable.

His misfortune serves as a warning to others.

Every one who suffers with dyspepsia for a few years will give everything he owns for a new stomach.

Dyspepsia is commonly caused by an abnormal state of the gastric juices, or by lack of tone in the walls of the stomach. The result is that the stomach loses its power to digest food.

We are now able to supply certain missing elements—to help to restore to the gastric juices their digestive power, and to aid in making the stomach strong and well.

We know that Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets are a most dependable remedy for disordered stomachs, indigestion, and dyspepsia.

We want you to try them and will return your money if you are not more than satisfied with the result.

Three sizes, 25 cents, 50 cents and $1.00. Remember, you can obtain Rexall Remedies in this community only at our store—The Rexall Store.

COMMERCIAL.

With the growth of the business from the small store, the trade of which merely had to do with a neighborhood or small city, to the modern business house, the daily affairs of which reach over sections of country and even into other countries, there have been corresponding changes in the needs of business houses in its employees. Not only does business require a broader general outlook, but it requires hosts of workers with specialized knowledge.

One of the new fields which has been opened up by the marvelous growth of business in the last twenty-five years is that of stenography. Every modern business enterprise of any consequence has at least one stenographer and the large houses employ scores of those whose duties consist of taking care of the growing needs of correspondence. Salaries paid these workers are good and the work has the attraction of a varying interest. In addition the profession yearly offers greater and greater opportunities to the ambitious.

Unusual opportunities are offered the stenographer to get at the inside workings of business, to gain a grasp on its mechanism which will prove the strongest of aids in seeking advancement. The stenographer comes in direct contact with the leading men in a firm and so has a chance to impress his worth on "those higher up." A young man or young woman in the position of stenographer can rapidly make himself or herself invaluable to the employer.

The history of business shows that many who started with a knowledge of stenography as their sole asset, aside from brains, have risen to positions of importance. There are hundreds of cases of stenographers rising to that other new profession, the secretary, or confidential clerk. Cases where there has been advancement to managerships also are numerous, and indeed there is hardly a branch of business in which knowledge of stenography is not valuable. William Loeb, George Cortelyou and Edward Bok, editor of the Ladies Home Journal, are examples as a stepping stone. Others who have attained less prominence are many.

Business colleges usually have a number of applications for stenographers on hand and on graduation a student is practically assured of a position. In this respect stenography is like the mechanical professions, the engineering schools also having a demand for more trained men than can be supplied.

There are a number of business schools in the northwest which give conscientious students a mastery of stenography in a year and this is an added advantage which the profession holds out to those who are ambitious but cannot afford to spend the time necessary to complete the long courses of study necessary for other professions. The work in these schools is carefully planned and the systems of stenography which have been found to meet the demands of business most fully are taught by competent instructors.

Other phases of business are set before students in these schools, and with the growth of complexity in the workings of business the person who takes up that calling without a previous knowledge of its workings enters the field under a great handicap. The entirely self made man is becoming less common in modern business and his making is becoming a longer and longer task as business becomes more complex.

Other fields are well covered by the schools of the northwest. In addition to those teaching the old professions, and the schools giving a sound ground-work for specialized knowledge, there are schools of music and arts and crafts which stand higher in the ranks of such institutions

ADMIRAL SCHLEY STRICKEN

Famous Naval Hero Dies Suddenly at New York.

New York, Oct. 3.—Rear Admiral Winfield Scott Schley fell dead near the corner of Forty-fourth street and Fifth avenue while on his way down town.

Admiral Schley had been out of town over Sunday and on his return here had gone to the New York Yacht club on West Forty-fourth street. After a short stay at the club he started to walk along Forty-fourth street toward Fifth avenue, when he was taken suddenly ill.

A hurry call was sent for physicians and an ambulance, but before aid could reach him the admiral was dead.

Rear Admiral Schley was born near Frederick, Md., Oct. 9, 1839. He was appointed a midshipman in the navy in 1856, graduated from the naval academy in 1860 and took part in several engagements in the Civil war.

He became famous as the commander of the flying squadron which destroyed Admiral Cervera's fleet, off Santiago, July 3, 1898, after a running battle following the Spanish admiral's attempt to escape from that port.

BIG BUSINESS MUST OBEY THE LAWS

President Says There Will Be No Letup In Prosecutions.

Waterloo, Ia., Sept. 29.—President Taft in a speech defining "the relation of the government to business," announced that the trust prosecutions began by the department of justice at Washington would continue despite the recent criticism that business was being made to suffer.

He served notice that the "big business interests" of the country must be brought within the law just as the railroads have been, and declined to admit that there exists any discretion which would enable the attorney general to stay the hand of the government in dealing with combinations in restraint of trade.

At the same time the president made an earnest appeal for reasonable consideration of the railroads and the big industrial corporations on the ground that their reformation was being brought about steadily and satisfactorily and that nothing was to be gained by "vindictive hostility."

Mr. Taft bitterly denounced those politicians who seek to arouse the prejudices of the people and to array one section of the country against another. Such utterances he declared to be those of "the blindest of men."

The trust prosecutions, Mr. Taft said, need not be long continued because he believed the business community was rapidly taking in the effect of the recent decisions of the supreme court and preparing to square itself with the law.

FIVE DIE WHEN HOME BURNS

Mother and Four Children Perish at Mitchell, Ill.

Mitchell, Ill., Sept. 29.—Mrs. Virgil Vandever and four of her children were burned to death at their home here. Her husband and Arthur Langford, eighteen years old, Mrs. Vandever's son by a former marriage, saved themselves by jumping from a second story window.

Mrs. Vandever's last act was a supreme expression of maternal love. She snatched from the bed on which, asleep, lay her seven-year-old boy Thelrl, the favorite of her children, hugged him to her breast, and, with a final effort, pushed him out of the screen of a window and dropped him to safety. The onlookers saw her throw up her hands and sink backward into the flames.

[illegible] which is now wasted or burned, and will make a revolutionary epoch in the linen industry.

The New And Revolutionary System.

Contrast the above described ancient method for treating flax with the economical, time-saving, and effective manner of handling the same with the McAdam machine as outlined below.

This machine comprises over twenty distinct devices arranged in continuous succession, each of which performs an important function in accomplishing the desired result. Years have been devoted to experiments to perfect the various devices in order that each may perform its individual function toward the attainment of the final result. Various difficulties, encountered from time to time, have been overcome, and the machine has been perfected until a result is obtained which has hitherto been deemed impossible.

The machine threshes the seed, separates the fiber from the straw without tensile strain or injury to the fiber, and collects the shive, or woody-portion of the stalk, and combs and turns out at the end of the machine, a beautiful flax fiber ready to be made up into the various linen products for which flax is used.

All the processes of threshing, breaking, heckling, scutching, cleaning and carding are performed, and the fiber is ready for the textile trade.

This is the only machine ever invented which will accomplish the above results, and is regarded by experts as an invention ranking in commercial importance with the cotton gin.

Many Uses For The Product.

The shive or woody-portion of the stalk is valuable for use in the manufacture of paper and for other purposes.

The uses to which this linen fiber may be put are many—the manufacture of textiles, thread, yarns, absorbent linen, journal packing, etc. At the present time the Company intends to devote its energies to the manufacture of the linen fiber and the sale thereof to the mills and factories by which finished products are made. A well cleaned fiber is worth more than a cotton fiber in the market.

Linen lint is far preferable as a surgical dressing to cotton lint, as all physicians and surgeons will attest. The absorbent linen made of the flax fiber from the McAdam machine closely resembles the absorbent cotton, but is much superior, and can be sold very profitably at less than the price of absorbent cotton. It can be put directly against a wound without the irritating and heating qualities of cotton, and its softness and coolness render it most valuable. About $4,000,000 worth of absorbent cotton is sold annually in the United States.

There is a large market for flax waste for journal packing. It is superior to cotton waste, and it prevents the overheating of the journal, packs better than cotton waste, is free from clogging, and remains soft and clean. It can be produced cheaper than cotton waste. About $6,000,000 worth of cotton waste for journal packing is annually sold in the United States.

It is not necessary to enumerate the many various uses to which flax fiber may be employed, as it is sufficient to note that flax fibers are used in making the finest and coarsest fabrics; the most delicate and exquisite laces, linens, shirtings, and handkerchiefs; twines, sailcloth and cordage.

Now As To The Extent Of Market For Flax Fiber—Note This:

The words crop of cotton ranges near 17,000,000 bales of 500 lbs. each annually, of which the United States produces between thirteen and fourteen million bales this year. In 1900, cotton sold at 6c per pound. It has since sold for more than double that price, and is now selling at 10c per pound, with probably the largest crop ever produced on hand.

Ask yourself, ask anybody, if they would not prefer linen to cotton, in half the clothing and other uses now supplied by cotton, if linen could be had at same cost.

A Famous Kitchen.

"It was our good fortune to see at least one thing in Paris which the tourist knows nothing about," writes an American woman from that city. "Every one knows about the Tuileries and sees what is left of the historic pile, but not many find their way to the kitchen from which the elect of the third empire were served, as we did. It lies under the Pavilion de Flora, its high arched ceiling resting on massive colums. It is divided into many sections, at the entrance to each of which there is a sign—gold on marble. Here we see 'Rotisserie,' 'Patisserie,' 'Section aux Sauces,' etc. The provisions for washing gold, silver and porcelain services, the tremendous roasting, boiling and broiling arrangements, the extra roast beef oven, six meters high and seven meters broad, a roaster with a capacity for six sheep and four dozen chickens all looked extra large and imposing to us who manage to worry along in a flat kitchen, which has two things, however, which we could not find in Napoleon's dinner factory—electric light and a battery of washtubs."

Her Sound Advice.

The prominent citizen and favorite son sat at his desk, deeply immersed in the cares of his wide affairs. A delegation of party leaders was ushered in.

"Sir," said the spokesman, "you have been unanimously chosen as the party's candidate for governor of the state. Under present conditions a nomination is tantamount to election, and we urge your acceptance. The office seeks the man."

"Gentlemen," said the favorite son, "I am profoundly impressed by the honor done me, but before I accept I must consult my wife. I never take a decisive step without consulting my wife."

The committee bowed and withdrew. At home the favorite son confided the circumstances to his wife, who listened with fond pride and wifely admiration.

[illegible]

A party of apaches entered a Paris cafe to play a game of billiards. The game was carried on in great mystery and absorbed all the interest and attention of the players. They had an enemy who was to be done for, and whoever lost the game was to "do" him. When the game was over the loser accepted the result without discussion. Not long afterward a workman was stabbed fatally as he was coming out of a dance hall. The man who had stabbed him quickly disappeared, and the workman was placed in a cab and driven to an address which he had given. This was in a certain street where a sister of his was living. The man was barely able to get out of the cab and to explain that he had been stabbed. His case was so serious that he was conveyed to a hospital and died a few hours later. The police then made an inquiry and learned how the murder was deliberately decided upon and savagely executed. The workman himself did not know that his life was staked on a game of billiards.—Paris Cor. London Telegraph.

Scotch Accent Too Much For Him.

The only real blot on my visit to Glasgow, says a writer in the London Sketch, is my total inability to speak with a Scottish accent. I rather pride myself, as most people do, on my vocal imitative faculties, but I confess to all the world here and now that I cannot imitate the Scottish accent. My Irish is beautiful; it would make all Dublin weep. My American is quite good; I could nearly always get anything that I wanted in the shops if I had the money. Anybody can talk Welsh who cares to substitute "p" for "b" and "f" for "va." But the Scottish accent eludes me. Sometimes I speak a little Scottish, tentatively, to the policeman or the tram conductors or the shopkeepers. The policemen draw their staves, the tram conductors stop their trams, and the shopkeepers put up their shutters. I am not quite sure, but I rather think that I shall abandon the unequal struggle.

She Was Persistent.

A huge package once reached Sir Walter Scott from a young lady in America for which he had to pay $25 expressage. It contained a manuscript play and a letter from the fair author requesting Scott to read and correct her work, write a prologue and an epilogue, arrange for its production at Drury Lane and negotiate with a publisher for the copyright. That was bad enough, but worse was to follow. About a fortnight later arrived another mighty packet, charged with a similar postage. Scott, who had not grown wiser by experience, paid the charges and opened the parcel. Out came a duplicate copy of the play and a second letter from the authoress, stating that as the weather had been stormy and she feared something might have happened to her former manuscript she had thought it prudent to send him a duplicate.

How Centipedes Walk.

An eminent authority has investigated the peculiar wavy motion of centipedes and millepedes to determine the manner in which these animals manage to use their superabundant pedal extremities so gracefully and harmoniously. It has been found that the legs move in groups, or waves, each wave including a definite number of legs. The number of waves included in the length of the body is constant for each species. In millepedes the waves of each side are synchronous. In centipedes they are symmetrically alternate, giving rise to beautifully accordant movements. The difference may be explained by suggesting that the millepede moves like a pacing horse, the centipede like a trotter.—Chicago Record-Herald.

A Pleasant Surprise.

A young man in Indianapolis felt his heart sink as he pulled from his mail box a letter of the wedding invitation type. That was the fifth he had received this season, and he had begun to wonder whether he had any friends left in the single state.

"Another five dollar bill busted to smash," he mourned.

Then he opened the envelope. But it was only the announcement of a wedding that had taken place the week before. And he found in the same cover a check for $5.

It was then that he recalled a bet made with a friend years before. The conditions were that the one first married should pay the other $5.—Indianapolis News.

And Upside Down at That.

"Where does this train stop next?" asked the nervous traveler on an uncertain railway.

"Well, boss," replied the porter, "dar's three washouts an' some bad track right along here, an' she's liable to stop mos' any place mos' any minute."—Washington Star.

COMMISSION GOVERNMENT

Why The Commission Plan Succeeds. Short Ballot Simplifies Elections.

The following article on the explanation of the commission form of city government is taken from "The Story of the Short Ballot Cities," issued by The Short Ballot organization, 383 Fourth Avenue Avenue, New York.

Why the commission plan succeeds.

There have been many explanations offered for the undoubted relative successes of the commission plan. The abolition of the wards, for example, is frequently quoted as ample reason for the relative success of the new plan. There are many cities in the United States, however, in which there are no wards, and they have never attracted attention by their superior efficiency. Galveston had no wards before the flood, her city council being elected at large.

Most of the explanations are only half true, because they involve a study only of the internal mechanism of the government, whereas the real difference between the old and the new comes at the point of contact between the government and the people.

The secret of the success of the plan lies in the fact that the governmental power is taken out of obscurities and placed upon a pinnacle of light where all the citizens can watch it.

No mere form of gov. will automatically provide good government. But forms can be devised that will automatically give popular government. The people's will can be baffled or faciliated by the form of government. The people's work at the poles can be made obscure, complex and difficult. Or it can be made clear, simple and easy. Under the commission plan with its short ballot, the people's work is very clear, very simple, very easy! And that is all there is to the secret of the success of the plan!

In our old fashioned city governments we have committed two serious errors.

First, we have scattered the powers of government among so many petty officials that it is quite impossible for the people to watch and control them all.

Second, we have subdivided the power in such small fragments that no single part is really worth watching. A member of the city council, for instance, under the old form of government, has so little power that it is really not worth while for the people of the town to become agitated over the question of who gets the job.

Those who promoted the idea of having a host of elective officials in the government have always taken it for granted that there was something democratic about this procedure. Democracy, however, does not consist in electing everybody, but in controlling everybody. The mayor's office boy, for instance, may be appointed by the mayor, or elected by popular vote. He is a public servant, but there is nothing democratic in electing him when he can just as well be appointed. The vital thing is that he shall be controlled by the people, and if he will be under better control thru appointment than thru election, it is more democratic to appoint him.

The commission paln is based on no false idea that the people want to elect every clerk. It gives the power to five men, who thereby become conspicously responsible before all the people of the city. Each one of them is important enough to make it worth while for the citizens to inquire concerning his record and character. Each candidate for office can attract a crowd to hear him speak, whereas an old time councilman would havve been utterly unable to get a hearing before the people. There are not so many commissioners but what every citizen can find out about all of them and vote intelligently on election day.

ARE YOU FROM INDIANA?

Secretary of Commercial Club Wants to Locate Former Hoosiers.

The Secretary of the Thief River Falls Commercial Club, working in conjunction with the Great Northern Ry. Co., wants to get the names of all former Indiana people who are now residents of Pennington and Marshall counties.

The Great Northern will pay all expenses for a mammoth advertising campaign in the Hoosier State, and requests the aid of the local club only in so far as the gathering of advertising material is concerned.

The plan is to get in touch with the people from that State who have succeeded here, and get their stories for publication in the over populated districts of Indiana.

If you are a Hoosier, you will do the Commercial Club, as well as the county at large, a favor by sending your name and address to the Secretary of the Commercial Club of Thief River Falls at your first convenience. He will then send you a blank with questions to answer which will be used in compiling advertising for this section.

To Be Examined Today

Last Tuesday there was filed in the probate court of this county a complaint of insanity in the case of Mrs. Robert Burt, of Peoria, Ill., who was put off the Soo flyer here two weeks ago, after having been turned back at the Canadian boundry on the charge of dementia.

When this complaint was filed, the authorities took up the matter with the State Board of Control and yesterday the probate Court received notice to hold an examination in regard to the mental condition of Mrs. Burt. She will be examined today by local physicians, and if found insane, the State Board of Control has ordered the court to have her committed to Fergus Falls, until her exact legal residence has been determined.

Mrs. Burt's 10 year old son, who is with her, will have to be taken care of by the county until the case is settled, says the Board. The State Board will have charge of the affair from now on, and will find out where Mrs. Burt's residence really is.

All efforts to get Mrs. Burt's husband, who is supposed to be foreman of a paper mill in Peoria, to come and get, or send the necessary fund for taking his wife home, have been of no avail. Relatives in Canada do not seem disposed to help out the woman, presumably because they think Mr. Burt is amply able to look after his own affairs.

Mrs. Burt is not insane all the time, but periodically; amply enough, however, to warrant a petition and committment to Fergus Falls, unless carefully guarded by friends or relatives. The local authorities have done even more than could reasonably be expected of them, but no one seems to care to respond.

Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Kvennes and Mr. and Mrs. Schei motored down from Middle River Wednesday evening in their respective cars.

Miss Eliza Thompson has resigned her position in the city schools and will leave shortly for her home at St. Croix Falls, Wis., where she has accepted a position as stenographer.

LOCAL POLITICIANS WARMING UP

Many Petitions Are Being Circulated Preparatory to Coming Election.

Many petitions for mayor and alderman are being circulated these days preparatory to the coming city election, November 7th. Each candidate for office must havve filed with the city clerk before October 28 a petition signed by at least ten per cent. of the qualified electors who voted at the last election. Since there were 1018 votes cast at that time, it is required that each petition for mayor and alderman at large be signed by 102 electors. Aldermen for the wards require only ten per cent of the electors in their respective wards. The majority of the petitions now in the field have the required number of signers. There will probably be more men out for office before the 28th. The following is the list up-to-date:

Lars Backe—Independent, for mayor, is well-known thru his many years of satisfactory service as city clerk.

W. A. Boreen—Public Ownership, for mayor, is an engineer on the Soo Line railway and an old resident and property owner.

A. M. Arpin—Independent, for mayor, is well-known as a member of the Northwestern Drainage Company.

Fred Both—Public Ownership, for alderman at large, can be found at his bakery on LaBree Ave.

Lorin B. Lorimer—Public Ownership, for alderman at large, has held a similar position in a North Dakota town.

Goodnow Terrison—Independent, for alderman at large, is at present a member of the city council.

J. C. Berg—Independent, for alderman at large, is at present a member of the city council.

C. C. Gullrud—Public Ownership, for alderman first ward, has a blacksmith shop on Main-st opposite the big wheel.

J. H. Jacobson—Independent, for alderman first ward, is a member of the Olson & Jacobson implement firm.

Arthur Tanem—Public Ownership, for alderman second ward, may be located at the E. & E. clothing store.

Ed. A. Kuehn—Independent, for alderman second ward, is a well-known carpenter.

Frank Mousely—Public Ownership, for alderman third ward, is a wellknown painter.

B. Dan Bjorkman—Public Ownership, for alderman fourth ward, runs the Model Steam Laundry.

C. M. Wilson—Independent, for alderman fourth ward, is a well-known carpenter.

D. K. Bryant—Independent, for alderman fourth ward, is a druggist by profession.

Milton Forder—Independent, for municipal judge, was until recently president of the city council.

N. W. Tarrant—Independent, for municipal judge, is well-known politically, he having in the past held the offices of municipal judge and judge of probate.

H. O. Kjomme—Independent, for municipal judge, is a promising young lawyer.

C. L. Dobner left for Kalispell, Mont., last Friday to meet with the insurance adjustors regarding the loss of the mill and yards there by fire last week.

A great many people do not know there is a Building Association in Thief River Falls, and are giving their business to outside firms when they could secure a better rate and more satisfactory service at home.

LUNCH WAS CUT SHORT

Horses Take Notion to Run When Local Sportsmen Stop to Feed.

Last Saturday afternoon while on their return from a duck hunt, Val Yager, C. H. Bartlett, Art Marco and Ray Marcoe stopped about 6 miles northwest of town in order to give themselves and the horses a feed. The bridle had been removed from one horse and the other been unreined when the team took a very sudden and determined notion to run. Before the hunters realized what was doing the team was beyond control and headed on a bee-line for home—Jenson's barn. They passed thru two wire fences, went by several rigs, resisted all attempts to stop them until they got to the barn. Both horses were cut a trifle and somewhat winded, but otherwise were all right and are doing nicely now.

The men had acquired eleven ducks and two chickens, which were nearly all lost in the shuffle, some of the men coming home without any game whatever. One gun rode safely home, another was thrown from the buggy without accident, but Yager's gun was so bent in the barrel that he cannot shoot without danger of being hit in the foot.

It was evident Yager and Bartlett did not have with them the rabbit's-foot because on their return to camp Friday night a goose flew up right under their feet, after they had unlimbered their artillery. It was the chase after this goose the next morning that delayed the hunters until Saturday afternoon.

The Marcoe boys walked in most of the way, being helped a short distance by Halvorson's auto. Yager and Bartlett rode in with a farmer. Art Marcoe says he will trust to his auto after this. Jensen says that a locomotive will stand, but a team of horses may not.

Rural School Notes.

To the boys and girls partaking in the Corn Contest: You are waiting to hear something about the holding of the county Contest—The reports received are very meager and shows conclusively that the condifions have been against us as to raising corn this year. But even though a contest can not be held, the interest shown and the work done by you will have their merits. You are amateur farmers now and a farmer must know his trade; must so in hope not knowing what the harvest will be—must learn to labor and to wait. This lesson learned we will re-double our efforts for next year. Altho there are excellent samples of garden vegetables raised, and although some of our teachers have started fine classes in handi-work—we feel that a contest without the display of corn would not be the thing anticipated. The Supt. appreciates the interest and work manifested by scholars and their teachers.

We hope the consolation that our work in this respect is in the right line. The work will grow, we trust to such an extent that we ultimately will have a well defered course in Elementary Agriculture, Manual training and Domestic Science in our schools. We will do better next year.

Your Supt. expects to devote the greater part of his time visiting the schools during the fall months. He will be found in the Court House on Saturdays.

Next week is the time set for the inauguration of George Edgar Vincent as president of the State University. I have an invitation to attend and will be absent from office during the week returning Friday evening.

This office has not received its supply of report blanks, attendance certificates, etc. These supplies will be sent out as soon as received.

All school clerks have been supplied with blanks for taking school census, blanks for excuse of scholars not attending school, blanks for teachers to report non-attendance of school children—Quite a number of clerks have not complied with the requirement as to taking school census. This office will appreciate greatly if this law is complied with in this respect. Parents and school boards will do both their teacher and this office a great help, if they will inform themselves as to the Compulsory Education Law as to the attendance at school of their children. The school is yours; the opportunity for education given is for you to embrace and your children should reap the benefits thereof in the largest degree possible.

Respectfully submitted,

E. A. MOSTUE.

ARE ADVERTISING THIS SECTION

Hager Land Company Is Doing Much Towards Development of Country.

Judging from the way the Hager Land Company are wearing out their Jackson car, and the improvements they are figuring on making on their office building on LaBree Ave., they must certainly be doing a "land office" business.

In the month of June Mr. Hager, senior member of the firm, found himself with more business than he could attend to alone, and Mr. Thompson joined him. A short time afterwards these two gentlemen discovered that their business was growing to such proportions that it was necessary to have another man in the firm, and then Mr. Sandum joined the firm.

They are men that do not brag of their work, but it is quite evident they are selling the land. Should you look over their advertising contracts, you would find agreements with over two hunderd papers.

Such men deserve credit and are in a position to dispose of land quickly.

Adolph Lang.

Last Friday evening Adolph Lang, a mason on Tindolph Ave., took an over-dose of paris green and laudanum, and Sunday morning succumbed to the effects of it. Tuesday his remains were laid to rest in the catholic cemetery. He leaves a wife and several small children.

Reports to-day are to the effect that Lang did not intend to take an overdose, but took what he thot to be a small quantity in order to frighten Mrs. Lang, after a slight domestic controversy.

COURT WILL CONSIDER THE PETITION FOR JUDICIAL DITCH NO. 2.

A large number of Red Lake and Pennington county farmers attended the hearing on the petition for the establishment of the proposed Judicial Ditch No. 2, at Red Lake Falls. There is little doubt that the ditch will be established for only two of the large number of farmers interested were opposed to the establishment of the ditch and these men opposed only the construction of one of the branches of the proposed ditch. Naturally there were some objections to assessments. These differences of opinion regarding the assessments for the cost of the ditch will no doubt be satisfactorily adjusted. The hearing was continued by Judge Watts until the convening of court for the November term on Monday, Nov. 13.—Crookston Times.

BREED THE PROPER STRAIN

Most Rational Flax Crop IS One Grown Both For Fibre and Seed.

Mr. Beard furnishes us the following extract from Bulletin No. 55, by Professor Bolley, which is useful and instructive in considering the flax fibre industry in this vicinity.

European and American flax growing conditions contrasted:—A study of the general distribution of the crop shows that it is able to withstand a wide range of climate and soil variation. It is grown successfully, either for fiber or seed, from Algeria on the south to Archangel on the north. The best grades of flax for fiber are produced in regions of fertile soil and in districts of even, moist, rather low temperature, such as is found in the Low Countries, and the Baltic provinces of Russia; while the great seed producing areas have drier, less fertile soils and drier, more rigorous climatic features.

A study of the temperature and moisture records shows that there is as wide a range of variation in the different Russian flax producing provinces as that found upon our Northwest plains. Indeed, there are many similarities of conditions. Thus the Russian flax areas all lie well within the mean temperature lines which enclose Manitoba, North Dakota, Minnesota, Iowa, Wisconsin, and parts of Michigan. For example, the same lines of temperature (isotherns) July 60 degrrees and January 0 degrees pass through Archangel, Viatka and Winnipeg; and the great flax producing areas of each country lie just south of this line. Again, the isotherms of July 80 degrees passes thru Pierre, S. D., Dubuque, Iowa, and slightly south of Odessa. A consideration of the moisture conditions of the areas included does not show an unfavorable comparison. The Russians raise heavy seed crops upon their dry, windy plains and make a marked success of producing both fiber and seed in the central provinces, under soil and climatic conditions which resemble quite closely those of the Red River Valley. Two features of the Russian culture, however, are very apparent, (1) More attention is given to the variety and quality of seed used, crop rotation, etc., and (2) Flax farming and the production of fiber are much more closely associated than in this country, the peasants there, each in a small way, producing both seed and fiber. It seems apparent that the difficulties affecting the success of the crop and industry in this country are, in general, not those arising from poor soil and climatic conditions, but are rather to be referred to methods practiced in the culture and in the handling of the crop, which American machinery and intelligent labor ought readily to over come. Most of the trouble due to improper methods of culture will disappear when our farmers recognize the importance of growing their own flax seed from pure strains or varieties, and when they have in view a definite purpose with regard to the quality of seed and type of straw to be grown. A very great gain will also be made when our people have reached such a study of the fiber side of the question that this most valuable part of the crop may be saved. The rational flax crop is one grown both for fiber and for seed production; but to succeed, the farmers will have to select their seed and keep it pure when once it is obtained. The growth of the present fiber and tow industry, if properly fostered, ought to grow naturally into a permanent fiber industry, in which much finer grades of fiber may be produced. It

PREVENTION AND CONTROL OF FIRES.

Grass on prairie and bog is dead and burnable. Not withstanding recent rains, only a very short period of sunny and windy weather is required to cause danger of grass fires. The great damage which they may do is known to every one who was in Minnesota in 1910.

Every one should be very careful with fire himself, and in self protection and for the general good should take it upon himself to see that all others are careful. Any one who sets fire carelessly should be at once reported to Forest Service Officers. Township Officers and Road Supervisors are required by law to do this. Every land owner is responsible for fire on his own land, and may be held liable for damage done by escaping fires.

Unless brush has been considered a fire danger, and the one who is responsible has been instructed by the Forest Service to burn the same it is advisable not to burn either brush, or grass land, in a dangerous season. Late fall when woods and earth are damp, for instance after a snowfall which has melted in the open and still lies in the woods, is a good time to burn brush, or to burn meadow also early spring, when the snow is about gone in the open and still lies in the forest, and the ground is still frozen, is a good time to do necessary burning.

In case any one has been instructed by the Forest Service to burn brush in summer or fall, or if for some reason it is necessary for a man to burn brush or meadow land in dangerous season, the following precautions are observed.

A safe fire break should first be made around the area to be burned, then by calling upon neighbors or in some other manner, sufficient help to absolutely prevent the fires escape should be obtained before starting to burn. It is advised that neighbors co-operate with each other "changing help" as in threshing. Such burning should be done shortly after a rain when conditions generally are damp and the material to be burned: meadow grass or brush piles, is sufficiently dried out to burn.

If any one finds it necessary to burn as above and is in doubt what to do, a Patrolman or Ranger should be consulted.

Do not begin burning unless you are sure you can control the fire, to do so renders you liable.

SELECTION OF POTATOES.

We have noticed, in attending a number of county fairs, that some of the people who have exhibited potatoes at these fairs have made very little effort toward selecting uniform and desirable tubers. While farmers are, in one sense, independent and can raise any crop they wish, if they would get the best price for their products they must raise the kind of products that buyers want. Large buyers of potatoes, who are really the people who made the market for potatoes, prefer and will pay more for smooth, medium-sized, uniform potatoes than they will for large, rough potatoes or potatoes not uniform in size. They pay more for two reasons: First, the smooth, uniform potatoes can be peeled with much less waste than can the other kind of potatoes; second, these smooth potatoes can be peeled much more cheaply, often with the paring machine; while with the rough, irregular potatoes it is impossible to use the paring machine without very great waste.

The grower who wishes to please the customers, and thus get the top price for his products, will be very careful in selecting potatoes, especially for seed. In selecting potatoes for seed another point beside uniformity and smoothness must be considered; that is, one must know the general character of the type of potatoes grown, and hold closely to that type in his selections. Potatoes are likely to "run out" if the seed is not carefully selected. One of the first indications of running out is the slight tapering at the seed end; and no potatoes having a tendency to taper at the seed end should be used for seed. It is possible to maintain, and even to improve, a variety of potatoes grown in a locality, if careful attention is paid to the selection of seed and the preparation of the soil.

MAN CAUSES DISTURBANCE AT SOO CAFE.

Last Saturday evening a man caused a lot of trouble to the waiters and customers at the Soo Cafe. The man was under the influence of drink and evidently thot he was running the town. He would not be quieted down and finally the police were called, who took charge of him.

He seemed to have plenty of money setting up the cigars to the house, breaking a ten dollar bill, leaving him $9 in change.

When the police were questioned by one of the local men saying, "he must have lots of money" as he had seen him have about $200.00 earlier in the day. But the police stated that he had only $9. After hearing this the police returned to the restaurent just in time to see a fellow pick up an old envelope and trying to hide the same in his clothes. The police asked him what he had, and he said, "an envelope with some money in." The envelope was turned over to the police, it containing $170.00.

Billiousness is due to a disordered condition of the stomach. Chamberlain's Tablets are essentially a stomach medicine, intended especially to act on that organ; to cleanse it, strengthen it, tone and invigorate it, to regulate the liver and to banish biliousness positively and effectually. For sale by all druggists.

HELPFUL HINTS ON HAIR HEALTH.

Scalp and Hair Troubles Generally Caused by Carelessness.

Dandruff is a contagious disease caused by a microbe which also produces baldness. Never use a comb or brush belonging to some one else. No matter how cleanly the owner may be, these articles may be infected with microbes, which will infect your scalp. It is far easier to catch hair microbes than it is to get rid of them, and a single stroke of an infected comb or brush may well lead to baldness. Never try on anybody else's hat. Many a hat-band is a resting place for microbes.

If you happen to be troubled with dandruff, itching scalp, falling hair or baldness, we have a remedy which we believe will completely relieve these troubles. We are so sure of this that we offer it to you with the understanding that it will cost you nothing for the trial if it does not produce the results we claim. This remedy is called Rexall "93" Hair Tonic. We honestly believe it to be the most scientific remedy for scalp and hair troubles, and we know of nothing else that equals it for effectiveness, because of the results it has produced in thousands of cases.

Rexall "93" Hair Tonic is devised to banish dandruff, restore natural color when its loss has been brought about by disease, and make the hair naturally silky, soft and glossy. It does this because it stimulates the hair follicles destroys the germ matter, and brings about a free, healthy circulation of blood, which nourishes the hair roots, causing them to tighten and grow new hair. We want everybody who has any trouble with hair or scalp to know, that we think that Rexall "93" Hair Tonic is the best hair tonic and restorative in existence, and no one should scoff at or doubt this statement until they have put our claims to a fair test, with the understanding that they pay us nothing for the remedy if it does not give full and complete satisfaction in every particular. Two sizes, 50 cents and $1.00. Remember, you can obtain Rexall Remedies only at our store—The Rexall Store.

EXTENSION DIVISION NOTES FOR OCTOBER.

By A. D. Wilson, Supt.

Try to protect all stock from cold winds and rains. It pays.

FALLL PLOWING.

Fall plowing is to be preferred to spring plowing. This applies also to land for corn that is to be manuered during the winter and spring. A reasonable dressing of coarse manure may be disked in without difficulty, and is in better position to aid the crop than when plowed under.

HOGGING OFF CORN.

Many good, careful farmers find it practical to hog off some of their corn and it will pay you to look into this question, if you have not already done so.

FATTENING POULTRY.

Try finishing some of your poultry this fall before marketing. If it pays to convert corn into 6-cent pork, it may pay better to convert some of it into 12-cent poultry.

DON'T BURN THE STRAW.

Don't burn the straw piles. If the straw cannot be used for feed or bedding, scatter several feet deep in the yards, where it will rot and be converted into manure. If you have more straw than you have use for, it is evidence that your farm is under-stocked with live stock; hence in need of all available manure.

Lame back is one of the most common forms of muscular rheumatism. A few applications of Chamberlain's Liniment will give relief. For sale by all druggists.

Economy—
I Can Help You

You know that you should have a Stickney Engine but do you know what size will do your work most economically, both in cost of fuel and in the expenditure of your time as an engine too small to do the work is not true economy. It is not economy to overload your engine nor to run it at too high a speed. Again the right size of engine will not give proper results unless the pulley sizes are right and the hook up is correct. This is where I can help you before you buy as well as look after you when you have bought.

Once more let me offer my help and show you the Stickney Engine—its outside igniter, its perfect cooling system, its automatic mixer, its ball bearing governor and its three point suspension.

Official Paper of The City.

FRIDAY, OCT. 13, 1911.

Have something to say—say it—stop talking.

The foot-ball boys should realize that an early defeat is often a final victory in disguise.

Some conditions that were, are; some conditions that are, will be; but all conditions that were, never can remain.

The man who yesterday was a fanatic imbued with new ideas, today is the champion in the great advance of modern civilization.

The man who goes into politics just for the fun of it is abusing the most important duty that we have as American Citizens.

Every man is important unto himself but it matters little to the world when he ceases to exist. The world moves on without taking any particular notice of his absence.

TAFT SOWS THE WIND.

At an Iowa town bearing the ominous name of Waterloo Mr. Taft unburdened himself of what is doubtless his true message to the country. In briefest terms, it amounted to this:

Let big business alone, or you will have a panic and a lot of you will starve to death.

To be more specific, he dealt with four aspects of big business—railroads, trusts, tariff and currency—to this effect:

As to railroads, we have solved the problem of reasonable and equitable rates by means of the interstate commerce commission. It's no use to bother the railroads any more—they're all right.

As to trusts, we have that splendid decision of the supreme court. The oil and tobacco trusts are now but memories. If any more real bad ones are discovered they will promptly be squelched in the same way.

As to the tariff, we've got some men at work finding out if it is too high. If so, it will be very gently lowered in a way that will not disturb business or interfere with anybody's profits.

As to currency, we need the Aldrich central bank worse than they used to need pistols in Texas. It has been recommended by a number of estimable gentlemen who carefully ought to know what they are talking about. Take it, and currency will be out of the way, same as railroads, trusts and tariff.

If this settlement of vexed questions is accepted, capital will employ labor and all will be well; if it is rejected, capital will refuse to do business, panic will ensue, and the president will doubtless say of the situation, as he did once before in somewhat similar circumstances:

"God knows—I don't."

There never was a president of the United States so utterly at sea as William Howard Taft. In threatening the people with panic and starvation unless they heed the bidding of the masters, he is inviting something worse than panic.

He is courting revolution!—St. Paul Daily News.

cannot, however, last in any particular community, unless the farmers can keep up the supply of straw. If it is to improve, the quality of straw produced by the farmer must be improved. This can only be accomplished by a rigid determination to improve present methods of cropping, especially the principles of growing, selecting, curing and saving flax for seed. Seed Selection: This is the line of work from which I have much hope both from efforts to be continued at the Experiment Station and from the work of the farmers themselves.

Against the common belief that there are but one or two varieties of flax, my experiments, correspondence and samples of seed on hand, teach that there are several of very definite character. The general flax seed products commonly spoken of as "common fiber flax" and "common seed flax," by our tests, appear to be only general mixtures of strains and perhaps varieties. We have proved that in these mixtures there are early ripening types, frost resisting types, fiber strains, seed types, and finally wilt resisting types. As to the matter of resistance to frost or to wilt, the tests tend to show that it is probable that some samples of common flax are more or less resistant in character, according to the purity of the sample.

This all teaches that there is hope of obtaining flax seed of the type desired, as has been done in the case of other farm crops, and that it is not illusionary to hope to find strains which will produce fine qualities of seed and also strains which will produce fine qualities of fiber under our soil and climatic conditions. One would hardly select the climatic and soil conditions of Dakota for the production of typicial fiber flax, yet our experiments at Fargo, and those of Prof. Hayes at St. Anthony show that very fine fiber plants can be grown in these climates, to a length and a fineness equal to the best plants produced in the regular fiber producing countries. In 1899 I selected some individual plants from a rather short appearing crop of fiber flax. From the seed which descended from one of these, the farm department grew plants varying in length from forty to fifty-seven inches. This work tends to show that the matter of obtaining fiber types and seed suited to our conditions is only one of breeding strains which are suited to such climatic and soil conditions.

McGOEY FINALLY MAKES GOOD AT SUPERIOR.

Thomas McGoey, who made two successful biplane flights at Superior last Sunday, will make another attempt at Athletic Park next Sunday, and he has offered to take any volunteer with him, who should accompany him. The flight will be made between 2 and 5 o'clock. In addition there will be a football game between the Adams and Jefferson teams, and thousands of people are expected to be present and witness the events. This is the first attempt to make an aviation flight in Duluth.

Mr. McGoey says that he will take a passenger, either male or female, if conditions are right.

"Understand me, though," says Mr. McGoey. "Conditions must be just right for me to take a passenger. I am not going to risk my own neck and the passenger's by any such attempt, if there is anything but perfect weather conditions. The park is small enough in the first place, and in my light machine it is no place for a passenger."

McGoey is the man who made two most successful flights in Superior last Sunday. Thousands of Duluth people journeyed across the bay to see him, and the flight was probably witnessed by 10,000 people. Everyone who saw the flights returned most enthusiastic regarding them.

Mr. McGoey has promised to make two flights if everything is favorable, and possibly more. He will also give an exhibition of steering the machine along the ground, and perform several other stunts that will show the crowd how an aeroplane works.

The machine is now in Superior and will be brought here Friday or Saturday.

"We'll stay here until we fly," said F. G. Kenworthy, Mr. McGoey's manager and partner. "We'll do it Sunday if it isn't blowing a hurricane, and if it is, we'll give rain checks, good for the next day. There isn't a better aviator in America today than Tom, and if you don't believe it, ask any person who saw him fly at Superior. He can fly when 90 per cent. of them wouldn't dare leave the ground. This flight means more to us than it does to any of the spectators, as we have our reputation at stake."—Duluth News Tribune.

AT THE AUDITORIUM

Vast crowds hovered about the display windows of the Langseth Mercantile Company last Sunday evening to see the beginning of the remarkable work of Barnum, the hypnotist, when he hypnotized over the long distance telephone a good looking young man and had him sleep for fifty hours, awakening him on the stage Tuesday evening.

Last Wednesday afternoon another young man was started riding a bicycle in the McGinn Hardware window and continued riding constantly until awakened on the stage the same evening.

Thursday afternoon at 3 o'clock a man was hypnotized and started playing a piano in the Torrison Bros. display window, and played the best of music without a let up until the beginning of the exhibition at the Auditorium.

To-night the Rock Breaking exhibition will be given. A subject will be placed in a cataleptic state, with his head on one chair and heels on the other and a large rock placed on his chest. The rock will be broken by a local blacksmith, using a 15-lb. hammer.

Saturday night Barnum will call for a Lady Class, and will give a good demonstration of what can be done with the gentler sex.

Barnum's entertainment is constructed mainly on comedy lines, with a few scientific tests. His idea is to amuse and instruct the audience. At the beginning of each performance he gives a very interesting talk on some phase of practical psychology.

Judging from the large crowds that attend the shows each night and the large amount of enthusiasm exhibited by the public, Barnum is giving one of the best entertainments that ever struck this city.

Oh, the Difference!

"You look pretty this evening," the bachelor said to his fair companion.

She gazed at him philosophically. "I am sure you mean that well," she replied, "but you have no idea how such a speech wrings the heart of one like me—or would if I had not become hardened to the inevitable. Nobody ever says to me, 'You are pretty.' It is always 'You look pretty.' There is a difference as wide as the wideness of the sea. The girl who really is pretty never has to give the subject a thought. Nothing she can do or leave undone affects the vital fact that she is pretty. The girl whom nature has not thus dowered must be forever trying to make herself 'look pretty.' Of course in a way she deserves far more credit for making herself acceptable to the public than the pretty girl does—also it is a compliment to her taste, ingenuity, skill and various other mental qualities to assure her she has attained success—but it always reminds her of the battle she must continually wage."—Exchange.

GERMANTOWN

Our weather profit got it at last. They have predicted good weather for the last three weeks. All you have to do, stick to it and you win out.

Our telephone will be built this fall. At a meeting last Saturday three men were appointed to go around and get final settlement with those noe present. About 17 miles of line will be built with 25 subscribers.

Mr. Breitenbach came up from Ada for a visit with C. Klockmann. These gentlemen were chums about 20 years ago. Mr. Breitenbach also visited with C. Habendank.

Last week another party was around inspecting culverts in the ditch. If inspecting will do them any good they certainly will be all right.

The leveling of the big grade has been delayed on account of the wet weather.

Plowing around this vicinity is well advanced.

ANSTAD

The weather has been fine this last week. Hope it will keep on as there is lots of work to do yet.

Mrs. John Karbow who has been staying at Anstad for a while left last Wednesday for another boarding place.

Mrs. Fiskewold and Mrs. Swenson made a stay-over-night at Anstad last Monday.

Mrs. Kady and Mrs. Pittman were callers at Anstad last Tuesday.

This town is getting lonesome as Dredges have all left.

Every body has got their flax stacked and are waiting for the thresher.

The lantern man is not seen any more going back and forth in the swamps.

LEO ROCKSTAD.

Monday morning, Oct. 9th at the home of his parents south of this city where he was born and had spent his life, occurred the death of Leo John Jefferson Rockstad age eighteen years. Death was caused by tuberculosis.

Funeral services were held at the Salvation Army hall Wednesday afternoon and were in charge of the Salvation Army. Rev. J. B. Smith of the M. E. church preached the funeral sermon.

Besides his parents Leo leaves several brothers and sisters and many friends to mourn him.

Was not the man who said, "The American public likes to be fooled" named Barnum. Or was it 'amused'?

SELECT SEED-WHEAT NOW.

The careful selection of seed-wheat now, before marketing the crop, would seem to be made imperative by conditions which have revealed themselves in the Red River country and elsewhere. A large portion of the grain is rusted and shrunken; and unless the selection is made before marketing the bulk of the crop, the farmer is likely to find himself without a sufficiency of seed fit for next springs planting.

Mr. J. D. Bilsborrow, of the Crookston Experiment Station, reports an analysis of a sample which he thinks representative of much of the wheat in the Red River Valley, with the following results:

Clean and plump seed	27 per cent.
Shrunken seed,	64 per cent.
Weeds and dirt,	8 per cent.

The sample was No. 3 Northern, and weighed fifty pounds per bushel. At the rate shown by the analysis, it would be necessary to save about four bushels of wheat for every bushel of seed needed. A vast deal of trouble will be avoided, therefore, by bringing the fanning-mill into use for the purpose of selecting seed, before marketing any grain. And if anyone is fortunate enough to find himself in possession of an over-supply of clean, plump and heavy seed, he can be sure of a high price for it in the spring.

An additional encouragement for taking up at once the work of selection is found in the fact that plump and well-developed seeds, coming from a rusted field, indicate that the plants which bore them had rust-enduring qualities, a continuance of which may be looked for in their progeny.

In the presence of an inferior crop a careful selection of seed, first for size and then for weight, is practically the same as taking out a policy insuring a good crop in 1912.—C. R Barns, Extension Div., Minn. Agr. College.

PREVENTION AND CONTROL OF PEAT FIRES.

Immediately after a grass fire has swept over peat land, especially if the peat is dry, owner of such land should go over the burning carefully, dig out and carry away all small fires which may have become started in the soil. Do not try to put them out with water, or stamp them out, for in ninety nine cases out of a hundred these methods are of no avail. They are a waste of time and labor. Each often little fire, no mattre how small, should be dug out and removed. The fire may often, if taken soon enough, be dug out with one shovel full. Care should be taken to get all the fire. A good plan is to put sand or black dirt or some other non-burnable substance into a wagon box. Then drive over the fire swept area, dig out the little fire and haul them off. If taken at once, fire which in a day or two would require much time to control may be stopped very cheaply.

In case a fire of some extent should be burning in peat land, do not try and put it out with water. Begin as soon as possible to ditch around the fire, through the peat clear down to mineral soil. The ditch should at least be two feet wide, and care should be taken to have all the fire inside the ditch. On a fire where a mile or more of ditch must be made to control it, a horse-power cable drawn ditcher, is very effective at a cost of about sixty five cents a rod.

The ditch while being made and after completition should be watched in order that the fire may not cross it, until the fire inside has burned out. A good plan is to burn down the inside wall of the ditch with due precaution, decreasing the length of time necessary to watch the ditch.

Ditching in the manner described above is the only sure method of controlling and stopping the spread of fire burning in dry peat. Rain and snow will not stop such a fire when it has a good start. If ditching is begun as soon as such a fire is discovered the work will be cheapened and land will be saved.

A SERIOUS BLUNDER

By F. A. MITCHEL

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

Edgar Ainsworth was editor of the Literary Review. One day he criticised a novel published under the name of Rosamond Stanford as follows:

"'Her Mistake,' by Rosamond Stanford (Jones Bros.), is a mistake all through. In the first place, it was a mistake for Miss Stanford to try to write a novel at all. Her hero, Milton Truesdale, is a prig. Her heroine, Alice Van Zant, would do very well for the leading lady of a child's play. The scenes are like a London fog, the characters as stiff as the figurehead of a sailing ship of the nineteenth century."

It was Saturday night when Ainsworth consigned the poor authoress labor to oblivion, and the foreman of the composing room was calling for copy for the Literary Digest. The editor called a boy and sent up criticisms of six novels, all of which he had read that afternoon, to fill up the colum unprovided for. Then he went home, put a hot water bag on his stomach, another on his cheek and after a few hours' more suffering went to sleep.

He awoke at 10 o'clock in the morning refreshed. After a bath and a breakfast he lounged; and if he saw a newspaper lying about he took it up and put it in the stove. He dined at 2, slept from 3 till 6, took tea and proceeded to make his usual Sunday evening call on his fiancee, Marion Schoefield.

Miss Schoefield, who had been used to his calls for several years, waiting while her lover condemned enough books to enable him to marry her, was, as usual, watching for her lover on Sunday evening at the parlor window. Mr. Ainsworth was disappointed at not seeing her at the accustomed place. Fearing something serious had happened, he hurried into the house. Meeting her sister in the hall, he asked anxiously:

"Where is Molly?"

No answer.

"Great heavens! Is she ill?"

No answer.

"Do tell me!"

"Molly is well enough. She'll be down presently."

Ainsworth walked the parlor floor for half an hour, when, looking up, he saw his love standing mute before him. She had entered so silently that she had not heard him. She looked as if she had been bur[illegible] and exhumed.

"Rose—sweetheart!" he exclaimed. "What has happened?"

"A good deal has happened," was the reply.

"Tell me. I'm dying with suspense."

"Perhaps you will not think it a matter of importance. The truth has simply been spoken."

"The truth!"

"Yes. It is no fault of yours."

"Whose fault is it?"

"No one's. I have simply made a mistake."

"What mistake?"

"In trying to write a novel."

"You write a novel!"

"Yes. I have been engaged for more than a year on one."

"Well?"

"I have been advised by one near and dear to me—that's the worst of it"—tremulously—"that I made a mistake in trying to write."

"Who told you that nonsense?"

"Besides, I've discovered that the man I took for a model for my hero is a prig."

"Who did you take?"

"One I love."

"Good gracious! You didn't take me?"

"Y-e-s, I did," with a sob.

"Well, well, sweetheart, who told you all this? Have you been getting some addlepated fool's opinion on your manuscript?"

"The novel has been published."

"By whom?"

"Jones Bros."

Mr. Ainsworth began to see through a millstone.

"Has it been criticised?"

"Yes. A criticism appeared this morning."

"In what paper?"

"The Literary Digest."

Ainsworth saw that without a coup all was lost. "I wrote all the criticisms in today's issue. I wrote none on a book by you."

"My own name wasn't on the title page. It was Rosamond Stanford."

"What was the name of the story?"

"'Her Mistake.'"

"'Her Mistake?' My gracious, Molly, now could you have tried to write a story of British society without ever having visited England?"

"I didn't."

"And that scene between the duke and Lady Tatterton—it is ridiculous."

"There is no such scene in my novel."

"I shall stand by my guns. Your hero Auchincloss is a prig. I'll never give in on that."

"Auchincloss? He isn't my hero. My hero is Roy Courtenay. I drew him from you."

"There's no such man in 'His Mistake.'"

"'Her Mistake.'"

"I'm talking of 'His Mistake.'"

"My story was 'Her Mistake.'"

"I begin to see it all. You are barking up one tree, I another. Isn't it funny that this muddle should make a pun? We've both made a mistake. Kiss me, darling. I'll get at your book on Monday. But I warn you that if you've made me your hero you've struck a snag."

"I haven't any such thing. I've got a noble, good, true"—

He stopped the rest with kisses.

PARSLEY IN WINTER.

A fine supply of parsley can be had for winter use by lifting several plants and placing them in a small box of soil in a sunny cellar window. Treat as one would house-plants.

CARE OF POULTRY

Give the poultry a large, roomy and light house in winter to they can move around without being kept under compression. They are wanting for plenty room just as well as a human being. Feed them crushed bones and glass as this helps to keep them in motion and also helps their digestive organs; give them ashes to bathe in as they like nothing better for exercise and it keeps them free from lice.

THE LAWN

As long as the grass continues to grow, the lawn should be clipped; but set the mower to cut rather high. This helps to thicken up the grass close to the roots, where it needs the winter protection. This winter plan to cover the lawn with fine sheep-manure; or, if it cannot be had, use cow-manure with little or no trash. Contrary to belief, the litter adds no protective feature, when the growth of grass has been treated as above; and the fertilizing value of the clear manure is far superior to that from vast amounts of trash.—Le Roy Cady, University Farm.

TO AILING WOMEN.

A Little Sound Advice Will Help Many Sufferers In Thief River Falls.

No woman can be healthy and well if the kidneys are sick. Poisons that pass off in the secretions when the kidneys are well, are retained in the body when the kidneys are sick. Kidneys and bladder become inflamed and swollen and worse troubles quickly follow. This is often the true cause of bearing down pains, lameness, back ache, etc. Uric poisoning also cause headaches, dizzy spells, languor, nervousness and rheumatic pain.

When suffering so try Doan's Kidney Pills, a remedy that has cured thousands of such cases. You will get better as the kidneys get better, and health will return when the kidneys are well. Let a Thief River Falls woman tell you about Doan's Kidney Pills.

Mrs. J. O. Christopherson, 414 S. Paul Ave., Thief River Falls, Minn. says: "I have used Doan's Kidney Pills with excellent results and they have also been taken with benefit by other members of our family. We keep Doan's Kidney Pills in the house all the time and do not think we could get along without them."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

SAVINGS BANK HINTS.

Rutabagas, beets and carrots may not be of great money value to the grower just at present. Perhaps he is planning to let them rot or to feed them to the stock. But indications are that they will be worth from 75 cents to one dollar per bushel before spring. Such has been the case for many past seasons. They can be kept perfectly in an easily-constructed pit or root-cellar, taken out in late winter and turned into a neat bit of spending-money.—Le Roy Cady, University Farm.

Ill Timed Humor.

Dr. Frederick Van Eeden, the Dutch physician and author, always kept in sight the injustice of fate that subjects the poor to tortures from which the rich are exempt. He told the following bitter little anecdote, which occurred during his student days in Amsterdam:

Once a poor man was brought in affected with a very strange and rare disease of the spine that caused him, by involuntary spasms of the legs, to jump and to continue hopping when he tried to stand on his legs. Our professor wanted to show this to his students, and he requested the patient to stand on his feet. The poor man looked at the crowd around and said with a pathetic, imploring look:

"If the gentlemen will please not laugh." The professor promised they would be serious.

And yet when the man began to hop the "gentlemen" roared. And I felt the tears come to my eyes and my fists close in my pockets.—World's Work.

A Greenland Duel.

It is rather a pity for the gayety of nations that French men of letters cannot fight their duels as duels are fought in Greenland. In Greenland when one man has been insulted by another the adversaries each compose a satire in verse. This each man recites to his household until the servants and the women know it by heart. Then a place of meeting is appointed. The two men, the insulter and insulted, the offender and offended, stand face to face, and each recites his poem. His friends and servants form a chorus. Each man tries hard to raise the laugh against his adversary. Each man speaks in turn, whipping the enemy with epigram and quip, and after two hours of this wordy battle the meeting gives the victory to him of the two adversaries who has amused the whole assembly most.

Colored His Sermons.

"A minister has got to be alive and resourceful today," said a deacon of a big metropolitan church. "Ours finds he can't speak well extemporaneously, and he reads from a typewritten copy. I never knew how he managed to preach so effectively until one day I happened to see his manuscript. Half of it was underlined in different colors It looked so curious that I asked him about it.

"'A little scheme of mine,' he said laughingly. 'I found I was delivering what I had written in the same tone. So now, early on Sunday morning, I go over the copy I carry into the pulpit. I keep crayon pencils of six different colors on my desk. Red means one tone, green yet another, yellow and blue yet others. As I turn each page I see at a glance just how I am to speak.'"—New York Sun.

Secret Societies.

Secret societies are so ancient that their origin is lost in the mists of the past. They existed in Egypt, Persia, India, at the earliest times with which history or legend gives us any insight. It seems to be natural for men to organize such societies for both good and evil purposes. Nearly all the ancient religions were of a two faced character, popular and secret, or, as they are called, "esoteric" and "exoteric," the first for the few, the initiated, the second for the rank and file. The philosophers would teach one thing to the masses of the people and another to the select few who made up the "inner circle." Cicero tells us that the wise men of Rome and Greece believed quite differently from the common run of Greeks and Romans.

A Good Listener.

Alfred Henry Lewis, the author, was walking up Pennsylvania avenue one day when he met Louis Brownlow, the magazine writer.

"Louis," said Lewis solemnly, "listen to me—for three hours."

"Why, what's the matter?" asked Brownlow.

"Why," said Lewis indignantly, "I've been in this town all day, and every body else has been doing the talking. I do love my little conversation!"

Brownlow went to luncheon with him and, after doing a sprint in long distance listening, pulled out his watch with the remark: "Lewis, I've listened to you for three hours and nine minutes. Goodby."—New York Tribune.

The Conscience of Clara.

One day when Mrs. Bell was making a neighborly call on Mrs. Ellis the latter, in the presence of her caller, discharged her colored maid, whose obstreperousness could be borne with no longer.

A few weeks later Mrs. Bell again called on Mrs. Ellis, and to her surprise her hostess informed her that Clara was back.

The services of the maid were required by her mistress, who pressed the button in the drawing room. There was, however, no response. Finally Mrs. Ellis went out and waited on herself. While she was gone Clara, who was acquainted with Mrs. Bell, having served in her family also, put her head in at the door and explained:

"Mis' Bell, I heard Mis' Ellis all the time, but do you recollec' the las' time you was here she discharged me an said she'd never have me again: said I'd never come back too. But here I am, so we bofe lied. That's why I's ashamed to come in. I was ashamed for bofe of us."—New York Times.

Chili Con Carne.

From remotest Mexico comes this recipe for chili con carne, which is capable of warming whatever cockles the heart may have and of diffusing calories to one's works at large: First comes a fire of logs in the open. Second comes an olla of generous proportions. Into the olla put a gallon of water and plenty of the hot chilis, and in that region of Mexico they ripen so hot that not even the rattlesnake will dare take refuge in their shade. Upon this beginning lay as much of a side of beef in one piece as may be squeezed into the pot. Set the cover on this olla and lute it down with clay. Then put the pot into the fire and heap the glowing coals all over it, with particular attention to the lid, so that the luting may bake into brick. Keep the fire burning slowly all day long. When night has come scatter the embers, break the brick seal of the olla, fork out and throw away whatever of the meat remains solid. The remainder is the chili con carne. No sauce is needed.

The Love Affairs of Handel.

Women greatly admired Handel who was very handsome, but the serenity of the composer seems only to have been ruffled, twice, by love on his part. His first attachment was to a London girl, a member of the aristocracy. Her parents believed him beneath her in social position, but were good enough to say that if he abstained from writing any more music the question of marriage might be entertained. It was easier to abstain from their daughter than from his art, and he did so. Years after almost the same thing occurred. Handel and another beautiful pupil of his fell in love with each other, and proud parents gave him the choice between giving up his profession or their daughter. Music, "heavenly maid," was chosen.—"The Love Affairs of Some Famous Men."

Hitting the Doctor.

As today, in the days gone by the doctors were made the target of the jester's fling.

Pausanias, the Spartan general, when asked by a physician how it was that he was never ill, exultingly answered, "Because I never consult you."

At another time Pausanias said that the best physician was the one who dispatched his patients with the least possible suffering.

Pausanias, strongly disapproving of a certain physician and his methods and berating him in no mild terms, was asked by a friend how as he had never consulted that partic[illegible] doctor, he could be so sure of his statements. Pausanias answered, "Well, had I consulted him would I be living today?"

A Summer Without Nights.

To the summer visitor in Sweden there is nothing more striking than the almost total absence of night. At Stockholm, the Swedish capital, the sun goes down a few minutes before 10 o'clock and rises again four hours later during a greater part of the month of June. But the four hours the sun lies hidden in the frozen north are no hours of darkness. The refraction of his rays as he passes around the north pole makes midnight as light as a cloudy midday and enables one to read the finest print without artificial light at any time during the "night."

Uncle Sam's Eagle.

The eagle is the king of birds, the lord of the sky, the bravest, noblest and most independent of the feathered tribe, and probably that is the reason why he was adopted as our national bird. His image holds its place upon our national coat of arms by sheer merit and not merely from empty sentiment. The noble bird, loving liberty, scorning confinement, at home and at his best only when invested with the wide freedom of the glorious heavens, is the fit emblem of the "spirit of '76" and of the government that that spirit won and established on the earth. Other peoples entertain the same high opinion of the eagle, since from the time of the institution of the Roman standard straight down to the present day he has appeared as a conspicuous figure in the heraldry of the nations.—New York American.

Too Pretty a Lake For That.

"China gave me many a shock," said the returned traveler, "but the one that nearly carried me off was administered in the Fuchau district. Out in the country I came across a beautiful little lake drained by a beautiful little river. The scenery was marred somewhat, however, by signs stuck up every few yards at the edge of the lake. I wondered what their import was, and on one of my trips to the lake I took a missionary friend along to translate.

"'Oh, that,' said he. 'There are not many of them left in this district. That is a warning that girls must not be drowned in this lake.'

"Somehow I could never admire my beautiful lake so much after that, although maybe I ought to have admired it more." —New York Press.

Ponies and Horses.

I have been asked a great many times if ponies are really more intelligent than full sized horses. They certainly appear to be. But the intelligence of any horse will develop under petting and human companionship, and there is no doubt that other horses, if given the same privileges that ponies enjoy and if their size admitted of their being handled and managed in the same way, would prove equally intelligent.—Outing.

A Consignment of Wine

By J. B. PAGE

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

I was born in Madrid, Spain, and my father was a wine merchant there. Having more fancy for an out of door life than a counting room, I persuaded him to give me a position in his business of buyer. I traveled through the grape growing districts and bought wine at the vineyards.

One day I was traveling on horseback over the southern slope of the mountains when I heard a voice:

"Halt!"

The first idea that came into my head was that I was stopped by a brigand, and I was right.

"I must trouble you, senor, to clasp your hands on the top of your head."

A brigand jumped over a wall and, holding a gun in the hollow of his arm, came toward me. He wore the costume of the country, which is picturesque, and had a devil may care way with him. He asked me to hand him a weapon I carried at my hip, keeping me covered meanwhile and his eye fixed on mine, that he might detect in time any indication of a purpose to use it. As soon as he had possession of it he told me to proceed, conducting me to a camp where a dozen men were lounging.

From papers on my person the brigands discovered that I was the son of a rich wine merchant in Madrid and resolved to demand a large ransom for my return. The man who captured me went out in search of some one to carry the message to my father and returned with a peasant girl about twenty years of age. I wrote a note to my father, giving an account of my capture, informing him of the amount that must be paid for my release. If it were not sent by the girl I would be killed. I requested that she be well paid for carrying the message. Before she departed I heard the captain of the band tell her that if she in any way aided in an attempt to rescue me or in an attack on the band she and all her family would be killed.

I knew nothing that was passing in her mind and supposed that she would not dare to give any information that would jeopardize the brigands. I knew my father would pay the ransom, though the amount was so large that it might ruin him financially. But I was very much deceived by the girl. The day after her departure, at 2 o'clock in the morning, the only sentinel of the camp was stabbed in the back and every sleeping brigand jumped upon by a soldier and pinioned before he could use a weapon. The band had long been the terror of that region, and the girl had resolved to risk the sacrifice of herself and her family to rid the country of them. She knew every foot of ground about their camp and had guided the soldiers, enabling them to surprise the brigands. They were taken to the capital, tried and every one of them executed.

This was just before one of those revolutions by which my country has been so often disturbed. The uprising was unsuccessful, and the government determined to strike such terror into the revolutionists that they would not repeat the attempt. One morning a girl came to see me whom I at once recognized as Pepita, who had been instrumental in destroying the brigands.

The girl told me that her betrothed, Jose Sanchez, had been implicated in the revolution and had been taken in arms against the government. He had been in prison in Madrid and she had by a ruse effected his escape. But she was unable to get him out of the capital. Every exit was closely guarded, and as Sanchez had been one of the ringleaders in the rebellion the government was making every effort to recapture him. Pepita begged me to aid him to leave the city.

"Where is he now?" I asked.

"Hiding in a sewer."

"Can you bring him to our storehouse tonight?"

"I can try."

That night I went to the storehouse, and Sanchez, disguised in Pepita's frock and headgear, which partly covered his face, came in. I had everything arranged. The vehicle by which I proposed to take him past the guards was a wine cask. I had one prepared for him and in the morning put him into it with sufficient provisions to guard against hunger. A team was driven up to the storehouse and loaded with a number of casks of port wine. One of the casks contained the living body of Jose Sanchez. I rolled it on to the wagon myself, that its contents should not be injured. Then I got up beside the driver, and we started to carry the wine out of the city.

On arriving at the post, where all persons going out were critically examined, the officer scrutinized me and the driver critically. He even thumped on the casks that he might judge by the sound whether they contained liquid or solid substances. But I had prepared for this. "Give me a cup," I said, "and I will convince you that there is wine inside the casks, and the very best." This pleased him, and he produced a cup. I took a spigot from my pocket and, drawing wine, gave it to him. I filled him full and all the guard besides. He had sounded most of the casks, but the libation stopped him, and after drawing a few gallons to leave behind we were permitted to go on.

I shipped the casks to France, going with them all the way, and liberated the prisoner on the other side of the border.

COMMISSION GOVERNMENT

Being A Continuation of Why The Plan Succeeds. Effect of Short Ballot.

The following article is a continuation of the explanation of "why the commission plan succeeds," taken from the Story of the Short Ballot Cities.

The Short Ballot.

The commission plan succeeds therefore because it puts the power where the people can see it. The vital feature is not the method of organization, but the method of popular control. It is the ballot on election day which is unique. It is so short that every citizen knows what he is doing and is not relying on a party label or on the guidance of a politician. The "average man," "the man in the street," or the "plain people," whatever you choose to call them, are in complete control of the government. The short ballot has left no work for the politician to do; the people arrange the whole matter directly with the candidates without the politicians' help.

The most marked phenomenon of commission gofernment has been the increased interest of the people in their city government. All eyes have been focused on the city hall month after month without interruption.

The force of public opinion has been repeatedly illustrated in the commission governed cities. Few men, good or bad, would have the strength to resist popular demand when it is so intensively concentrated upon them. Each commissioner knows his responsibility for what is done, and knows that everybody else in town knows it too. Politicians of the average sort have been elected to office many times in commission governed cities, but their conspicuous responsibility has brought about a remarkable responsibility to the opinion of the people.

The initiative, referendum and recall are considered important features of the plan by many people, but Galveston and Houstin made a success of the commission plan before any of these features were thought.

A few suggestions for the improvement of the plan have been made rather persistently, based not upon any disaster that has happened in the past, but rather on the fear that there might be trouble in the future. It has been noted, for example, that the city clerk in Des Moines, who passes upon the correctness of petitions for the recall of commissioners, is himself a creature of the commission and that in this work he ought to be independent. It is also pointed out that there is no independent auditing of the city's accounts. The commission audits its own books. In both cases it has been suggested that these offices be filled by popular vote. In the language of those who propose these changes, "have them independently elected by the people and responsible to the people." This familiar argument involves an error, the avoidance of which constitutes the great value of the commission plan. It is easy enough to create a new office and make it elective by popular vote, but it is not so easy to "have" such an officer "responsible to the people." He will not be responsible to the people if he is elected in obscurity with no limelight directed on his office. To be sure he may be legally responsible and the responsiblity in law may be very clearly established, but the people cannot and will not hold him to account unless he stands out conspicuously before them.

The desirability of an independent audit and an independent judgment on recall petitions is nevertheless obvious. It should, however, be secured in some other way than by attempting to make the people choose the officers. The same effect can be obtained by having the state assume these duties. Let an appointee of the governor be charged with the duty of auditing the books of all the cities in the state, with the right to prescribe a uniform

WHAT THE CANDIDATES SAY

Arpin And Backe, Candidates For Mayor, Are Interviewed This Week.

The "Press" so far has not deemed it advisable to come out in support of any special candidate, or group of candidates, for the coming city election to be held November 7th; but intends to treat them all equally, in so far as such a thing is possible, giving the public an unbiased view of the conditions, and allowing the candidates the use of this paper for an expression of their opinions, and a statement of their principles if they care to do so. Some of the candidates have been interviewed and some have not. It is obviously impossible to get an expression from all of them in one week. Politics ought not to cut any special figure in a city election. The main question is, is the candidate capable and at liberty to give satisfactory service.

Mr. A. M. Arpin, Independent, candidate for mayor, when interviewed said:

"I do not care to make any signed statement as to the policy I would pursue in the event of my election to the office of mayor. I have been urged to accept the nomination, and if elected I will be Mayor, you may be assured of that.

I represent no faction, no organization of any kind, and am under obligation to no one.

It is my belief that the administration of the city's affairs is no different than a man's business, and should be run as such, to the highest possible efficiency."

Mr. Lars Backe, Independent, candidate for mayor, when interviewed furnished a signed statement as follows:

"As a candidate for the office of Mayor it is natural thatI should be expected to give an expression in some form of my principles, or platform, and being offered a space in your paper for this purpose I am glad to avail myself of the opportunity to make a brief statement.

I am not a new man in this city, having lived here for about 20 years or more and need no introduction to the old timers of the city. But our city has grown from the small unorganized hamlet; it has expanded and is now one of the leading cities of the Northwest, and there are many people here now whom I do not know and who do not know me. To those people I wish to say that I have been clerk of this city for 16 years and claim to be as familiar with our city affairs as any man in town.

It has always been my principle and policy—and my record proves it—that our public utilities should be owned and operated by the City. I furthermore believe that to make such a policy a success, every property holder ought to realize that he is a stock holder in the City Corporation to the extent of his holdings, and that he should be as careful in the selection of men to run our City affairs as stock holders in private corportations are in selecting their boards of directors. If this is not realized, we can not expect good results.

The city now owns and operates two important public unilities the revenues and disbursements of which amounts to considerable and requires careful and business like attention from the administration. The importance of securing for the city a business administration can not be overemphasized, if these utilities are to be operated successfully and profitably, with the minimum expense of service.

Bi virtue of the laws under which our city is organized the Mayor has great police power, and in this respect the retail liquor dealers are more directly interested than other branches. I think it is out of the question for any mayor to try and run what is termed "a wide open town." Public opinion at this time will not tolerate any such policy. But at the same time, when a person invests in, and is granted, a license from the city to do business, such person should be reasonably sure of his property rights and should not be in fear that the mayor on any slight pretext or pro-

CITY WILL ENFORCE ORDINANCE

Supt. Peterson Instructed To Collect All Past Due Accounts For Light and Power.

The city council has instructed superintendent Peterson, of the Water and Light department, to strictly enforce section 5 of ordinance 67, which reads:

All accounts for electric light or electric power shall become due on the first day of each month and shall be payable at the office of the City Clerk or at such other place as may be appointed by the City Council, from the first to the tenth, inclusive, of each month. If not paid on or before the tenth day of each month, a penalty of ten per cent. shall be added. And in all cases where such accounts shall be paid on or before the tenth day of each month, a discount of ten per cent. shall be allowed and deducted from the same.

The ordinance continues: In all cases where dues are not paid on or before the fifteenth day of each month, the electric current shall be cut off, and in such case a penalty of two dollars shall be added, to reimburse the city for the expense incurred in cutting and reconnecting the wires; and in no case shall the

SHORT COURSE FOR 1911-1912

Young People In This and Adjoining Counties Offered Educational Advantages.

A term of five months, to be known as the "Short Course," will begin at the Lincoln High School building in Thief River Falls on Monday, October 30th.

This course will be open to all young people over sixteen years of age in this and adjoining counties, who for various reasons cannot attend school but part of the school year. No qualifications except that as to age are necessary to enroll. There are no charges of any kind for this course and all books, supplies and other school material are furnished free.

Students will be permitted to begin the daily recitations at any hour that suits their convenience, though it is suggested that they start at nine o'clock. Those from the country having chores to perform may be dismissed at an early hour in the afternoon.

The studies will consist of lessons in ordinary English, including a study of composition and the commonest forms of the language; practical arithmetic and its applications to the affairs of every day life; the keeping of accounts and a study of ordinary business forms; spelling, writing and typewriting if desired; cooking and sewing for girls; iron and wood work for the boys, and this includes the making of articles for service in the home and on the farm; agriculture. The last named subject will be particularly emphasized for the benefit of the students who are interested in agricultural pursuits.

All the departments in the school are well equipped with books, material and machinery for the presentation of the proposed work. A special teacher has been hired to assist the regular teachers with the special course studies. The wood working shop is large and complete and the equal of anything in the northwestern part of the state. A new blacksmith shop has been recently built and is at the service of all students desiring to take this work. The agriculture department now occupies three rooms and is ready to do most efficient work. All other departmens are prepared in similar manner for service.

The students enolling for the short course will receive credit on the regular school records for what they accomplish, and they will not be prohibited from entering any grammar grade or high school classes for which they have the necessary preparation. All literary, class and athletic organizations are open to the short course students.

Many girls can secure places to work for their board in good homes in the city and thus reduce the expense of attending the school to a minimum. Board and room at reduced rates for students can always be obtained.

The board of education cordially invites all young people in city or country who cannot attend school all the year to enroll in the short course for the whole term or at least for a portion of the work. Everything connected with the school is absolutely free. No other town in northern Minnesota makes this generous offer.

Further information may be obtained by writing J. H. Hay, superintendent of the city schools.

SOCIALIST LECTURE

Mr. Berger Showing Why There Is Always Free Trade In Labor. The Soul of Business.

Last Monday evening was given at the Auditorium, before a large and appreciative audience ,the first number on the Lyceum Course, when Victor L. Berger, the socialist congressman from Wisconsin, gave an interesting lecture on the social and economic relations existing between the capitalist and working classes. Mr. Berger's lecture was well received and was interesting far beyond that of the usual lecture in that he gave so many new things. The gist of the lecture is given below:

The real issue as far as the working class is concerned is this:

Under the present system, which we call in political economy, the Capitalist System the workingman's labor has become a mere ware in the market.

And since the man's labor cannot be separated from the man, the workingman himself has become a comodity, whose time is bought and sold. The workingman, or rather, his labor power, is subject to the same conditions as every other ware, especially to the conditions of supply and demand and to competition.

The workingman's labor, that is, his time, is bought now in the open market by the highest bidder on the one hand, from the lowest seller on the other.

And the employers—which are really the master class—care only to buy the workingman's time when he is young, strong and healthy. When he is sick, or when he gets old, the employer has no use for him.

The employer is not in business for the sake of charity. He is in business in order to make profits—to make money.

And because of this, we see that our so-called free workers are sometimes worse off—from the purely economic point of view—than the blacks were under slavery before the war.

The negro was property and represented about a thousand dollars in value—sometimes more, sometimes less. He was property which was master owned. Therefore, the master, if he had any sense, took good care of his human chattel. The master was eager to have the slave as long and in as good condition as possible. When the slave became sick, or when he died, the master lost money.

The case is entirely different with the white workingman, the so-called free workingman. When the white man is sick, or when he dies, the employer usually loses nothing.

And high tariff, or tariff for revenue only, or free trade, "Have nothing to do with the case."

The fact is that the capitalist, the average employer of to-day, is more concerned about a valuable horse, about a fine dog, about a good automobile, than he is about his employee, or about his employee's family.

In most cases, the employment is absolutely impersonal. The employer does not know his employee by name, or even by number. This is invariably the case with a stock company where the shareholders are scattered all over a city, a state, or all over the country, sometimes over Europe.

Nor can any individual capitalist or employer, no matter how charitably inclined he may be, change anything in these conditions. A business or corporation that should try to run its plant on a charity basis would not last long.

As a matter of fact, under the present system, it is usually the worst employer who sets the pace. The employer who can fleece and skin his workingman best is best equipped for the fight in the open market. He can produce his goods the cheapest.

Thus competition has come to have a fearful meaning to the working-class.

On the one hand, it compels the employers to get their labor as cheaply as possible; on the other hand, it compels the workingman to compete with one another for jobs.

Competition among the workers has become, therefore, a cut-throat

FALLS AND BREAKS NECK

Peter Blygen Is Thrown To His Death While Crossing Culvert.

Last Saturday evening, while on his way to Carmel with a load of store goods, Peter Blygen, an aged farmer living near that place, drove into an open culvert two miles this side of Germantown and was thrown from the wagon, his head striking the wagon-tongue in such a way as to cause instant death thru fracture of the neck. Carl Olson and Ole Warner were also thrown from the load, but without serious injury. Blygen's was the last of a series of five teams, all of the others having crossed successfully.

The culvert, which is about 7 feet across and 2½ feet deep, connects two ditches recently dug by the township of Clover Leaf, and was at first bridged with tamarac poles, but two weeks ago these were removed on account of danger to horses and since that time the public had been driving thru the culvert. The place was considered very dangerous even in the daytime, several travelers having declared that if the place wasn't fixed someone would "break their neck" there. It would appear that the township officers were very negligent in allowing such a dangerous place to pass unoticed for so long a time.

Blygen was a man sixty years of age, and leaves a wife and three sons. The family is in very moderate circumstances and if the facts are, as they appear to be, certainly deserves some remunration from the township.

This accident will no doubt serve as a warning to other townships where the culverts are in bad shape, for example, the one two miles east of town, which had a dangerous hole in it for two weeks, has probably been repaired by now.

CROOKSTON 35 THIEE RIVER 0

Locals Lose On A Muddy Field. Their Line Too Light For Heavyweights.

The local High School football team, acompanied by the Liberty Band, left here Friday afternoon for Crookston, where on Saturday afternoon, on a very muddy field, they met the much heavier Crookston High School team and were defeated by the score of 35 to 0.

The local boys went to Crookston under the impression that their opponents average weight was the same as their own, 145 lbs.; but found them on an average much heavier. The difference in weight made it possible for Crookston to break thru the local line pretty much at will, and win on "straight" football. The locals could not help being scored on, but had the field and ball been less slippery they could have used their open plays with better success and scored frequently, as they are a very fast aggregation, and depend on their speed and skill in keeping the score even with heavier teams.

The Crookston Daily Times in commenting on the game said:

"The Thief River team arrived in the city on Friday evening at 6:15, accompained by a band and a number of rooters, and immediately began to make their presence felt. They got off the train playing, and got on the 10:20 train Saturday night playing, and if band music could have won the game our boys would surely have lost. The town of Thief River Falls is to be complimented on its patriotic spirit."

Tomorrow the boys will play a practice game with a team made up here in the city. The two Saturdays following they expect to have games here with outside teams, and with a considerably strengthened lineup, by the addition of new and heavier men, ought to make a first-class showing.

PROGRESSIVES ENDORSE ROBERT M. LA FOLLETTE

At the first national convention of the progressive republicans held in Chicago last Monday, two hundred representatives from thirty states endorsed the candidacy of Senator Robert M. La Follette of Wisconsin for president, declared in favor of a direct primary as a means for the expression of a presidential choice, and refered to a committee the suggestion that popular subscriptions be used as the means of financing this and future campaigns.

The endorsement came in the shape of resolutions and as finally adopted, they read in part:

The Resolutions.

"The progressive movement is a struggle to wrest the control of the government in the nation and states from the representatives of special privileges and restore it to the control of the people. The issue is the same in all the states, though the problem may be presented in different ways.

"In the national field, the control of government by special privilege is evidenced by the influence and power of the reactionary leaders in both parties in checking or preventing the enactment of progressive policies pledged by the Republican party.

"The present condition of uncertainty in business is intolerable and

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

It is possible that all the people do not know that this City's Light Plant is operating at a heavy loss under present temporary arrangements, but such is the fact; and past due accounts for light and water must be paid at once to save costs.

The Council cannot borrow money like an individual, but has to pay for fuel. At this time of the year, interest has to be paid on bonded indebtedness, and there is no money coming in for liquor licenses. The users of light and water must pay or have the supply cut off.

NO. 11
McCURDY ICE CO.

A comment on the summary for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1911, of revenues and expenses of steam roads over 50 miles long; taken from bulletin No. 20, Bureau of Railway Economics, Wash, D. C.

The total operating revenues of the railways of the United States for the last fiscal year averaged $32.87 per mile per day. This is the average amount received for each mile of line for each day for carrying freight, passengers, mails, and expenses. These total operating revenues are 19 cents per mile per day less than for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1910. This is equivalent to an aggregate decrease for all the railways for the entire year of nearly $17,000,000.

The total operating expenses averaged $22.58 per mile per day. This is the average amount paid for each mile for each day for salaries, wages, fuel and other supplies, expenses of maintaing tracks, stations and bridges, and of maintaing and operating cars and locomotives. From the reports of ninety-five per cent. of the railway mileage, which excludes railways under fifty miles long, it appears that operating expenses for the year ending June 30, 1911 are the highest on record. They are 65 cents per mile per day higher han for the previous fiscal year, and this makes an aggregate increase of over $56,000,000 for all the railways for the entire year. This is notwithstanding the rigid economaes in operation, retrenchment in labor force, and the cutting down in maintenance expenses.

The net operating revenue, which is the total operating revenues less operating expenses, averaged $10.29 per mile per day. Taxes increased and revenues from outside cars, etc., fell off so that operations, such as boat and ferry lines, dinning cars, etc., fell off so that operating income—which is not operating revenue with revenue from outside operations added and taxes deducted—was 87 cents per mile per day less than for the previous fiscal year. This amounts to a total decrease in operating income of over $75,000,000, or over one-fourth of the total amount of net dividend paid by the railways for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1910.

WHAT IS YOUR FAMILY WORTH?

If your family is worth the best you can afford in house and food and clothes, is it not worth the best reading as well? And the best reading—best for boys and girls, best for men and women—is to be found in The Youth's Companion.

Of stories alone The Companion will print nearly 300 in 1912. With all the rest of the paper thrown in, and counting the glorious long serial stories, they cost the subscriber less than a cent apiece. Moreover, you will look long before you will find stories so varied and interesting—stories of coolness in the face of peril, strange adventures with creatures of the forest and the sea, moving stories of life's obscure heroisms, stories breezy with good-natured humor, quaint and curious character cketches.

Now is the time to subscribe, for you will receive free from the time your $1.75 is received all the issues for the remaining weeks of 1911, containing the opening chapters of Ralph D. Paine's great serial story of the Boxer rebellion, "The Cross and the Dragon." And there is the gift of The Companion Calendar for 1912, "On the New England Coast," lithographed in ten colors and gold. Only $1.75 now for the 52 weekly issues, but on January 1, 1912, the subscription price will be advanced to $2.00.

"PUSSY-FOOT" JOHNSON

That during his trm of office "Pussyfoot" Johnson, who closed many saloons in Northern Minnesota and who was about to close all of them in Bemidji when stopped by injunction proceedings, arrested more than 6,000 persons and caused the conviction of 3,300 is the assertion of the American Advance, published in Chicago.

Continuing, the Advance says:

"Johnson has destroyed more than half a million bottles of liquor. In Minnesota alone, he closed up more than 400 saloons, covering the greater part of the northern half of the state. He operated under an old Indian treaty. He came near losing his official head at the hands of enraged liquor politicians for this work. "Take your old job, I don't want it anyhow," Johnson would say, and then shut up another batch of saloon, grinning all the time.

Saved Life of Deputy.

In a remarkable degree Johnson has secured the complete devotion of his deputies. He is always ready to fly to their rescue when they are in trouble and will fight for them to the last ditch, regardless of its results upon himself. It was the furious fight that Pussyfoot made to save the life of Juan Cruz, one of his Pueblo Indian deputies, who was accused of murder, and whom the Indian Office politicians wanted hanged, that led to Johnson's official downfall.

"This devotion of frontiersmen and Indians to the unique, athletic Yankee is well evidenced by the following letter, which was sent to him by the Indian Council at Santa Clara, N. M., as soon as they heard of the Chief's resignation:

Offers to Entertain Him.

Espanola, N. M., Sept. 19, 1911.

Mr. W. E. Johnson,
Chief Special Officer, U. S. I. S., Denver, Colo.

Dear Sir:—The Pueblo of Santa Clara, mindful of its regeneration through your efforts most cordially invites you to be its guest for as long a time as you will enjoy it. Horses, saddles, guns, guides and tents with the best rations at our command will be provided you as long as you can make any use of them. We hope you will come to us and go to the mountains for a much-needed rest. All we have is yours, now and always. This is but small pay for the manhood you have restored to this village by stopping the liquor traffic here. We know you helped us at the price of your position. No other man in the Indian Service would have risked his head by staying with us and saving the life of Juan Cruz. You may go down in apparent defeat before the whisky ring in Washington, but in the hearts of a quarter of a million American Indians you are a hero. There is probably not one of this great number but what has come under the influence of your work.

Come and be a good Indian with us.

Very sincerely,
The Council of Santa Clara,
By Victoriano Sisneros, acting governor."

May Write for Magazine.

That Johnson will go from the government service back into his specialty as a prohibition writer, on the government Indian bureau in magazine articles, is the prediction made by W. G. Calderwood, chairman of the Minnesota prohibition committee. Calderwood is an old friend of Johnson and has been in correspondence with him for years. He received a copy of Johnson's statement explaining why he resigned from the government service.

"I understand," said Calderwood, "that Johnson is going to write some magazine articles, exposing the influence of the liquor interests in the Indian bureau. I also hear that he will estabilsh a law enforcement bureau or detective agency devoted to getting evidence of liquor law violations."—Bemidji Pioneer.

TO AILING WOMEN.

A Little Sound Advice Will Help Many Sufferers In Thief River Falls.

No woman can be healthy and well if the kidneys are sick. Poisons that pass off in the secretions when the kidneys are well, are retained in the body when the kidneys are sick. Kidneys and bladder become inflamed and swollen and worse troubles quickly follow. This is often the true cause of bearing down pains, lameness, back ache, etc. Uric poisoning also cause headaches, dizzy spells, languor, nervousness and rheumatic pain.

When suffering so try Doan's Kidney Pills, a remedy that has cured thousands of such cases. You will get better as the kidneys get better, and health will return when the kidneys are well. Let a Thief River Falls woman tell you about Doan's Kidney Pills.

Mrs. J. O. Christopherson, 414 St. Paul Ave., Thief River Falls, Minn., says: "I have used Doan's Kidney Pills with excellent results and they have also been taken with benefit by other members of our family. We keep Doan's Kidney Pills in the house all the time and do not think we could get along without them."

CONFIDENCE.

We Back Up Our Statements With Our Personal Reputation and Money.

We are so positive that we can relieve constipation, no matter how chronic it may be, that we offer to furnish the medicine free of all cost if we fail.

We think that it is worse than useless to attempt to cure constipation with cathartic drugs. Cathartics may do much harm. They may cause a reaction, irritate and weaken the bowels, and make constipation more chronic.

Constipation is often accompanied and may be caused by weakness of the nerves and muscles of the large intestine or colon. To expect a cure you must therefore tone up and strengthen those parts and restore them to healthier activity.

The discovery of the active principle of our remedy involved the labor of skilful research chemists. This remedy produces results such as are expected from the best of the best-known intestinal tonics, and it is particularly prompt in its results.

We want you to try Rexall Orderlies on our guarantee. They are exceedingly pleasant to take and are ideal for children. They apparently act directly on the nerves and muscles of the bowels, having, it would seem, a neutral action on other organs or glands. They do not purge or cause inconvenience. If they do not positively cure chronic or habitual constipation and thus relieve the myriads of associate or dependent chronic ailments, your money will be refunded. Try Rexall Orderlies at our risk Three sizes of packages, 10c., 25c., and 50c. Remember, you can obtain Rexall Remedies in this community only at our store—The Rexall Store

Official Paper of The City.

FRIDAY,. OCT. 20, 1911.

The proverbial (candidate before election) has again been noticed by the voter.

Few of us would ever enter into the realm of "new things" if we could foresee the troubles they would bring us.

Did you ever notice how much more inviting it was to look after the other fellows business than it was to look after your own.

The speech of Congressman Berger proved that socialism must certainly have some merit by the fact that a poor speaker could hold the close attention of his audience.

The man who tries often gets less for his efforts than the fellow who merely waits for something to turn up but that is no reason he is not the better man.

Socialism according to Victor Berger is the son and heir of Captilalism. It seems to us that that is the worst endorsement that the new idea has received for a long time.

War in Europe, after several years of continued discourses on Peace Tribunals, sounds like a mockery. No! Peace Tribunals are a mockery so long as men are allowed to rule for the love of power and not for the benefit of those governed.

There is certainly no necessity of the less favored young people in this vicinity going without the benefits to be derived from first-class educational training, when they are offered such excellent opportunities for self advancement in the Short Course to begin at the Lincoln High School building, October 30th. Parents of prospective students, and the public generally, ought to interest themselves in seeing that as many young people as possible take advantage of this generous offer.

SHALL MINNESOTA TAMELY SUBMIT, OR FIGHT AND BE FREE?

Editorial from The Duluth Herald, Sept. 26, 1911: Those who travel upon railroad trains in Iowa and Wisconsin ride for 2 cents a mile, and those who travel in North Dakota ride for 2½ cents.

But those who would ride on trains in Minnesota must pay 3 cents, unless they are rich enough to buy milage books, when they can travel as cheaply as they can in these neighboring states.

Meanwhile, railroad property in Minnesota is taxed less than any other property, and what it escapes from paying because of the miserably low railroad tax rate the plain people of Minnesota must pay in addition to their own dues to the state.

And unless action is taken at an extra session of the legislature to increase railroad taxation so that the people may vote on it next year, millions of dollars in taxes due will be lost forever.

How may Minnesota be made free from this intolerable situation?

Not, certainly, by sitting idle and chatting loosely of travel matters. Not certainly, by pretending that all is sweetness and light, and that there is no such thing as trouble.

Not, certainly, by letting the railroads believe, as they must believe now, that they can do anything they please to the people of Minnesota without the slightest fear that anything will be done about it.

There can be no relief from this shameful humiliation in sitting down and bemoaning it. If there is to be relief there must be ACTION; prompt aggressive and purposeful action.

The 3-cent passenger fare of Minnesota is wrong. The 2-cent passenger fare of Iowa and Wisconsin is right.

If the supreme court holds, as Sanborn held, that the 3-cent rate is necessary to enable the railroads to pay 7 per cent dividends on watered stock, still it is wrong.

If the supreme court holds, as Sanborl held, that Minnesota has no power to correct such injustices, still the 3-cent rate is wrong.

The railroads themselves have proved—proved twice, in fact—that the 3-cent rate, which they impose on Minnesota alone among Northwestern states, is wrong. When the 2-cent fare law was before the legislature they proved that because of cheap excursion rates and free passes, though the establishmed rate then was 3 cents a mile they got but 1⅞ cents per mile from their passenger receipts. So when the legislature abolished passes and made the flat rate 2 cents a mile, and the railroads abolished excursion rates, the rate was not reduced from 3 cents to 2 cents, but was actually increased from 1⅞ cents to 2 cents. And the railroads proved again that the 3-cent rate was wrong by voluntarily offering as a concession to head off freight reductions, to give terms that practically amounted to 2-cent fares.

The 3-cent passenger rate is wrong unjust and discriminatory, because all the people of the states surrounding Minnesota ride cheaper, and the railroads have not molested the laws of those states which brought about the lower rate.

The 4 per cent gross earning tax is wrong, because it taxes railroad property much less than any other property is taxed, thus compelling the owners of that other property to pay the taxes which the railroads escape. It is wrong because if railroad property were assessed and taxed as other property is assessed and taxed, their taxes would amount to 7 or 8 per cent on their gross earnings instead of the present 4 per cent.

Both the 3-cent fare and the 4 per cent tax are wrong, but neither is so deadly wrong as it is to suffer this situation to continue, giving the railroads the right to think that they can do as they will with this state, and giving the people of other states the right to think that this is a state shackled and gagged, in which railroads with impunity can charge what rates they please and shirk half their just burden of taxation, which those who are far less able must pay for them.

There can be no relief and nothing but continued shame and disbrace in inaction.

The governor should call the legislature in special session next Jan., and he should call upon it to enact a just measure taxing the railroads as they should be taxed. Let the legislature determine then whether the tax rate should be raised to 5 per cent, 6 per cent or 7 per cent, or whether the state shall follow the example of Wisconsin by discarding the gross earnings system and taxing railroad property according to its value, just as your property, Mr. Taxpayer, is taxed.

Perhaps, by that time, something will be heard from the railroads. Certainly nothing will be heard from them while the state lies idle and appears willing to lick the hand that smites it. Certainly nothing will be heard from the railroads so long as the state fails to resent the present condition.

But if the state takes action to redeem itself from the humilation that covers it now, perhaps something will be heard from the railroads. Perhaps they will come in, as they did when the rate laws were pending in 1907, and offer compromise. Perhaps they will agree to restore the 2-cent rate if the taxes are left as they are. That is by no means improbable, and nothing is more certain than that the railroads will offer no compromise so long as the state seems to like being imposed upon.

If the state then wants to make such a bargain, it can. Frankly, we shouldn't care to see it. It would be better by far to tax railroad property as it should be taxed—no more and no less than other property—and then fight to the last ditch for the right of the state to protect its people against extortionate rates. But if the legislature wanted to make that bargain, it could.

Certainly there will be no bargain to make, and no offers of compromise to consider, so long as the state sits idle and lets the railroads trample arrogantly upon the rights of the state and of its people to have fair rates and full taxation.

More important matters than these, vitally important though they be, are involved. The honor, the freedom and the independence of the state are at stake.

Shall Minnesota tamely submit, or fight and be free?

COMMISSION GERM IS TAKING ROOT IN THE NORTH.

Superior And Eveleth Are Considering Advisability Of The New Plan.

That through the elimination of many evils of the ward system, the commission form of government for cities is bound to prove the best form for any municipality where the geater part of the citizenship takes an interest in the conduct of its affairs, and that it is working successfully in Eau Claire were among the contentions of Mayor J. B. Fleming, of the latter city, in an address before the Six O'Clock club at Hotel Superior last night.

The visiting municipal executive was the guest of honor at a dinner arranged by the club, to which a number of prominent citizens had been invited, one by each member. J. S. Konkel, who claims the credit of being the original supporter of the plan for this city was among those present. Others were numerous business and professional men identified with the activities of Superior.

Mr. Fleming's talk, which he desired to be understood as a talk rather than a public address, took on the form somewhat of a history of the spread of the movement for commission government in cities, although he devoted much of his time to relating how it started, was worked out and is being continued in his home city.

There are now 3,000,000 people governed in this manner in cities, including many large cities, such as Spokane, Omaha, Memphis and Lynn, the latter in Massachusetts, according to the speaker. He said that there are 129 cities in the entire country using it, and of this number only 37 are east of the Mississippi. The west and south, he said, are far ahead of the north and east in its adoption Kansas, Oklahoma and Texas having about half of the total number.

"The elimination of the ward and party lines brings about a better feeling as well as better protection of the interests of the people in that it draws their attention more than the old plan," said Mayor Fleming, "and it has been our experience that the Wisconsin law as amended by the last legislature is both simple and effective."

He especially praised the initiative, referendum and recall features of the law, which were added, saying that these secured more respect for the law on all sides.

"Since the commission form of government was adopted," said Mayor Fleming, "we have had no trouble with the saloonists in the enforcing of the midnight and Sunday closing laws, and apparently they like it better under the new way For the first time in the history of the city a request for a liquor license has been refused under the commission form of government. The immoral houses have all closed without any direct action on our part."

Mayor Fleming said in conclusion that practically all the street repair work is being done by the city and that as yet no contract for paving has been let, as none have come up. The city owns its rockcrusher and found that it was getting more work with less expense since the change. The streets took $4,000 less than estimated for the past year. Mayor Fleming was a bank cashier before taking office. One of the councilmen was an abstractor and the other a laundryman. All give their entire time to the city from 8 a. m., to 6 p. m.—Duluth News Tribune.

Eveleth, Minn., Oct. 16—(Special to The Herald.)—There is a growing sentiment here favoring the commission form of government and it is expected that the charter commission will be asked to look into the matter and consider the advisability of submitting the matter to the people for approval or rejection.

It is planned to have speakers well versed on municipal affairs visit this city and deliver addresses on the new form of city government. The addresses as now planned will be given at the high school and many leading Des Moines, Iowa, advocates of the commission form of government will likely be invited to this city to deliver addresses.—Duluth Herald.

WHAT THE CANDIDATES SAY.

vocation might injure his business. In this respect I wish to say, that if elected, I shall want the ordinances of the city enforced and that a fair and square deal will be accorded all, with special favors to none.

We all take pride in our city; we like to see beautiful homes; we want to make our city so attractive that people who come here to make their money will also make their homes here. Our city revenues are large and the disbursements large. I believe in a business administration who will give their best thoughts and efforts to the advancement of our city, and if our revenues are expended prudently in a judicious manner we may look forward to a reduction of taxes and still accomplish beneficial results."

destructive of industrial prosperity. It is worse than idle to leave the question of whether great business enterprises are legal or not, merely to judicial determination. Industrial corporations should be by affirmative legislative enactment, given definite rules of conduct by which business shall be made safe and stable while at the same time, the interest of the public should be fully safeguarded. We seek constructive legislation, not destructive litigation.

Favor Direct Primaries.

"We favor the ascertainment of the choice of Republican voters as to candidates for president by a direct primary vote, held in each state pursuant to the statute, and where no such statute exists, we urge that the Republican state committees provide that the people be given the right to express their choice for president.

"Robert Marion La Follette of Wisconsin years ago found conditions in his state not unlike those of the nation today. Under his leadership, all opposition was overcome and there has been enacted in Wisconsin a system of laws that stand as models for legislation in lal states of the union. Laws have been passed in that state adequately regulating all public service corporations, equalizing the burdens of taxation; providing for direct nominations by the people; protecting legitimate business and capital honestly invested; promoting the welfare of labor—inshort, real progressive government has been restored.

La Follette Logical Candidate.

"The record of Senator La Follette in state and nation makes him a logical candidate for president of the United States. His experience, his character, his courage, his record of constructive legislation and administrative ability meet the requirements for leadership such as present conditions demand.

"This conference endorses him as a candidate for the Republican nomination for president, and urges that in all states organizations be formed to promote his nomination."

The resolutions were drafted by E. P. Costigan, Colorado; G. E. Merryan Chicago; James R. Garfield, Ohio; Amos Pinchot, New York, and J. E. Little, North Carolina.

SOCIALIST LECTURE.

competition. It is a question as to who is to live and who is to starve. It is often a question as to whether a man is to stay with his family or to become a tramp.

And the tariff has nothing to do with that question either.

There is always free trade in labor.

In many cases now, the laborer is compelled to disrupt his family and send his wife and children to the shop or factory.

For this is the greatest curse of machinery—or, rather, of the individual monopoly of machinery—that capital can be coined out of women and even out of infancy. Thus, not alone are men turned into wares, governed by demand and supply, but they are also made to scramble for a precarious living with the wives, sisters and children.

In the cotton factories of the South where my demoratic free trade friends come from, the women and children compose two-thirds of the working force. Very similar are the conditions in our large cigar and tobacco factories and in the work-shop of many other industries.

Laws against this sort of thing are useless as long as the present economic system prevails.

For while it is not notorious that the wages thus earned by a whole family do not on an average exceed those of the head of the family in occupations where it has not become habitual to employ women and children, the abuse is still daily gaining ground.

Now, another important consideration:

Since the working people do not receive the full value of their product—because a considerable profit is made by the employing class on everything the workers produce—how can they be expected to buy back these products? Their numerical strength makes them the chief consumers of the country and these on whom production mainly depends.

In this way, by the laboring people not being able to consume enough, and by the planless way in which production is carried on in general, the so-called over production is created.

Of course, no matter how much or how little the toiler of a nation create they always create more than they are able to buy with their wages, because they have never received the full value of that production.

In this way the so-called industrial crises originate. They have come upon us about once in every twenty years, roughly speaking, since capitalist production began its sway . At such times the trade and the manufacturing of a nation come to a standstill, because "there is too much on hand."

And the working people have to stop work and go ragged and hungry because there is too much on hand.

Statesmen, newspapers, lawyers and so-called reformers, on such occasions claim that there is either too much speculation, or too much silver, or too little silver, or lack of confidence, or what not, that is the cause of the industrial crisis, or "panic", as it is sometimes called.

However, the workingmen are not the only sufferers under the present system. The ruthless competition among the employers themeslves continously eliminates the weaker capitalists. The small employer, with his little shop, and small machinery—the small store, with its little selections—cannot compete with the big shops and the big stores. Thus, the big fish eat the smaller ones until only the biggest ones remain, and they form a combination or a trust.

Our middle class is rapidly disappearing in the mill of competition. Our social system more and more resembles a ladder with the middle rungs torn out.

The small shopkeeper, the small tradesman disappears, because an agent, a boarding-house keeper of some sort—or is pushed down into the ranks of the proletariat, the working class.

But this is what the Socialist say:

The machinery and all the progress in implements of production we cannot and do not want to destroy. Civilization does not want to go back to the Middle Ages or be reduced to barbarism.

And as long as these implements of production—land, machinery, raw materials, railroads and telegraphs—remain private property, only comparatively few can be the sole owner and masters thereof. As long as such is the case these few will naturally use this private ownership for their own private advantages.

The highest industrial order which competitive individuals has given us, and can give us, is that of capitalist and wage earner.

A capitalist and wage earner order or society inevitably ends in the economic rule of a comparratively few absolute masters over a numerous socially subject class.

The wage system was a step in the evolution of freedom, but only a step. Without trades unionism and labor associations, the wage system would produce a social state lower than that of feudalism.

There can be no social freedom nor complete justice, until there are no more hirelings in the world; until all become the employers and the employed of society.

GERMANTOWN

* * * * * * * * * *

A sad occurence happened at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jay Payne in losing their little baby about three weeks old. The little one was laid at rest in the German Lutheran Cemetery, Rev. Smith from Thief River Falls officiating.

An accident by which one life was lost, happened last Saturday evening, about 2 miles south of Germantown. A party from Carmel came from T. R. Falls, and in the dark drove into a broken culvert. One man was given such a jar that he fell out of the wagon breaking his neck. Almost instant death followed as a result.

We hope this will give some of our road overseers a good lesson, as they have been rather careless about the condition of the roads under their charge.

Frida Ristau and Elsie Bundhund left this week for Thief River Falls to attend the German Lutheran school there.

Linda Bettin returned last week from N. Dakota.

A big prairie fire swept through the country north of here, taking the big barn of L. Loram along. No other damage was done.

SCHOOL NOTES.

* * * * * * * * * *

The average annual gain in enrollment in the local schools since the year 1905 has been 72 pupils. This required the addition of two teachers each year. If this increase obtains in the future—and there is no reason to believe it will not—the next four years will demand the erection of a building to accomodate eight rooms, all filled with pupils. Today many rooms are badly crowded and the average number of children per teacher is greater in this city than in any other town in the northwestern part of the state.

Correspondence with the state high school board reveals the information that only one normal training department can be maintained in the local high school. Two such departments could have been filled last month. The local department enrolled more normal training students last year than any of the other 55 normals in the state. The course of events is compelling the conclusion that nothing less than a sixth state normal school at this point will care for the professional needs of education in northwestern Minnesota. The time has long since passed when this great northern empire can wear the educational clothes of central and southern Minnesota. This section needs something new and big enough to fit.

Rev. C. E. Boyden delivered an interesting address last week to the high school students. He discussed the need of out of door exercise and also explained the meaning of the boy scout movement. Other lectures by local people will be delivered during the school year.

The high school students have a ten minute period of strenuous exercise every forenoon. A systematic course of athletic work along similar lines is carried out in the grades.

The Aga children, who live a couple of miles southeast of town, drive to school every morning. On arriving at the Washington, they turn their horse around, tie the reins to the buggy seat and this obedient equine finds his way home alone. SCHOOL NOTES did not inquire whether this intelligent aniaml returned of his own accord at four for his little friends, but is certain that his morning performance is of sufficient interest to have it recorded in school history.

Modified spelling as exemplified in the last appearance of SCHOOL NOTES surely failed to recognize the suggestions of wise, old Noah Webster. It is said that the evil one has something to do with the activities of life, but in this instance several local "devils" must have become unusually busy.

The requirements of the high schools are now of such a character that "making up" work is almost an impossibility. Parents and students must learn that regular attendance is absolutely necessary if the child expects to secure satisfactory standings in the school. No guarantee can be given anyone that he will "pass" if he starts the year late or if he does not attend regularly.

There are more students now enrolled in the high school than attended all of last year.

BIDS WILL BE OPENED TONIGHT

Bids on the construction of a brick building to house the auxiliary electric light plant apparatus will be opened tonight. Work will begin right away as the building is to be finished within forty days, according to contracts. Bids for the installation of oil engines, generators, etc., will be opened Saturday afternoon, October the 28th. As soon as this contract is let work in all the departments will be pushed to the limit. The city, the building contractor and the apparatus men will then all be working, so that the plant can be completely finished in as short a time as possible.

HAS GONE HOME.

Mrs. Robert Burt of Peoria, Ill., who was examined by local physicians last Friday, after a complaint of insanity had been filed, was found to be mentally sane and permitted to buy her ticket and leave for her home in Illinois. Mrs. Burt wanted one of the local authorities to help her thru the boundry line so that she could visit her mother in Canada. She is perfectly sane but of a nervous and rather touchy disposition, so it was thot advisable, in view of the former experience, that the best thing to do was to ask her to go home.

Stickney Gasoline Engines
ARE THE BEST
No. 5

Get Your Money's Worth

The service an engine will give you depends not only on its design and quality of its material and workmanship but upon the size of its bearings, the length of its piston, the thickness of its thinnest casting, the size of its balance wheels and the strength of its various parts. Upon the size and strength of these parts depend the service you will get from the engine and it also determines the total weight of the engine. In determining the value of two engines compare their weight the same as you do when you sell your hogs, pork is worth so much per pound.

Come in and inspect my sample Stickney Engine and show me one place where any weight can be cut out without injuring the service the engine will give and then I will show you it has no surplus weight, no big useless unnecessary base—and then figure the price per pound. I will give your money's worth.

County Horse Breeders' Associations

By D. O. THOMPSON,
Animal Husbandry Department, Purdue University Experiment Station

I.

A SCORE of years is a short time in the horse improvement business within a state. Marked improvement can be made within that time, however, by concerted action on the part of all farmers. The prospects for a continued period of remunerative horse prices are good. Animals bred to a specific purpose are always in demand. The "misfits" are slow sellers at discounted prices. Water cannot rise higher than its source. The same is true of blood—a three-quarters blood stallion cannot get foals of greater purity of blood than himself. New Jersey owns twelve pure bred stallions, which she loans to county horse breeders' associations. In a small state this method of horse improvement may prove very valuable. A look at the methods of improvement of the horse breeding industry is suggestive in many ways. Some states have active county breeders' associations; others have and enforce a stringent stallion license law; others subsidize stallions of especial merit, and nearly all are making a concerted effort to improve the horses produced within their borders. While in some states a systematic effort at horse improvement is being made, in others there is no state wide movement for advancing the horse breeding industry.

TON GELDINGS.—The highest priced flesh the farmer can produce for the market. Community breeding would enable farmers to produce this type of draft geldings in carload lots.

Community Effort.

Community effort will prove one efficient means of bringing about this much desired improvement in the horse. Farmers within a county or several townships banding themselves together in an association for the advancement of the horse breeding industry will find that the association will serve to concentrate attention along certain definite lines and will establish a high standard for the members to work toward. It will keep the members in touch with all that pertains to the horse breeding business, through meetings, distribution of literature, etc., and will promote co-operation among them to protect members from fraud, contagious diseases and enable them to secure the profits which may accrue by selling in carload lots horses uniform in quality, type and soundness due to the establishment of a distinct type of horse within the district in the jurisdiction of the association. The association will strive toward improvement by encouraging the use of prepotent, sound, individually good, pure bred stallions in preference to impotent, unsound stallions of grade, cross bred and mongrel or scrub breeding. It will also encourage the use for breeding purposes of sound, typy, high quality mares of pure or high grade breeding and discourage the use of the undersized, unsound, "misfit" mares.

One hundred brood mares like this in a county would give it a national reputation as a horse breeding center.

Method of Organization.

The following method of organization is suggested for any county or community contemplating organizing their horse interests into a breeders' association.

Let some leading horseman or farmer call a meeting of all interested farmers to consider the proposition and secure some capable speaker familiar with organizations of this kind and with the horse breeding business to present to the meeting the advantages of such organization. Adopt a constitution and bylaws and elect necessary officers. Meet quarterly thereafter and have a recognized authority on horses address each meeting. Assign topics for members to discuss at these meetings. Secure and distribute among members literature on care, management and principles of horse breeding.

Notes About the Horse.

The breeders' association should not be formed under direction of a promoter who wishes to unload a stallion at a fancy price upon a community. Farmers within a community should organize on their own initiative.

The Hamilton County (Ind.) Horse Breeders' association has made marked advance during the period of its existence, and the secretary reports increasing interest.

Data collected in several states show that side bones on the fore feet are by far the most prevalent unsoundness in draft horses. This is thought to be due largely to the great weight of the forequarters.

This strong, sound conformation is largely hereditary. Foals from stallions and mares with feet and legs like this rarely develop unsoundnesses.

Wisconsin has many communities where the farmers produce and sell high class grade dairy cattle of uniform breeding and type in carload lots at an advanced price over that received by farmers selling equally good cattle, a few in a lot. This can be done with horses anywhere through community effort.

Special Correspondence from The Department Of Publicity Of the "Governors' Special"
Boise, Idaho.
P. H. DOYLE.

Boise, Idaho, October 20.—Unparalleled enthusiasm marks the preparations for the forthcoming tour of the east by the "Governors' Special," the train that is shortly to tour thru all of the principal cities of the east, for the purpose of returning the many visits that have been made in the last few years, to various sections of the west, by eastern commercial organizations.

The movement which is being participated in by the states of Minnesota, North and South Dakota, Montana, Idaho, Washington, Oregon and California, is being endorsed by every man prominent in the movement for the greater development of the west. During the past week, no less a personage than President Taft endorsed the project, as one that will bring the eastern and western portions of the country into closer proximity, and will assist materially in the future development of the vast western empire. Incidentally, the president issued a formal invitation to the western governors and their party, who will make the trip on the special, to visit him at the White House. This act of the nation's chief magistrate is without precedent and testifies eloquently as to the worth of the movement.

President Louis W. Hill, of the Great Northern Railway, whose road will furnish the special train, has also publicly endorsed the project and at a banquet tendered to him and James J. Hill, by the Spokane chamber of commerce on October 6, he took occasion to characterize the tour as, "a greater ad for the west than any land show ever held."

The state of California and the Panama-Pacific exposition company have entered enthusiastically into the undertaking, and last week the latter company pledged the sum of $5,000 as its share of the expense of the trip.

Many of the western chief executives have already signified their intentions of making the tour, and the rest are expected to make public their intentions soon. Among those who already accepted the invitations are Governors Hawley of Idaho; Hay of Washington and West of Oregon.

On the trip, the opportunity will be presented of displaying the exhibits of the resources of the west, and for this purpose four or five cars will be fitted as exhibition cars. The state of Minnesota and California and the exposition company will have one car each, the exposition company and the state of California dividing their car. Idaho and Oregon will have a half car each and the other states participating will have the same.

The various exhibition cars will be spotted at points in the respective states sometime during the latter part of this month, at which time the various exhibits will be installed. Then all of the cars will proceed to St. Paul, so as to leave there on December 1st, for the east. The tour will end before the close of the St. Paul land show, for it is planned to return to St. Paul and enter the exhibits in that show.

COMMUNITIES OF WEST EXHIBIT AT LAND SHOW.

Announcement is made from St. Paul that the fololwing sections and communities of the American Northwest will have special exhibits at the land show to be given in St. Paul in December under the auspices of the Northwest Development League:

Yellowstone Valley, Bitter Root Valley, Lakes Region of North Dakota, Galletin Valley, Northern Minnesota, Helena, Mont., Great Falls, Mont., Southern Idaho, Spokane, Valley, Northern Idaho, Central Oregon, Flat Head District, Red River Valley, Judith Basin, Wenatchee District, James River Valley, The Musselshell District Western Montana, Sun River District. The DesChutes and Crooked River Valleys. The Black Hills District of South Dakota

In addition to these the northwest will be represented by extensive exhibits to be made by the Great Northern, Northern Pacific, the Northwestern Lines and the Duluth & Iron range Railroads.

Preparation of these exhibits has been under way for months while it has required almost a year for the commissioners to collect the Alaska exhibit.

These special exhibits will supplement the displays to be made officially by each of the seven states and will greatly assist in the realizatoin of the managers to "bring the the American Northwest to the prospective home seekers and settlers of the middle west."

While there have been half a dozen so called land show enterprises in the field, all claiming for their object the exploitation of the west and northwest, the communities of the northwest have stood almost solidly behind the show to be held in St. Paul because it is really their own show. Different from any other land show the commercial clubs and transportation companies of the northwest have planned and on which no private interest stand any chance of making a cent. The large amount of space in the show has been sold at such a small expense that the management is in a position to spend $10,000 advertising the enterprise to get people to attend and see the exhibits.

What's In a Name?

A Good Deal Sometimes

By E. L. THOMPSON

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

My maiden name was Alice Beatrice Cholmondelay. My father, having lost his estates in England when I was a baby, brought his family to the United States. When he reached here he had nothing left but an aristocratic name.

My father's fortune so far improved in America that by the time I became a young lady we were enabled to move in the best society. One evening at a social gathering I met a young Englishman who seemed from the first to take a desperate fancy to me, and I was equally pleased with him. Indeed, it was a case of love at first sight.

I didn't distinctly hear the young man's name, but I understood it to be Cummings. He had no sooner left me than the hostess, who introduced him, came to me and said:

"That young man is immensely wealthy. His grandfather made a fortune in fish, but his father has never been in trade, and this one of the third generation is desirous of marrying into an old British family. He cares nothing about money. It is the name he wants. I noticed that he appeared smitten with you, and if you like him I'm sure it will be the chance of your life. He has the money; you have the lineage."

I had given Mr. Cummings permission to call upon me, and he came the very next evening. What was my surprise to hear him say, "Good evening, Miss Chumley; you are looking very well tonight!"

"Miss Chumley!" I exclaimed, knitting my brows.

"Didn't I hear your name aright?" he asked, surprised.

"Certainly not. It is Cholmondelay."

"Oh! Beg pardon. We always call that name Chumley in England. Cholmondelay is very long, you know."

When he had gone I went to my father at once and asked if our name was called Chumley in England. He admitted that it was. He had never said anything about this pronunciation to me since he feared that it might lessen my reverence for the family name.

Mr. Cummings called often, and it was evident that his intentions were serious. He seemed anxious to do away with the impression he had made in calling me Miss Chumley. He had a fine sonorous bass voice and pronounced Cholmondelay beautifully, rolling the syllables on his tongue like rare old wine.

The first time I addressed him by his own name, or his name as I had heard it, I noticed that he started. I asked him if I had made a mistake, whereupon he colored, stammered and finally told me that I had pronounced it differently from the usual pronunciation, then turned the subject so quickly that I had no opportunity to pursue the subject further.

My admirer was suddenly called back to England by the serious illness of his mother and was obliged to leave his courtship unfinished or bring it to an abrupt termination. I shall not forget—women never forget such things—how he announced his departure, how I looked sadly down at the carpet and how, seizing my hand, he poured forth his tale of love. He did not become so familiar as to call me Beatrice. It was always Miss Cholmondelay, and every time he spoke it I seemed to hear one of the sweetest of the lower tones of a cello. After telling me of his love he went on with his plan of forming through me that aristocratic association which his wealth, supported by my lineage, would give him. "I shall owe everything to you," he said. "Every door in England will fly open to the name Cholmondelay."

The beloved name was a fitting climax to the offer. I threw myself into his arms, and we were betrothed.

He had been undecided about making his proposal then or returning across an ocean to do so; therefore he had put it off till the last minute. He was to sail at midnight and after a dozen kisses sprang away from me, entered a taxicab waiting for him at the door and drove to the steamer.

The first letter I received from him contained a postscript, "I spell my name as you pronounce it."

I thought that very singular, for I could think of but one pronunciation. However, I concluded it must be Comyngs or something like that, for English people are prone to spell the most ordinary names in the most singular way. I hoped it was Comyngs, for it sounded very aristocratic.

My lover returned three months later to take me to England as his bride. Our wedding cards were printed "Cummings and Cholmondelay." I asked about the spelling of his name, but he put me off. We were married and sailed away to begin a new life—at least for me. We were received by relatives and friends on the steps of my husband's palatial country seat, and the first person who addressed me by my married name said:

"Welcome, Mrs. Curmudgeon."

I fainted.

As soon as I was alone with my husband I began to reproach him with having deceived me. He said that when I made the mistake of calling him Cummings, considering the store I set upon a euphonious and aristocratic name, he simply could not set me right.

However, there is some solace in my being able to have my cards printed "Mrs. Cholmondelay Curmudgeon."

But they will call we Mrs. Chumley Curmudgeon in spite of all I can do.

The Summerless Year.

The year 1816 was called the "year without a summer." Spring came that year, but in its faintest form. Snow, cold rains and winds were incessant. It was the 1st of June before the frost left the ground. The farmers planted their crops, but the seed would hardly sprout, and when they came to the surface there was not heat enough to make the frail plants grow. It is recorded that during the month of June birds froze to death in the woods and fields. Small fruits, such as there were, rotted on the stem, there being no birds to eat them. But little corn matured. Only in sheltered spots were good sized roasting ears to be found. Frosts prevailed every month in the year and almost daily. The people after repeated hopes of a change for the better settled down almost in despair. The like of it was never known in the country before and, fortunately, has never been repeated.—New York American.

Tolstoy and the Bear.

When Count Tolstoy was a young man he took part in a bear hunt that nearly ended fatally. When the beast charged him Tolstoy fired and missed. He fired a second shot, which hit the bear's jaw and lodged between his teeth. Tolstoy was knocked down, falling with his face in the snow. "There," he thought; "all is over with me." He drew his head as far as possible between his shoulders, exposing chiefly his thick fur cap to the beast's mouth till she was able to tear with her upper teeth only the cheek under the left eye and with the lower teeth the skin of the left part of the forehead. At this moment the famous bear hunt leader, Ostashkof, ran up with a small switch in his hands and cried out his usual "Where are you getting to? Where are you getting to?" This, says Tolstoy, sent the bear scuttling off at her utmost speed.

The Real Old Article.

The stranger in Boston was interested in the old family names of that city. He bore a strong letter of introduction to a prominent townsman.

"I can give you from memory the names of all the old families of our city," the prominent townsman said, and he rattled off two or three dozens at an amazing rate.

The stranger looked up from his copy pad expectantly.

"Is that all?" he asked.

"I have given you a complete list of Boston's leading families," the prominent townsman replied. "Not one of them dates back less than six generations."

Married Women's Names.

In England and in the United States a woman loses her identity in marriage. In Belgium and Spain the husband adds the name of his wife to his own. In the United States women sometimes retain the family name, as Mrs. Harriet (Beecher) Stowe. In the Channel islands the woman never loses her maiden name. In Spain children write the names of both parents, as Llarena y [illegible] "Don Quixote" is the following: "Casajo was my father's name, and for being the wife of Sancho Panza I am called Teresa Panza, but by good right they ought to call me Teresa Casajo." In Scotland both names are preserved, and the woman is always known by her maiden name. In Wales it is the custom to describe the woman by her maiden name. The fact that a woman on becoming the wife of a man loses her identity is apparent in many portions of the Bible, when under the ancient custom man, on taking a wife, declared that she became "flesh of my flesh and blood of my blood," thereby establishing the old time saying that man and wife are one.—Richmond Times-Dispatch.

Tyranny of the Tip.

There have always been those who have revolted against the tyranny of the tip. So long ago as October, 1795, we find that ubiquitous personage, "Constant Reader," venting his grievances in the columns of the London Times. "If a man who has a horse puts up at an inn," he complains, "besides the usual bill he must at least give 1s. to the waiter, 6d. to the chambermaid, 6d. to the hostler and 6d. to the jackboot, making together 2s. 6d. At breakfast you must give at least 6d. between the waiter and hostler. If the traveler only puts up to have a refreshment, besides paying for his horses' standing he must give 3d. to the hostler; at dinner 6d. to the waiter and 3d. to the hostler; at tea 6d. between them; so that he gives away in the day 2s. 6d., which, added to the 2s. 6d. for the night, makes 5s. per day on an average to the servants." They did the thing pretty thoroughly in those days.

A Millionaire.

The term "millionaire" is of international use, but it does not mean the same thing in the mouths of different nations. To every one it means the possession of a million, but not necessarily a million dollars. In Great Britain a millionaire has a million pounds, or nearly $5,000,000, while in France they count francs, so that there a millionaire is a comparatively poor individual with but $200,000 to bless himself with. Millionaires are quite common in Prussia, but a million marks don't mean much these days, amounting to a trifle of $250,000 in our money. For millionaires of real class it is necessary to go back to old Babylon. The Babylonian millionaire had 1,000,000 talents and would not be regarded as a poor man even by a Wall street office boy. A talent was about $2,000, and a million of them would be $2,000,000,000.

A Triple Play.

It was at the end of the ninth inning. Yet, though the home team was two runs to the good, things looked black for them.

The visitors were at bat. There were no outs, and three men were on bases; also Terrible Terry Tomkins was up, and Terry's batting average reached the clouds.

Terry bunched his shoulders and waited confidently, and a groan went up from the bleachers.

The ball flew in three pieces, and the pieces flew in three directions. One was caught by the pitcher, one was pulled out of the air by the shortstop, and one landed in the first baseman's mitt. A triple play! The game was the home team's.

The bleachers went wild.—Philadelphia Times.

Breaking It Gently.

"I have called, sir, to see the photo of the lady with $25,000 who wants a husband."

"Can you keep your face straight?"

"Of course I can."

"Very well. We'll break you in first with the $5,000 applicants, and then gradually, as you grow stronger, we will work you up to the big prize. This way, please, and don't get frightened."—Exchange.

ONE OF WAR'S HEROES

A Story in Support of Peace

By F. A. MITCHEL

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

Dignity is a valuable quality, at least one that commands respect. It is impossible to think of great men in an undignified position. There are also lesser lights.

The young have their heroes, whom they look upon as something above themselves, whom they surround with an illuminated atmosphere.

Osmond Edwards was one of these. When the Spanish war broke out, on account of his prominence among his fellows, no one thought of his going to Cuba as a mere private. He set about raising a company which he was to command. The young men all wished to be members of Edwards' company, and it was soon filled up and made a part of a crack regiment. From the first, the captain acted on the principle that a leader must be unapproachable. He did not associate on equal terms with his men, even those who had been his intimate friends since boyhood. While other company officers were approached familiarly and addressed as captain or lieutenant, it was always Captain Edwards, the speaker standing at attention and saluting respectfully.

Furthermore, when the regiment entered upon its first engagement Edwards fulfilled what was expected of him. While some other officers blanched or gave way, he kept his men up to their work, and at a critical moment, when some of the field officers proved incompetent and others were disabled, he seized a flag, sprang to the front and saved the regiment from panic. A newspaper in the United States published a picture of him waving the flag over his head and shouting to the men to "come on." This fixed him as a hero in the minds of every young person who had ever known him.

During the fighting about Santiago Edwards, who commanded his regiment as lieutenant colonel, lost a leg. When a warrior goes out to fight the battles of his country and comes home on a stretcher he is at the summit of his career. A burst of admiration, of sympathy, greets him, after which those about him begin to think of other matters. The war in which one distinguishes himself recedes. After awhile when asked in what battle he was maimed and he names it he is asked during which of several preceding wars that battle occurred. If he lives long enough he belongs to a past period with which the new generation has little or no real sympathy.

Edwards on his return occupied the pinnacle of heroism. The young men spoke of him with envy; the girls lavished favors upon him. That dignity which had always been natural to him added to his glory. Several romantic girls who were infatuated with the idea of being a hero's wife were ready to marry him. He chose Gwendolin Emory, and she was very proud to be singled out from all the rest, with the expectation of being Mrs. Colonel Osmond Edwards.

But, as has been said, Edwards was at the top of the hill of fame. He could get no higher—at least in the profession of glory, for he was disabled. War has no use for men into whose carcasses she has bitten. They are to her like a joint that has been cut. The young colonel walked with his accustomed dignity, but he limped—in other words, he hobbled. Those who upon his return had looked upon him with admiration, which was really curiosity, now saw in him nothing but a hobbler. Those who revered him made no special demonstration of their reverence. It had become an old story. In short, the hero's heroism, so far as concentrating the gaze of his fellow beings was concerned, was fading away.

His fiancee noticed this, and it troubled her. She had engaged herself to him as a hero and was now beginning to realize that she was tied to a hobbler. One day she overheard a man say to another, referring to her fiance, "That hobbler wears a cork leg." "How did he lose his own?" "Don't know for certain. I've heard it got caught in a bear trap."

Miss Emory's heart sank within her. She began to see that the paths of glory that don't lead to the grave lead to misfortune.

But the real pang came later. She and her lover were in the country. Edwards was a canoeist and begged her to go out with him in his canoe. While he was paddling he attempted to change position. To change position in a canoe with a cork leg is dangerous. The canoe was upset. Miss Emory was a splendid swimmer and, knowing that her lover could also swim, paid no attention to him till she had caught hold of the canoe. Then on looking about for him she saw only his leg floating. He was unable to sink it, and it sank him.

Miss Emory swam for him, but was unable to right him. The shore was near, and, seizing him by his cork heel, she towed him to safety.

The spell that had been thrown around him as a hero was dissolved, and he was now nothing but one of war's victims. She departed from him and in a few months wrote him that she had been mistaken in thinking she loved him.

A year later she married an army contractor who had got rich furnishing rotten supplies to the American army in Cuba.

Why You Should Buy From The Store That Advertises

The readers of This paper will be pleased to know that the stores that advertise are the safest places to trade. In the first place they appreciate your business enough to ask for it. Then again they tell what they have to sell and for how much. You know when you leave home what you are going after, how much it will cost and above all, where you can get it.

It is there or not only to your advantage as a shopping convenience to buy from the stores that advertise, but advantageous to your purse as well.

Buy from the advertiser, you have every reason to do so you have not from the non advertiser.

THIEF RIVER FALLS, MINNESOTA, FRIDAY, OCTOBER 27, 1911

NO. 8

MINNESOTA HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

FROM A SOCIALIST

Giving An Outline of Some of the Things They Are Pledged To Do.

There will be no boodle, no extravagance and no wanton neglect of duties by officers elected upon the Public Ownership ticket, as our men are pledged bq our platform to honesty, economy and efficiency.

As the average professional man spends less than eight hours per day at actual work we think it unreasonable to expect more from the laboring man and have pledged ourselves to the establishing of an eight hour day on all municipal work. Many of the railroads and other large corporations are doing the same thing for they find upon close analysis that it is production of a higher grade of efficiency and is a paying proposition. If it is so for them why not for us?

Contending that the root of evil in the industrial and economic fields is not money as some seem to think but profits, and as bids for contracts are always made for the profit to be derived therefrom, we are pledging to work for the abolition of the contract system on all municipal work, and that all such work be done by labor hired by the city direct, not otherwise provided by state law.

Buying unequivocal advocates of Public Ownership of all public utilities and socialized industries we are pledged to extend municipal ownership of utilities and industries and as far as possible and especially to the establishing of municipal owned and operated coal and wood yard and ice house to furnish such necessaries of life to our citizens at cost. We believe in retaining and developing any and all industries and resources that are already municipally owned.

We propose to establish a free employment agency under the supervision of the Police Department for the benefit of the unemployed where they can receive aid in securing work without being fleeced of a share of their earnings. We believe the police the logical officer to have charge of this work.

We believe in the initiative, referendum and the recall of officers by their constituents in the city as well as in higher forms of government and to insure democracy in the city government, we advocate a new and modern charter securing these rights to the people.

Knowing that it is only the alluring profits made in the liquor traffic that can induce any man to engage in the saloon buisness or in the manufacture and wholesaling of intoxicants we believe that as long as it is possible to make profits at the business some men will be found who will carry on such business to a greater or less extent whether it be legal or illegal.

Therefore we contend that the distilleries, breweries, and places of distribution be publicly owned and operated at cost. However that is somewhat impractical to be carried out only in some isolated communities. As to the regulation of the liquor traffic under existing conditions we stand for a rigid and impartial enforcement of law.

We believe in sanitation, the best that modern methods can provide.

We believe in the "City Beautiful" and will strive to realize its ideal.

We realize the urgent need of better hospital accomodations in our city and are pledged to do our best to provide for this necessity.

All our candidates are pledged to the principles as laid down in our city platform and each one has signed his resignation from office and placed it in the hands of the Public Ownership Party of Thief River Falls so that at any time we find that they are not complying to the principles of our platform we can remove them from office. This is a feature of the Public Ownership Party's principles that is worthy of careful consideration.

In want of the recall of officers by law this is its best substitute yet

EVILS OF THE LONG BALLOT

Voters Not to Blame Because They Do Not Know All Candidates.

The dangerously-great power of politicians in our country is not due to any peculiar civic indifference of the people, but rests on the fact that we are living under a form of democracy that is so unworkable as to constitute in practice a false-democracy. Richard S. Childs, in an article written for The Short Ballot Organization, after showing that the long ballot leads to blind voting, and points out the fact that the voter is not to blame for not becoming thoroughly acquainted with any but the most conspicuous officers, continues:

Blind Voting Leads to Government by Politicians.

No one will deny if nine-tenths of the citizens ignored politics and did not vote at all on election day, the remaining tenth would govern. And when practically all vote in nine-tenths ignorance and and indifference about the same delegation of power occurs. The remaining fraction who do give enough time to the subject to cast an intelligent ballot, take control.

That fraction we call "politicians" in our unique American sense of the word. A "politician" is a political specialist. He is one who knows more about a voter's political business than the voter does. He knows that the coroner's term will expire in November, and contributes toward the discussion involved in nominating a successor, whereas the voter hardly knows a coroner is being elected.

The politicians come from all classes and ranks and the higher intelligence of the community contributes its full quota. Although they are only a fraction of the electorate they

LOSES SUIT AGAINST CITY

Dr. Vistaunet Could Not Legally Collect For Services Rendered.

A decision was handed down last Thursday by Judge Watts in the case of Dr. Vistaunet against the city of Thief River Falls. The case involved the claim of the doctor against the city for $204 for quarantining and disinfecting buildings during a scarlet fever and diptheria epidemic in this city in the early part of 1908.

The doctor had in three years previous and in the beginning of that year been appointed, by Mayor as health commissioner, and in that capacity he had been attending to quarantining and disinfecting as health officer, and the city had been paying for it, but the city council refused to pay the bills for services in this line after Jan. 1st, 1908, and suit was brought to recover for them.

The court decided that the services were performed and worth the amount claimed for them but that the law under which the mayor had assumed to appoint a health commissioner was repealed in 1901, and that as the city of Thief River Falls has never by ordinance provided for a board of health and no appointment has been made by the state board of health, the city has not at any time since 1901 had a board of health or health commissioner or any other health officer, and as Dr. Vistaunet was not a health officer when he performed the services sued for, he cannot recover anything for them.

This is a great hardship on the doctor as he performed the services in good faith, but the opinion of the city council to provide by ordinance for a board of health leaves him without any legal right to recover from the city.—Crookston Times.

WHAT THE CANDIDATES SAY

W. A. Booren for Mayor, and the Four Candidates for Municipal Judge are Interviewed.

FORDER.

Milton Forder, Independent, of Municipal Judge when interviewed Tuesday afternoon said:

"I am going to make a fight for the office and will do whatever I can that is fair and honorable to secure my election; but will not take to "hard" drink if Iam defeated. I believe that every public officer's record should be open to public scrutiny, but do not believe in dragging in personalities or family affairs.

"I have always taken an active interest in city affairs, and was for over three years president of the city council of Thief River Falls. I have been city attorney one full term; probate judge, city justice, and was city recorder for two years.

"I have all the law qualifications necessary for the municipal judgeship. Though I have no diploma as a lawyer, I can secure favorable recognition in conducting a case at law. I am willing to exchange qualifications with any of the candidates at a public meeting called for that purpose, and am perfectly willing to let the people be the judge, after listening to the arguments of the several candidates."

BISHOP:

municipal judge, at present occupying that office, when interviewed said he did not care to make a statement.

KJOMME.

H. O. Kjomme, Independent, for municipal judge, furnishes a signed statement as follows:

As a candidate for the office of Municipal Judge, I am glad to take advantage of the commendable offer of the Press to make a brief statement, in order to acquaint the voters with the fact of my candidacy. With similar statements from the other candidates, the voters will without doubt be assisted in making a choice, before they arrive at the polls.

Of course, I can outline no set policy, or law down any definite principles as to my action in case I am elected. We have the law, ordinances and statutes, and these must of course regulate and determine the course of a judge, of the Municipal Court as well as of the District Court.

I believe that the position of Municipal Judge is an important one to the community and probably affects more directly the public than does the office of District Judge. The Municipal Court is a court of record, only properly admitted attorneys can practice before it, and its jurisdiction, in both criminal and civil cases, is wide and extensive. Therefore I believe that the Municipal Judge should have certain qualifications, as to his knowledge of the law and his ability and willingness to apply and enforce the law intelligently.

Upon the question of qualification, and fitness, the voters are of course the sole judges and I gladly leave that question to them, to be taken up and finally decided on election day.

It is true that I am, comparatively speaking, a new man in the city, and it may appear presumptuous for me to be a candidate for a political office at this time. But the issue—and that applies to all—is not so much as to how long a candidate has resided in the city, or what he has been and done in the past. The question is more as to what he is, and can do. Furthermore, we all realize that much can yet be done, and much will yet be done, in and for this city, and I intend and expect, as a citizen, to do my share of it.

H. O. KJOMME.

TARRANT.

N. W. Tarrant, Independent, for municipal judge, in an interview Wednesday noon said:

"I am a candidate for the office of municipal judge. Having settled in Thief River Falls 19 years ago, I have watched the growth and been interested in the welfare of the city ever since.

"I was one of the first justices of the peace elected in the village, which office I held until the city established the municipal court. I was the first one elected to fill that office, and resigned when elected judge of probate, holding the latter office for six years.

"In the past 19 years I have made a close study of the law, and think the knowledge and experience I have gained will qualify me for the position. All I ask is the fair consideration of the voters. I am running on my old platform of Honesty and a Square Deal for all, and think my past record in that respect speaks for itself."

BOOREN.

W. A. Booren, Public Ownership, for mayor, when interviewed Thursday submitted a signed statement as follows:

To the voters of Thief River Falls:

I have been requested by many of my supporters to present a statement to you relative to the rumours circulated that I had withdrawn from the Mayoralty race in this city; also my policy and attitude toward the business interests and the public in general in case I am elected.

As this is my first appearance in the political arena, and never having an opportunity to meet the people of this city only in a general way, it is reasonable to think that I am a stranger to a great many of you, consequently I wish to present this history of myself for your consideration.

I was born at Menomonie, Wis., of Swedish parentage, my father arriving in the U. S. in the fifties served through the entire civil war and was honorably discharged at the close in 1865.

I commenced working in the sawmill at the age of twelve, attending school during the winter months, and am a graduate from the University of Hard Knocks. I arrived in Minneapolis in the spring of 1893 to seek my fortune. I was employed as Plumbers apprentice for two years; hired out in the Round House in 1895 and am employed as Locomotive Engineer for the same company with sixteen years continuous service at present. I have been located at Thief River Falls for six years, being the first railroad man to make this city his home, and own the property located at 703 Duluth Ave.

In regards to my ideas of good city government I must refer you to the Socialist platform which has been published in the several newspapers in this city and will be published again, and in formulating each plank in this platform it was our aim to not go to extremes and I will assure you that in case I am elected I will give all matters due consideration and be as cautious as possible to avoid any dissatisfaction from our citizens in general.

I wish to also state that I am running for Mayor of this city not withstanding all reports to the contrary and from present indications I will be there to the finish.

W. A. BOOREN.

ARPIN WITHDRAWS.

A. M. Arpin, Independent, candidate for mayor, withdrew his petition yesterday and will not be in the mayoralty race. On account of recent business developments, which will cause an increase in responsibility and work, Mr. Arpin decided that he would not be able to devote the necessary time to the office. When Mr. Arpin came out he received very gratifying encouragement, but he does not care to take the office and not be able to give the city's affairs proper attention.

So far as the "Press" could learn yesterday afternoon no new candidate had declared for mayor. Arpin's withdrawal leaves Backe and Booren in the mayor's race.

Bishop Comes Out.

J. M. MBishop, present holder of the municipal judge office, is out for re-election. This makes four candidates in the field for that office, and according to present indications all of them would like a majority of the votes on election day. Bishop, tho coming out what some would call a trifle late, did not have any difficulty in getting the required number of signers, and his petition is filed. There will be a merry race for the municipal judgeship and may the best man win.

Are You A Candidate for Alderman?

Next week the "Press" will interview the candidates for aldermen and give them an opportunity to introduce themselves to the people thru the columns of this paper. Of course, these gentlemen have had that privelege all the time, but they are evidntly too modest to come in of their own accord. There are probably at the present moment several men who do not even know who are running for aldermen in their own respective wards. Each alderman ought certainly to have something to say that will be of interest to the people in his ward. Don't wait for the "Press" to come to you, Mr. Alderman, come to the "Press" now and be interviewed.

H. H. DUNN FAVORS EXTRA SESSION

Favors Increase of Gross Earnings Tax on Railroads, and Fair Reapportionment Bill.

The Duluth Herald last Monday published an interview with H. H. Dunn, speaker of the house, in which he takes a strong stand in favor of an extra session, declares that only selfish interests are opposed to the movement and says it is up to Governor Eberhart to act. Following is a part of the interview:

"Do you really favor an extra session, and if so, for what purpose?" the reporter asked.

"I am most emphatically in favor of an extra session," the speaker answered, "and believe we should take up and pass the following measures:

(1) Increase the gross earnings tax on railroads from 4 per cent to 5 per cent.

"(2) A state-wide primary election law.

"(3) The Spooner waterway conservation bills.

"(4) The recall bill.

"(5) Extending local option to cities of the fourth class.

"(6) The R. C. Dunn bill, prohibiting county commissioners from issuing liquor licenses.

"(7) Ratifying the federal income tax constitutional amendment.

"(8) Fair reapportionment bill which will relieve the apparent unfortunate condition of affairs.

"(9) Some practical, constructive legislation relative to the public domain.

Passed by the House.

"I have always been a friend of these measures," said Speaker Dunn, "and supported them at the session last winter and voted for all these measures with the exception of the Immigration Bureau of Development Association Is Established.

At a meeting of the immigration commission of the Northern Minnesota Development Association held last Friday in the St. Paul Commercial club rooms, it was decided to rent quarters in Minneapolis for a permanent exhibit and immigration bureau, which will be in charge of W. R. Mackenzie of Bemidji, secretary of the association. $12,000 are to be raised at once for the first year's work.

It is proposed to raise funds by contributions from those interested in lands in the northern part of the state in proportion to their holdings. The members of the commission feel from assurances received that there will be no difficulty in procuring the necessary money, and propose to carry on an active advertising campaign calling attention to the northern half of this state and its advantages.

The state immigration board will give the committee its support.

Mr. Mackenzie was in Minneapolis last Saturday looking for a suitable location. He will rent a store building in the district near the railroad stations, with room to house a permanent exhibit of northern Minnesota products. This will serve as headquarters for the development association and its various activities, including the good roads committee.

One feature of the work to be done is a soil survey, which will show to prospective settlers at a glance the character of soil to be found in each county and district, and help to direct them in their search for farm homes. Members of the immigration commission were enthusiastic over the work and brought assurances of support from many quarters.

Miss Elsa Robbecke attended the bride and Edwin Myrland, a brother of the groom as best man while little John Stewart, dressed in white, carried the ring on a white silk pillow. The ceremony was performed before a bank of flowers and plants beautifully arranged and the bride was given away by her uncle, W. A. Schreiter, of Red Lake Falls while Miss Ruth Godward played the wedding march.

After congratulations and best wishes had been extended the happy couple, a five course wedding supper was served to the guests who included only the relatives and intimate friends of the bride and groom. Following this Mr. and Mrs. Myrland left on the ten twenty flier for a trip to points in southern Minnesota and Wisconsin. They will be at home to their friends after November 1st. Their leave taking was marked by throwing of rice and the other customary evidences of the good will and best wishes of their friends, who also showed their regard for bride and groom in the hosts of beautiful gifts bestowed.

The Kretzschmar home was beautifully decorated for the occasion with pink carnations and white chrysanthemums. The bride was attired in a beautiful gown of white messaline with silk embroidery with a white picture hat and carried white bridal roses. Boise, Idaho, October 27—The final details of the itinerary which will be followed by the "Governors' Special," the train which will tour thru the east with a party of western governors on board, has been announced by president Louis W. Hill, of the Great Northern railway, over whose lines a part of the trip will be made.

Leaving St. Paul, on the evening of November 28, the special will visit in turn the cities of Chicago, Indianapolis, Louisville, Cincinnati, Columbus, Pittsburg, Harrisburg, Baltimore, Washington, Philadelphia, New York, Albany, Utica, Syracuse, Rochestor, Buffalo, Cleveland, Detroit, Grand Rapids, Chicago, and returning to St. Paul on December 19, where the displays carried on the train will be entered in the Northwestern Land show, which will be in progress at that time.

It is expected that a full representation of western governors will make the trip. Among those who are expected to be in the party are: Governors Shafroth of Colorado; Carey of Wyoming; Eberhart of Minnesota; Norris of Montana; Vessey of South Dakota; Burke of North Dakota; Hawley of Idaho; Hay of Washington; West of Oregon and Johnson of California.

According to advices received at the headquarters of Reilly Atkinson, manager of the tour, in this city, lavish preparations are being made in many of the cities to be visited, for the entertainment of the visiting governors. At Washington, the party will call up on President Taft at his special invitation. The governors of many of the states which are included in the special's itinerary will personally escort the special's party across their states, and in every way, the progress of the "Governors' Special" through the east will be a triumphal one.

Successful Economy in Baking.

Most housewives assume when they buy a big can of baking powder at a low price that they have been economical. They have to a slight extent—but when they use that cheap "big can" baking powder, and find it so uneven in quality, or so unreliable that the baking falls, there isn't so much economy in it after all, for the wasted materials far outweigh the few cents saved in the price.

SUCCESSFUL, economy, is in the reach of every woman that desires it. She has only to order Calumet Baking Powder, and use it according to instructions. Then, she will achieve economy. For not only does Calumet sell at a reasonable price—25c per pound—but it is so carefully made by experienced chemists that failure is impossible. Only the best materials are used and the porportions of the ingredients are so exact and so uniform that EVEN baking comes from the oven, light, sweet, and beautifully raised. Calumet guarantees you against failure, and that is what constitutes real economy in baking.

Why not use Calumet, a baking powder that you can always rely upon? You can get no better at any price, for at the World's Pure Food Exposition, Calumet received the Highest Award.

WOMANLY WISDOM.

When pin-feathers come out with difficulty, wrap a piece of muslin around your finger to pull against.

A regular diet cures more people than physic.

"People who do not like the country because there is so little going on, are those in whose heads there is less going on than even in the country."

When you buy children's drawers for the winter, sew a piece of tape, about three inches long, across the bottom of the legs. This will prevent the drawers from wrinkling up when the stockings are put on.

Do not trade chewing gum, apples, candy, whistles, or anything that is put into the mouth.

Do not forget to give the baby plenty of water. Milk is a food, and does not take the place of water as a drink. Plenty of water between feedings, taken either warm or cool, is a great aid to the bowels and kidneys.

The right way to cook oatmeal: Put a teaspoonful of salt in a quart of water over the fire, in the upper part of a double boiler. As soon as it boils briskly, sprinkle the oatmeal in slowly. Do not stir, but let it boil briskly for a few minutes, then set it in the lower half of the boiler, which should contain hot water; cover, it and let it bubble slowly, without stirring, for four or five hours at the least. If wanted for breakfast it should be cooked the day before, and then finished with as much time as you can allow in the morning.—From November Farm Journal.

TO AILING WOMEN.

A Little Sound Advice Will Help Many Sufferers In Thief River Falls.

No woman can be healthy and well if the kidneys are sick. Poisons that pass off in the secretions when the kidneys are well, are retained in the body when the kidneys are sick. Kidneys and bladder become inflamed and swollen and worse troubles quickly follow. This is often the true cause of bearing down pains, lameness, back ache, etc. Uric poisoning also cause headaches, dizzy spells, languor, nervousness and rheumatic pain.

When suffering so try Doan's Kidney Pills, a remedy that has cured thousands of such cases. You will get better as the kidneys get better, and health will return when the kidneys are well. Let a Thief River Falls woman tell you about Doan's Kidney Pills.

Mrs. J. O. Christopherson, 414 St. Paul Ave., Thief River Falls, Minn., says: "I have used Doan's Kidney Pills with excellent results and they have also been taken with benefit by other members of our family. Official Paper of The City.

FRIDAY, OCT. 27, 1911.

The only man who never has any troubles is the fellow who never does anything.

Few men ever show their greatest powers until confronted by some great difficulties.

The white plague has again struck China. The plague maybe able to make a juster cleanup than the revolution.

Lets see those judgeships are life jobs and not, as yet, dependant upon the "will of the people." No wonder Master William would prefer that kind.

Some papers have stated a boom for former Senator Peterson of Moorhead as the next Congressman from the Ninth District. Peterson is a clean man whatever else may be said for him.

The Standpatters have had their big day in Minnesota for this year. Now let the Progressives shine forth and then unless they can get together the Democrats will out-shine them both on election day.

Over in Maine they are having an official count of the ballots cast in the late wet and dry campaign. Latest reports give the drys 700 majority so the prohibition wave didn't ebb very low and there may be a higher flood tide next time.

President Taft is certainly getting some rousing entertainments in Minnesota. It even seems that everybody present at the banquets were perfectly satisfied with his regime. That is easy to explain. The farmers are all busy threshing.

By a peculiar toss of fate W. H. Taft, who has always wanted to become a member of the supreme court of the United States, has had to take the job of president and himself appoint five judges in the court of which he wanted to be a member.—Anoka Herald.

Secretary of Agriculture, James Wilson, presided over the Brewer's Congress in spite of the protests of of hundreds of people who, according to Sec. Wilson, are not stable enough to run the government. Sec. Wilson is not subject to the "recall" by the common people, but he was subject to repremand by some of them.

In looking over the congressional situation in the district it is certainly remarkable how very few possibilities there are on the horizon as candidates for congress to oppose Mr. Steenerson. It would seem at the present time as tho Mr. Steenerson has a mortal cinch on the job for another term, at least. There are lots of good men in the district, but not one who, in our opinion, has been groomed and put into condition to make a successful race against our big congressman. At least not for the next term.—Hallock Weekly News.

If the people of Minnesota had the right to recall the judiciary, the dignity of one Judge Walter Sanborn of St. Paul would surely be in grave danger.

The Halstad Journal bewords the fact that while in Ada Governor Eberhart was allowed to wander around town alone and as they have it "allowing a governor to entertain himself has cast a blemish on the name of our country that will remain for some time."

Of course, it may be harder to entertain ones oneself than somebody else tho the Governor seems an adept at the latter stunt, but may we suggest that if the Governor ever finds himself in a similar predicament he might go to some nearby newspaper office, which in Minnesota are seldom located very far apart, and read some of the editorial comments of the state press on "him and his."

Provided, of course, he feels like Bobbie Burns did when he wrote:

"Oh wud some power the giftie gie us,
To see ourselves as ithers see us,
It wud frae many a blunder free us

Senator Knute Nelson speaks up very boldly and says:

"I think it was a very strong and able speech. It was a fair and candid exposition of the whole case, and a clear statement of what the president has done and intends to do in repressing monopolies and enforcing the anti-trust law. No fair-minded man can gainsay the fact that President Taft, more than any other president we have had, has taken greater pains to enforce the anti-trust law and to break up the great trust monopolies. In his speech last evening he indicated clearly that the good work would go on and that there would be no let-up until the trusts brought themselves within the law and manifested a disposition to comply in good faith with the law."—Senator Knute Nelson.

This is perfectly natural for one standpatter to do his best to brace up the other fellow and make it appear that he is absolute virtuous.

The editor of the Hutchinson Leader has summoned up his impressions of Pres. Taft explanatory and advisory speeches to the people who have assembled to hear him in so many different cities the past few weeks as follows:

President Taft's message to the country reduced to its briefest terms is this: "Let big business alone or you will have a panic and a lot of you will starve to death." This was the gist of his speeches in Iowa, in California and in Washington. He says, as to railroads, "The interstate commerce commission will settle all questions of rates. Let the railroads alone—they're all right." And, "Don't bother about the tariff. We've got some men at work finding out about it. Leave it to them." It is inconcievable that a president could so little understand the spirit of the times or the temper of the people as to give utterance to such expressions. We've progressed since Mark Hanna won an election by threatening the people with panics and starvation.

LA FOLLETTE'S AUTOBIOGRAPHY.

Now Appearing In The American Magazine.

The second installment of the Autobiography of Sentor Robert M. La Follette, of Wisconsin, appears in the November issue of The American Magazine.

The article contains some lively and interesting reading; notably those parts in which the Senator tells the story of his encounters with Philetus Sawyer, the great stand-pat Wisconsin politician of a generation ago. A part of this reads:

A new Congressman finds himself at once irresistibly drawn into various groups and alignments. No sooner was I on the ground than I began to feel the influence of Senator Philetus Sawyer, then the leader of the Republican party in Wisconsin. Owing to the fact that I had been elected to Congress without the assistance of organization—indeed, in defiance of it—I knew next to nothing about the underlying forces which at that time controlled, and in large measure still control, party machinery. A very small coterie of men then dominated the politics of Wisconsin and the two great leaders were Senator Sawyer and Henry C. Payne, who afterwards became a member of Roosevelt's cabinet.

Sawyer was a man of striking individuality and of much native force. He was a typical lumberman, equipped with great physical strength and a shrewd, active mind. He had tramped the forest, cruised timber, slept in the snow, built saw mills—and by his [illegible] own efforts had made several million dollars. So unlearned was he that it was jokingly said that he signed his name "P. Sawyer" because he could not spell Philetus. He was nevertheless a man of ability, and a shrewd counselor in the prevailing political methods. He believed in getting all he could for himself and his associates whenever and wherever possible. I always thought that Sawyer's methods did not violate his conscience; he regarded money as properly the chief influence in politics. Whenever it was necessary, I believe that he bot men as he bought saw-logs. He assumed that every man in politics was serving, first of all, his own personal interests—else why should he be in politics? He believed quite simply that railroad corporations and lumber companies, as benefactors of the country, should be given unlimited grants of public lands, allowed to charge all the traffic could bear, and that anything that interfered with the profits of business was akin to treason.

I had not been long in Washington before Sawyer invited me to go with him to call on the President. I can remember just how he looked climbing into his carriage—a short, thickset, squatty figure of a man with a big head set on square shoulders and a short neck—stubby everywhere. I remember he talked to me in a kindly fatherly, manner—very matter-of-fact—looking at me from time to time with a shrewd squint in his eye. He had no humor, but much of what has been called "horse sense." His talk was jerky and illiterate; he never made a speech in his life.

We called on President Cleveland and on all the Cabinet officers. His form of introduction was exactly the same at each place we stopped. He was not quite sure, always, of my name; "Follette' he called me. He would say:

"This young man we think a great deal of; we think he is going to amount to something. I want you to be fair to him. I'd like him to get all that is coming to him in his district. I hope you will treat him right when he has any business in your department."

As we drove away from our last call, Sawyer asked me if I had in mind any particular committee in the House upon which I desired to serve. I told him I had thought it over and I wanted to go on some committee where I could make use of my legal knowledge. I could not hope to be assigned to the great Committee on Judiciary, so I told him that I should like to go on the Committee on Public Lands. I innocently explained that many land grant forfeitures were pending and I should enjoy grappling with the legal questions which they presented. Sawyer looked at me benignly and said:

"Just leave that to me; don't say another word about it to anybody. I know Carlisle; served with him in the House. Just let me take care of that for you."

I was very grateful, and confided in his promises. But when Carlisle announced the committees I was astonished to find that Stephenson—now a Senator from Wisconsin—was appointed to the Committee on Public Lands and that I had been assigned to a place on the Committee on Indian Affairs. Sawyer came to me promptly and told me that he could not secure my appointment to Public Lands, but he was sure I would enjoy my work in Indian Affairs.

are a fair average selection and they would give us exactly the kind of government we all want if only they could remain free and independent personal units. But the impulse to organize is irresistible. Convenience and efficiency require it and the "organisation" springs up and cements them together. Good men who see the organization go wrong on a nomination continue to stay in and to lend their strength, not bolting until moral conditions become [illegible] [illegible] tion with its social and other non-political ties, their revolt would be early, easy and effective and every bad nomination would receive its separate and proportionate punishment in the alienation of supporters.

Politicians Can't Exclude Grafters From Their Ranks.

The control of an active political organization will gravitate always toward a low level. The doors must be open to every voter—examination of his civic spirit is impossible—and greed and altruism enter together. Greed has most to gain in a factional dispute and is least scrupulous in choice of methods. The bad politician carries more weapons than the politician who hampers himself with a code of ethics one degree higher. Consequently corruption finally dominates any machine that is worth dominating and sinks it lower and lower as worse men displace better, until the limit of public toleration is reached and the machine receives a set-back at election. That causes its members to clean up, discredit the men who went too far, and restore a standard high enough to win—which standard immediately begins to sag again by the operation of the same natural principle.

Reformers in our cities have given up the endeavor to maintain pure political organizations and elect reform administrations. A typical experience is that of the Citizens' Union of New York, whose leaders have always been sincerely bent on improving the condition of politics. The Union acquired power enough to become an important faction in elections. After the first such election, small political organizations which had aided toward the victory rushed in, clamoring for their share of the plunder. For a term of two the reformers were able to resist the pressure. Nevertheless the possession of power by their party inevitably attracted the grafters; they found themselves accepting assistance from men who were in politics for what there was in it, men who wanted to use the power and patronage that lay at hand unutilized, and it was clear that those men would in time, working within the Union, depose the original heads of the party and subsitute "more practical" leaders of their own kind, until in time the Citizens' Union would itself need reforming. So the Union retired from the field as a party, broke up the district organizations which had yielded to corruption and became exclusive in its government in order to preserve its purity of purpose.

It is obvious that most political parties do not commit suicide to evade such internal contamination and lapse of principle.

Theoretically there is always the threat of the minority party which stands ready to take advantage of every lapse, but as there is no debate between minor candidates, no adequate public scrutiny or comparison for personalities, the minority party gets no credit for a superior nomination and often finds that it can more hopefully afford to cater to its own lowest elements. In fact, it may be only the dominant party which can venture to affront the lowest elements of its membership and nominate the better candidate.

CROOKSTON IS GIVEN FRIGHT.

Crookston, Minn., Oct. 21.—(Special to The Herald.)—A mouse, unassisted, engineered a coup which threw Crookston in total darkness, and panic last night for fifteen minutes, at 10 o'clock, but paid the penalty of electrocution. Every light in the city went out instantly when the mouse crawled between the contact points on the main switchboard carrying 2,300 volts.

When darkness came the engineer rushed to throw the switch off and fell into a 10-foot pit dug for the installation of new turbine connections and was knocked unconscious, but restored by fellow employes.

Children in Near Panic.

A panic was narrowly averted in the Masonic hall, where 250 children were assembled for the annual Eastern Star children's party. The current was switched to another connection and the cause of the trouble discovered this morning.

Every street light was out also.

Becaues of the Eldred bank robbery many were apprehensive that a similar stunt was being pulled off here.

CONTRACT FOR ELECTRIC PLANT BUILDING AWARDED F. S. DOEGE.

Work Started Saturday Morning.

At the council meeting last Friday night one bid for the construction of the auxiliary-electric-plant building was submitted, opened and approved. The bid $7939, was submitted by contractor F. S. Doege of this city, and the contract was duly awarded him.

Doege started work Saturday morning with a force of 20 men, and reports that the work is coming along nicely. The present pumping station is being taken down, so that the new building will house the new and old apparatus. The building will be completed inside of 60 days, expected that the engines and generators will be installed, too, by that time, making it possible to have the new plant in operation by the first of the year.

Bids for the engines and generators will be opened tomorrow afternoon.

Mr. Clausen was down to Thief River Falls to get his wife the day the fire went through. Coming home everything was gone. This was certainly a nice welcome. Reports also say that a few grain and hay stacks went up too.

SCHOOL NOTES.

The total enrollment in the high school to date is 194. This will be considerably increased when the short course begins next Monday.

Pupils from Minneapolis, Fargo, St. Cloud, Kimball and the towns of North and Rooksburry entered school this week. This is typical of the weekly additions to the enrollment.

Supt. Hay is in Minneapolis attending the meeting of the state educational meeting.

The short course of five months opens next Monday at the Lincoln building. Miss Rilla Palmer, an experienced teacher and a graduate of the state university, has been hired to care for this work.

Two more ladies applied last Monday morning for admission to the normal training department. They were denied entrance, of course, as the state high school board sets the maximum enrollment at twenty. At least fifty students would have enrolled in this department this fall had they been permitted to do so. There is not the least doubt but a sixth state normal school at this point would have an initial enrollment of 100 students.

A new mimeograph has been purchased by the board of education. This instrument will be of great service in running off the mass of outlines, examination questions, blank reports, and other material required in quantities in the schools.

There are 135 pupils enrolled in the seventh grade. When this class enters high school two years hence the Lincoln will probably be filled from top to bottom.

The products on the five acre tract south of town are being cared for and sold by the agricultural department this week. The receipts will net a snug sum on the right side of the ledger account of this field.

The monthly report cards will be issued next Monday. They are worthy of the closest examination by parents. It is a rule with rarely an exception that those students who attend irregularly and those who loiter about town evenings are the ones who invariably fall below grade. These can scarcely hope for promotion at the close of the school year. Particularly in the high school will the requirements demand that the student perform his tasks and where parents find that their children are falling below "passing'5' it would be the part of wisdom to inquire closely for the cause.

Good and Bad.

A remarkably brief, effective summing up was once quoted by Lord James in an after dinner speech. It was delivered by an Irish judge trying a man for pig stealing. The evidence of his guilt was conclusive, but the prisoner insisted on calling a number of witnesses, who testified most emphatically to his general good character. After hearing their evidence and the counsel's speeches the judge remarked, "Gentlemen of the jury, I think that the only conclusion you can arrive at is that the pig was stolen by the prisoner and that he is the most amiable man in the county."—London Chronicle.

You Want More Money?

It is easy enough to hope for better wages or a bigger salary, but at this writing no man has yet been found who wished his way to success. The world is filled with young people who arise in the morning chuck full of rosy aspirations and go to bed at night with the same aspirations unfilled and unrealized. The great question for you to consider, young man or young woman, is not what you hope to do next year, but what you are going to do today to realize these fond ambitions. The time is ripe for action. IF YOU DON'T DO SOMETHING NOW, THE CHANCES ARE THAT YOU NEVER WILL. Every day that you put off doing the thing that ought to be done, separates you just that much farther from the realization of your hopes. Think how many hundreds of thousands of persons are going through life today, traveling along the very hardest lines simply because they did not embrace the opportunity to make the necessary preparation at the right time for the battles that every individual must fight.

AVERTS AWFUL TRAGEDY

Timely advice given Mrs. C. W. Willoughby, of Marengo, Wis., (R. No. 1) prevented a dreadful tragedy and saved two lives. Doctors had said her frightful cough was a "consumptoin" cough and could do little to help her. After many remedies failed, her aunt urged her to take Dr. King's New Discovery. "I have been using it for some time," she wrote "and the awful cough has almost gone. It also saved my little boy when taken with a severe bronchial trouble." This matchless medicine has no equal for throat and lung troubles. Price 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free. Guaranteed by all druggists.

A CUCUMBER CRAZE

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1911, by Associated Literary Press.

It was said that the farmers in the country about Olney were up to snuff. No patent hayforks could be unloaded on them. Of the hundreds of patent medicine circulars they received each year not one resulted in the sale of a consumption cure. The tin peddlers who dealt with them took their lives in their hands. "Cute" was the word applied to the people of the town and county.

One October day a middle aged man of good address might have been seen driving toward Olney in a buggy. It was raining, and the highway was muddy. At a certain spot a wheel fell into a rut, and the buggy was tipped over. Five minutes later a citizen of Olney named Scott came driving in from a crossroad. He at once offered his aid. It wasn't much of a trick to right the buggy, as no damage had been done, but the stranger, who gave his name as Anderson, was profuse in his thanks. He was so profuse as to embarrass Mr. Scott. He said it was the first thing that had happened in years to make him believe in humanity. Mr. Scott could have passed him by, but hadn't done so. Mr. Scott had halted and got down in the pouring rain and grabbed and heaved on the muddy wheel. Mr. Scott had been offered a dollar for his trouble, but had waved it away.

The stranger was to stop at the Raven Inn, in town. He might be there a week. If Mr. Scott would call he would be shown that gratitude still existed in the human breast. Mr. Scott felt that the stranger was overdoing things, but curiosity forced him to call. He was warmly received.

Then Mr. Anderson told his secret. He was traveling over the country to find some farmer he could trust. Those seeds were a new variety of cucumber—a chocolate colored cucumber. It grew to a length of three feet and was going to produce a revolution in food. It could be baked, boiled or fried, the same as a potato, but contained three times the nutriment, and the taste was something that beat fried oysters all to smash. The big hotels of the cities would pay a dollar apiece for them and would contract for a million a year. Hush! On your life don't mention it! More money in it than in a diamond mine. Mr. Scott had helped Mr. Anderson out of the mud. Mr. Anderson would now help Mr. Scott out of any financial hole he had fallen into. He would give him twenty of the seeds. The twenty would grow 250 one dollar cucumbers, and the 250 cucumbers would produce a full peck of seeds.

Mr. Scott was amazed, astonished and grateful. It was the first time he had ever been handed something for nothing since coming down with measles.

Mr. Scott did not drop a word to a human soul. His wife saw that he had something on his mind and tried to pick it out of him, but sooner than tell her he let her threaten to go home to her another. It was Mr. Anderson who tackled a farmer now and then in the streets of Olney and took him to his room and showed him one of the wonderful cucumbers. He didn't do it to sell seeds, just to drop a hint of what was coming.

And then the farmer would go home and think it over. He couldn't wait three years for seeds. He wanted to be in at the start, before the price should drop on an overstocked market. He would go back to the kind Mr. Anderson and ask as a great favor to sell him a score or so. In each and every case he did go back and pay a dollar apiece for the seeds and took his solemn oath not to say a word before the next spring, and he went away with the dime packet of seeds hugged to his palpitating heart.

In time that salt bag of seeds was emptied and filled again. In time every man who could raise a few dollars and wanted to make ten for one had bought seeds. The news somehow reached as far as twenty miles away. There was no day that Mr. Anderson didn't have callers and didn't exchange seeds for greenbacks. It was with chocolate colored seeds that he paid his bill at the hotel. The landlord of the inn was a man who wanted the very best for his guests. If the new brand cucumbers were the best he wanted them.

From October to March Mr. Anderson had a good time. He lived high, had the best room in the house and carried around a pocketful of money. Then one day he had to leave for Buffalo on business. He was to return in two days, but he has not come back as yet. He will never come back in the flesh. His spirit may float over Olney now and then, but no human eye will detect it. When he had been absent for three weeks some of the seeds were sent to the state agricultural college for examination. The report was very brief. It simply said:

And were there mourning and lamentation and threats of murder in and about Olney? No, sir. You couldn't find a man who had bought a seed and been swindled. Mr. Anderson had tried to swindle Smith, Jones and Brown, but Smith, Jones and Brown had seen through him in a second. Not one man of the hundreds taken [illegible] but what denied it point blank and is denying it to this day. All had reputations to maintain, and they lied boldly and profusely and gamely to maintain it.

French Whiskers.

The full and sumptuous beard which was once the pride and joy of every well oiled Parisian is fast disappearing. Not so long ago the streets of Paris teemed with rotund figures carrying black portfolios under their arms and screened by a curtain of curly hair which whisked gayly in the breeze. Red bronze was the favorite color, either natural or bottled, as the case might be. In moments of agitation or perplexity the beard offered great possibilities to its harassed owner, who seemed to derive inspiration from its constant manipulation.

I remember once, when I was living with a French family on the other side of the Seine, I was attacked by influenza. Madame insisted upon my calling in her doctor. He was a very small man with a very large beard. After listening to the story of my life he proceeded to examine my lungs. I was about a foot taller than he was, so he was obliged to stand on tiptoe to perform the rite. As he glued his ear to my chest his beard seemed to annoy him, for he suddenly gathered it up in one hand and flung it over my shoulder. The action so astonished me that I entirely forgot to wheeze, thereby depriving him of one of my most interesting symptoms.—Exchange.

The Last Hope.

When Lemuel Gregg died a cousin from a distant town appeared, saying he had come to settle the estate and take the residue as Lemuel's only kinsman. He had a jaunty air at first, but at the end of a week he had acquired a watchful and anxious expression. When he stepped into the office of Lawyer Mears on Saturday afternoon he seemed to be extremely nervous.

"Well, how are you coming out?" asked the lawyer. "I suppose it's all clear sailing, isn't it?"

"Clear sailing!" echoed the executor. "Do you suppose I'd be here with a fee to pay if 'twas clear sailing? I'm desperate, I tell you!

"There isn't a thing left of Cousin Lem's estate except a two dollar bill and three pewter plates. I want to know if there's any way that I can oblige the town to accept those plates for the tax bill it sprung up on me after I thought I'd got everything paid? If there is I'll give you a dollar and use the other half o' that two dollar bill to get back where I came from this very night."—Youth's Companion

Spruce Trees Nursed by Pines.

A singular fact with regard to the relations of different species of trees has been brought out by the reforestation of the peninsula of Jutland, Denmark. It was observed that when planted alone spruce trees did not prosper, but that if a spruce was planted near a mountain pine it grew up vigorously. Further experiment has shown that if the pines are placed near the spruces at the beginning and after being allowed to grow together with them for a few years are cut down the benefit to the spruce continues. The phenomenon is not understood, says Professor J. W. Harshberger, but it is supposed that the roots of the mountain pine are inhabited by some mycorhiza which produces the nitrogen needed by the trees and that this organism is transferred to the roots of the surrounding spruce. Once the infection has taken place the presence of the pine is no longer necessary.

Old Time London Sundays.

Now and then one hears Londoners complaining that their Sunday is too dull. They want more amusements, attractions, life. But had they lived in the seventeenth century they would have found a vast difference. At that period a Sunday in London was a day of trials. One had only to fetch or carry to break the Sabbath. Men were fined for carrying such things as a haunch of venison and a pair of shoes, while another individual had to pay up for swearing on a Sunday. A duke and a knight were fined again and again for riding in their carriages on the first day of the week, and one unfortunate pedestrian had to pay a sovereign because he was caught in the act of strolling from Bristol to Bath on a Sunday.—Pearson's Weekly.

Waterfalls In Japan.

Waterfalls in Japan are almost countless. There is one at every turn, and where there was not one in the beginning the Japs have made one, for it is their passion. Every little garden has a fall or two or it would not be considered a garden. There are many very beautiful ones in various parts of the country, and they are all of them shrines visited by thousands of pilgrims every year.

The Best You Have.

Always give of the best that is in you. Feel responsibility toward yourself and your work. Never be content with a compromise with work. Give an employer the best that you have in you to give.—Belvedere Brooks.

Mean Reply.

"Talk about man!" exclaimed the suffragist. "What has man ever done for woman?"

"He's furnished her with a model she's trying durned hard to imitate," came a voice from the rear of the hall —Boston Transcript.

Remorse.

A chemist had made a mistake in his weights and poisoned a customer. When the fatal tidings were brought to him he exclaimed, "Wretch that I am—and my best customer too!"

The Coup de Monserrat.

The history of the sword stroke the Parisian fencers call the "coup de Monserrat" is romantic. The hero of the story was a young Parisian musician engaged to be married to a young lady of Bordeaux. Quarreling with a cousin of his fiancee, he got his ears boxed at the Bordeaux club. Ignorant of fencing, he dared not resent the insult and renounced his engagement. But he also took fencing lessons from one Monserrat, a maitre d'armes of Toulouse. Monserrat taught him one trick only, and he practiced it for a year. At the end of that time he returned to the Bordeaux club, slapped his man's face and, being called out, instantly ran his opponent through the body with his cunning lunge.

You are not experimenting on yourself when you take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for a cold as that preparation has won its great reputation and extensive sale by its remarkable cures of colds, and can always be depended upon. It is equally valuable for adults and children and may be given to young children with implicit confidence as it contains no harmful drug. Sold by all druggists.

Grease Versus Gravity.

A professor in Yale university delights in telling of his experience with an inventor of the unlettered genius type who came to the professor with a model of a perpetual motion machine.

"H'm; looks plausible," observed the professor, "but it won't work. What are you going to do about gravity?"

"Gravity!" said the visitor scornfully. "T'ell wit' gravity; we'll use plenty of grease."—Cosmopolitan.

The Good Time Coming.

Hop Sing is a Chinese laundryman with a cheerful though somewhat unusual philosophy. After bewailing the hard times and lack of business he added smilingly, "Bimeby evrybody be lich, velly lich, bimeby." "How's that?" "Alla poor people got no money; no can eat. Then alla poor people die."—Argonaut.

Carried to Extremes.

"She is simply mad on the subject of germs and sterilizes or filters everything in the house."

"How does she get along with her family?"

"Oh, even her relations are strained." —Stray Stories.

Is The World Growing Better?

Many things go to prove that it is. The way thousands are trying to help others is proof. Among them is Mrs. W. W. Gould, of Pittsfield, N. H. Finding good health by taking Electric Bitters, she now advises other sufferers, everywhere, to take them. "For years I suffered with stomach and kidney trouble," she writes. "Every medicine I used failed till I took Electric Bitters. But this great remedy helped me wonderfully." They'll help any woman. Bob Brackett, a lone bachelor, needed some articles with which to decorate his room. He inquired of a lady friend where such things were to be had, and she recommended the Woman's Exchange. Bob went there and made his purchases.

The same evening on returning from business he found them all in his room. Opening the package, he put a bureau scarf in its place, a centerpiece on his table under his reading lamp and a scented mouchoir case on his dresser. Then he sat down in his easy chair and surveyed the scene.

"By Jove," he exclaimed, "one would think a woman had done it all! What a feminine appearance the room has! There's everything a woman would provide—that is, everything except pillowshams. Pillowshams I'll never have. They're well named. They're a sham indeed—put on in the morning to look pretty, taken off at night, folded up and laid where they won't be stepped on. Of all the confounded feminine nonsense I ever heard of pillowshams are the worst. If ever I'm married there's one thing my wife shall never indulge in or force me to indulge in—pillowshams. Confound them!

Bob went to bed leaving a fire burning in the grate that illuminated his room and lay awake enjoying his newly acquired decorations.

"I can almost fancy myself married," he said, "and a nice little girl keeping house in this very room with me. It's one of a suit, and I could have the whole. Just think of coming home for dinner instead of stopping at a cheap restaurant, finding wifey at the door ready to throw her arms around my neck; dinner ready; with my arm around her waist we go into the dining room and while we eat talk over what has passed during the day.

"Dinner finished, we go into the living room. I light a cigar, we read and chat, and so spend the evening.

"Good gracious!" he exclaimed. "I've forgotten to put a handkerchief in my nightshirt pocket."

He got out of bed and went to the bureau where he had left his mouchoir case and felt for a handkerchief. The size he used at night was on the bottom of the pile, and with it he pulled out a slip of paper, which floated to the floor. Picking it up, he took it to the fireplace and saw by the light something written on it in a feminine hand. It read:

If my work falls into the hands of a bachelor this is to inform him that single blessedness and making my living at such work as this don't suit me. Marriage is the natural lot of both sexes, and I don't see why a woman shouldn't seek a husband as well as a man seek a wife. I am twenty years old, have a pliable disposition and believe that the husband should lead, having his own way in everything. Miss Williamson of the Woman's Exchange has my address. I have authorized her to give it to any gentlemanlike young man who calls for it.

"Well, now, I like that!" exclaimed Bob. "What a lot of practical sense in it! And she'll let her husband have his own way about everything! Splendid! If fate throws us together there's one thing there'll be no trouble about—the pillowshams. She can have her own way about everything else."

Bob went to sleep dreaming of how the place would look if something came of this slip of paper and the very next day went again to the Woman's Exchange for a feminine article with a soul, a body, and a living body at that.

Three months from that date Bob Brackett and Louise Harwood, a very lovely girl—at least Bob thought she was—were married and went to live in his room till the other rooms in the suit became vacant and they could rent the whole. After a short wedding trip they returned to the apartment, and the bride began to survey it with a critical eye.

"Wouldn't you think," asked Bob, "that a woman had fixed it up?"

"Well, yes, so far as it goes."

"What's wanting?"

"Well, some curtains to the windows for one thing."

"That's so. I never thought of them. What else?"

"Those pillows should be covered."

"With what?"

"Shams."

"Louise," said the husband, squaring himself, "if there's any one thing I always detested it's pollowshams. No pillowshams for me, thank you."

"But you wouldn't have the pillows perfectly bare, would you?"

"Put on cases of the finest brussels lace if you like, but when you get 'em on keep 'em on. I don't propose to take a sham off my pillow every night, fold it up and put it somewhere."

"I'll do all that."

"Nobody'll do it. I've sworn no shams shall be on my bed."

After six months' squabbling over the pillowshams and a frequent reminder to the wife that he should have his own way in everything he proposed a compromise. He was proceeding to propose some kind of a pillowcase that would look well, but would not be injured by being used to lay one's head on. But before he could do so his wife interrupted him saying:

"All right. We'll compromise."

"Well?" said the husband inquiringly.

"We'll compromise on pillowshams."

There was a pause, after which the husband remarked, "I give it up."

THE JEWELS

A Story of 1930

By MARCO L. BRAYTON

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

"Dad," said a boy to his father one day when they were riding through their vast estates, "how did you get all this? Mother has often said that before you and she were married you were a tutor in a college."

"Yes, my boy, I was an instructor in analytical chemistry. The students who studied under me worked in the college laboratory. From my early youth I had shown a fondness for chemical processes and before I was eighteen had made several discoveries, though none of them so important as one I made several years later.

"Your mother was in the woman's college attached to the university, and she and I became acquainted.

"Your mother's parents being poor, as soon as she was graduated she accepted a position as governess with a very rich lady, whose children she taught. A year after she left the university she came into the laboratory one day to see me, and by her appearance I knew at once that she was in great trouble.

"'I have come to you,' she said, 'there being no one else in whom I dare confide. I wish you to advise me. The lady by whom I am employed took a great fancy to me as soon as I entered her service and last week, when she went away to be one of a house party consisting of very rich people like herself, left her most valuable jewels in my care. They have been kept in a safe in her bed room, and she intrusted the key with me. The day after her departure she directed me by letter to send her a certain brooch she wished to wear with a costume it especially fitted. I unlocked the safe, took out the brooch and while packing it left the safe door open. When I returned to the room before locking the safe it occurred to me to see if the jewels were there. A box containing the most valuable ones had disappeared. What shall I do?'

"In tracking the thief I could be of no assistance to the poor girl, but I had been making some experiments with results that suggested to me a possible temporary solution of the difficulty. There had then recently been discovered the substance called radium, which you will soon learn something about at school. Its influence on other substances is remarkable. I had used it in the laboratory in the little glass receptacles called test tubes and had found that it had turned them a beautiful blue color. It occurred to me that the shade was similar to that of sapphires. That thought resulted in these riches we now possess."

"How? Go on with the story."

"It led me to a series of experiments. I exposed crystals of different colors to the influence of radium, putting the crystals and the radium away together in a dark closet. The white crystals had become topazes, the blue crystals emeralds, and violet crystals were turned to sapphires. I had learned the secret of the constitution of gems. They were simply crystals that had been acted upon by radium.

"I told your mother that I might duplicate the lost gems if I only knew their shapes, colors and sizes, whereupon she told me that the owner kept photographs of them to be used to identify them in case of their loss at their exact size. She brought me the photographs, and without losing a moment I had crystals cut to match them and exposed the crystals to radium.

"The danger was that the owner of the jewels would call for them before they had been exposed long enough to change their color. Besides, those I was making might not come out the right shade. I resolved on an expedient. As soon as any of the crystals became gems I took them to a jeweler and exchanged them for those whose color matched the originals and had those I received cut the exact shape. Fortunately the lady remained away a sufficient time to meet these requirements, and she never knew that her gems had been stolen."

"But was that honest, dad?"

"Had the gems been spurious it would not have been honest, but [illegible] were real. The originals had been made in nature's laboratory, just as I made these in mine."

"How did you make so much out of it?"

"I simply manufactured gems and sold them without imparting my secret. But in time a chemist in Germany made the same discovery as I, and those scientists over there used to give all their discoveries to the world. He published the secret, and henceforth all gems became of little value. Consequently they are no longer prized by the rich. They are as beautiful now that they are manufactured by man as they were when nature was their only maker, but value depends on rarity, and since gems are no longer rare they are no longer valuable."

"What has taken the place of these old fashioned ornaments?"

"Those substances which nature used to manufacture them. Recently there has been a craze for radium and certain like substances discovered since radium became known. The richest people now think nothing of spending a million or so on a bit of radium so arranged as to be worn as an ornament. Fortunes have kept pace with the change in decorations, and the very wealthy are now able to pay for these newly discovered properties, some of which cost millions for a single grain."

Kindness Misdirected.

"What has become of the meerschaum pipe?" inquired an inveterate smoker.

"Well, my dear," his wife replied, "it was getting awfully discolored, so I gave it a coat of white enamel, and it is not quite dry yet!"

Extravagant.

Hub—Reckless and extravagant—I? When did I ever make a useless purchase? Wife—Why, there's that fire extinguisher you bought a year ago! We've never used it once!

FAVORS EXTRA SESSION

(Con. from page 1.)

gross earnings tax bill which came before the house when I was ill at my rooms in the Merchants hotel. I might add, the house passed all of these measures except gross earnings tax and that would have been enacted into law except for the unfortunate termination of the session, the details of which are familiar to all. My view is that we should take up and consider those measures which the legislature apparently favored and which would have been enacted into law except for the unforfunate adjournment which precluded final action on the merits. While the gross earnings tax bill was defeated in the house by a heavy majority, yet it must be remembered that this vote was taken before the Sanborn decision and before the railroads had raised passenger rates from 2 cents to 3 cents per mile, and before the outrageous and excessive freight rates, now existing, had been put in force."

Gross Earnings Tax.

"Do you believe the legislature would pass a bill increasing the gross earnings tax if an extra session is called," was next asked.

"Why, certainly," was the response. "A substansial majority of both houses have pledged themselves in writing to pass the gross earnings tax bill if an extra session is called. I have no doubt," said the speaker, "that a bill increasing the gross earnings tax on railroads from 4 per cent to 5 per cent would pass both houses and become a law within ten days after the session convened. I cannot understand how any fair minded man would oppose the bill. From the report of the tax commission, it appears that if the railroads were taxed the same as the merchant, the banker, the farmer, and, in fact all property taxed on an ad valorem basis, the railroads would pay a tax equal to more than 6 per cent on their gross earnings and this upon the basis of the 2 cent rate and the former existing freight rates. Accordingly, at the present time, the railroads are paying at least one-third less in taxes than by right they should pay. In addition, they are arbitrarily charging 3 cents per mile for passenger fares and have advanced freight rates enormously, especially in Southern, Western and Northwestern Minnesota. It is, therefore, very apparent that as a matter of justice and a square deal to all the people, the gross earnings tax on railroads should be forthwith increased."

No Need to Wait.

"What have you to say, Mr. Speaker, against the proposition that we should wait until the decision of the supreme court of the United States in the Sanborn case?"

"It is very hard for me to tolerate this proposition with any patience," said Mr. Dunn. "This specious argument against an extra session is advanced by enemies of the gross earnings tax increase and by men who at heart are friends of the railroads and against the people. Why, look at the situation! The railroads did not wait for the decision of the supreme court, but have restored the 3-cent fare and have boosted freight rates outrageous[illegible] The money thus wrung from the people can never be returned. Regardless of the decision of the supreme court and whether we have 2-cent fare and reduced freight rates or not, the railroads should pay, at least, 5 per cent gross earnings tax. If we wait until the session of 1913, the railroads will save $2,000,000 in taxes and in the meantime will collect from the people a vast amount in extra passenger fares and excessive freight rates. Now, just remember that all the legislature will do is to submit the question to a vote of the people at the November, 1912, general election whether or not the gross earnings tax should be increased. If a 2-cent fare is restored and rates are reduced, and if the people think the railroads should pay more than 4 per cent, they will vote down the amendment. On the other hand, if the railroads are sustained in the supreme court (as most of us expect), and if no extra session is called, we cannot submit an amendment increasing the taxes until 1914, and the state will suffer a loss of two years increase of taxes amounting in round numbers to $2,000.000.

Cost of Extra Session.

An extra session of the Minnesota legislature lasting thirty days, which is long enough for all of the purposes for which an extra session is demanded, could be held for not to exceed $25,000.

If the legislature wishes to do so it can sit that long for a much smaller sum.

It would have to be pretty extravagant to spend much more in that length of time.

According to George W. Peachey, secretary of the sentate, it would cost $27,000, or at the rate of $900 per day

According to Oscar Arneson, chief clerk of the house of representatives, it would cost $16,565; and he presents detailed figures, which Mr. Peachey neglects to do.—Duluth Herald.

VOL. XXIV THIEF RIVER FALLS, MINNESOTA, FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 3, 1911 NO. 9

MINNESOTA HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

AMONG THE CANDIDATES

Alderman Are Interviewed. G. Torrison Out for Mayor, A. H. Aakre for Alderman.

Since last week's publication G. Torrison and Emil Sedlacek have come out for mayor, W. A. Boreen has withdrawn, and A. H. Akre has come out for alderman at large.

This week the "Press" made an attempt to get a statement from all the caniddates for aldermen. It was too big a task. How much different it will be when we have the commission form of government; then there will be only five men to interview, and the search-light of publicity can be turned on them to the people's hearts content.

GULLRUD.

C. C. Gullrud, Public Ownership, for alderman first ward, when interviewed said, "I have lived here eight and one-half years and well-known by the people in my ward. I have the necessary time to devote to the office, and if elected will do the best I can for the interests of the city."

ARTHUR TANEM.

Arthur Tanem, Public Ownership, for alderman second ward, submitted a signed statement as follows:

As a candiate for alderman from the second ward, I wish to say to the voters of this ward that I was nominated by and am running on the Public Ownership party's ticket, and as such I am pledged to support the party's city platform.

I have been a resident of Thief River Falls for more than ten years, and as I am still a young man, I can truthfully say that I have grown up with the town. I have been greatly interested in the welfare and progress of our city, and I will at all times support and work for any movement or project that will go towards making our city the metropolis of Northern Minnesota.

ARTHUR TANEM.

TORRISON.

Goodnow Torrison, Independent, for mayor, when interviewed said that he did not have anything special for publication, but in the course of conservation revealed that he has the necessary time to devote to the office because the nature of his business is such that he is not tied down to it very closely; that he will not do any hustling to get the position, but will take the office and do his best if elected; that he is abel to think for himself, and the people will know he has been mayor when his term of office expires; that there are no strings attached to him; and, that anyone who thinks a position on the conncil a snap is mistaken.

A. H. AKRE.

A. H. Akre, Independent, for alderman at large, in a brief interview said "I got started rather late, but now that I am in the race, I am there to run and run as fast as I can."

FRED ROTH.

Fred Roth, Public Ownership, for alderman at large, when interviewed said, "While I have always taken an interest in city affairs, I had never thought of a position on the city council until my friends urged me to do so. It is simply up to the people. If they want me to act as a councilman, I will do so to the best of my ability."

BERG.

J. C. Berg, Independent, for alderman at large, at present a member of the council, when interviewed said, "My record on the council is open for inspection and I would be pleased to stay on the council a while longer, at least until this new lighting plant is in successful operation, and there is a foot-bridge across the river, which would be a convenience for the people on both sides. I have always had the interests of the city at heart, and will work for anything that means a better and cleaner city; but believe in weighing all propositions carefully and not squandering the people's money."

WILSON.

C. M. Wilson, Independent, for alderman 4th ward, when interviewed submitted a signed statement as follows:

I am a candidate for alderman in the fourth ward. If I am elected I will indeavor to do my best in helping to carry on the affairs of the city to its best interests. "Honesty is the best policy" has ever been my motto, and I will not forsake it now.

I came to Thief River Falls, nineteen years ago, and have been a taxpayer here ever since. During that time, I have carried on the trade of contractor and builder, and have erected not a few of the city's largest buildings.

Respectfully yours,
C. M. WILSON.

JOHNSON.

Joseph Johnson, Independent, for alderman third ward, at present president of the city council, addresses the voters as follows:

I am at present alderman of the third ward and a candidate before the voters at the next city election; and wish to state that if you have found any weak spots in my public record, you may vote for my opponent. But if the voters of the third ward repose in me their confidence, I will serve them without violating it, and will decide in the interests of the public every question that arises. A policy of economy will be strictly adhered to; and any pledges a candidate makes with a view to catching votes should be reserved 'til he faces the real situation.

Respectfully yours,
Joseph Johnson.

KROHN.

Ed. A. Krohn, Independent, for alderman second ward, when interviewed said, "I believe in giving everybody a square deal, and would always work for the best interests of the city."

MOUSLEY.

Frank Mousley, Public Ownership, for alderman third ward, when interviewed said, "I have been a resident of this city for ten years, and believe I am well enough known by the voters in my ward that they will have no difficulty in deciding whether or not I am to be a member of the city council."

NOT AT HOME.

The following aldermen when called upon were not at home:

Lorin B. Lorimor, Public Ownership, for alderman at large.

J. H. Jacobson, Independent, for alderman at large.

D. K. Bryant, Independent, for alderman fourth ward.

DuCHAMP HEARS THE PRESIDENT

Meets With Many Difficulties But Finally Lands On the Stage.

Joseph DuChamp—a well-known pioneer in this section, scout, hunter and Indian fighter, at present living near Germantown and having charge of the Germantown stage line out of this city—put up the fight of his life in Minneapolis Tuesday evening Oct. 24th to hear president Taft at the Auditorium. Joe was finally successful, landing on the stage with the president and hearing most of the speech. He is a staunch republican, and had Mr. Taft known that such an influential man in northern politics was clamoring for admission, it would not have been necessary for Joe to perspire so freely.

Joe reached the Milwaukee depot in Minneapolis at 7:10 Tuesday evening, returning from Bird Island where he had been visiting his daughter, Mrs. Wickingson. He hastened from there to the Union depot to meet the presidential train, which arrived at 7:30, and found the procession already forming. Wires had been strung from the depot to the Auditorium so as to give free passage for the president's auto and forty other autos numbered consecutively from 1 to 40. The procession was headed by the Fort Snelling soldiers and mounted police rode along the sides. In addition to these there were at each crossing ten policemen to keep back the crowd.

In spite of all this opposition Joe ran the gauntlet successfully and reached the Auditorium, having never been further back than auto number 2. But, alas, when he reached the Auditorium he found the building had been filled for two hours, and six policemen guarding the door. These decorated gentlemen when asked if a good, loyal American citizen, who had traveled 400 miles to hear the president speak, could gain admittance merely sneered and were disposed to consider his pleadings as a joke. However, Joe stood up for his rights so strongy that the Chief came around to see what was the trouble. The Chief proved to be the father of a family and a very nice man, and took Joe inside turning him over to an attendant, who in turn took him to the room where the president's manager was located. The president's manager recognized in Joe a man conscientiously determined on hearing the president speak, and after taking the necessary precaution of examing him for bombs, asked the guards to escort him to the stage entrance so that he might see and hear the president and have the further pleasure of watching the audience.

Owing to the devious and stormy route he had to travel, Joe arrived three-quarter of an hour late. Mr Taft had already started his discourse and the first words that greeted Joe were, "and buried them both in the same grave." From his, then securely guarded vantage point, Joe was enabled to hear the remainder of the speech without interruption.

Joe was very much impressed by Mr. Taft's address, and thought the roward well worth the struggle. On being asked by a friend if Taft was as big a man as writers and cartoonists have pictured him, he said, "His head isn't as big, but his breadbasket is bigger."

W. A. BOOREN WITHDRAWS

Socialists Name Emil Sedlacek for Mayor Via of the "Sticker Route."

W. A. Booren has formally withdrawn from the campaign for the Mayoralty in compliance with the expressed desires of the officials of the Soo. Ry Company. He has never been seeking the office of Mayor but the office has been seeking him thru the medium of the Socialist party. Circumstances being the mother of necessity Mr. Booren was obliged to withdraw. This necessity arose within the last week.

When it became known that Boreen would have to withdraw a hurry call was sent out for a meeting of the Socialist Local on Wednesday evening to consider way and means of placing another candidate in the field in his place. It being too late to place a name on the ballot by petition the only recourse left was to put up a new caniddate and provide stickers for placing his name on the ballot. This it was decided to do.

Emil Sedlacek was proposed for this nomination. When called upon to express his views he said in part:

"As you all know I am a thoro Socialist. I believe in Socialist principles and methods. If elected I will do my best to put the provisions of our platform into practical operation. I am ready to sign my resignation to office and to leave the same with the Socialist Local of Thief River Falls, before election."

The nomination was unanimous and as a result everybody who goes to vote next Tuesday will be provided with a piece of gummed paper bearing Mr. Sedlacek's name and in order to vote for him, all the voter will have to do, will be to find the blank line provided by law, below the names of other candidates for Mayor and attach the sticker in the blank space.

Provisions were made for an active campaign committee in each ward to see to it that every voter be provided with a sticker and be informed how to use it. It promises to be a whirlwind close of an unusual interesting municipal campaign. The progress and results will be closely watched by all of Mr. Sedlacek's friends.

SOCIALIST'S IN LOS ANGELES

Heavy Vote Cast at Primaries, and Party May Capture City Dec. 5th.

Los Angeles, Cal. Nov. 1.—With the probable exception of City Attorney John W. Shenk, good government candidate for re-election, yesterday's primary resulted in no election. Although the record total of more than 45,000 votes were cast, the primary proved only an elimination contest to reduce the ticket from ninety-nine candidates to twenty for the final struggle over the question of whether Los Angeles shall have a Socialist city administration during the next two years.

NICLAI IS MAKING GOOD

Since Last May Force Has Increased From 4 to 16. Pay Roll $1000 a Month.

When a man takes a sudden step up in the world a great many people say "luck"; but such is not the case with Niclai and his popular La Lunda cigars. Niclai has been studying for seeral years the complaints of smokers in an endeavor to determine just what kind of a cigar would please the majority of smokers. He started a year and a half ago on the work of preparing just that kind of a cigar

The La Lunda was first put on the market last May, and took well immediately with everybody. When he began making the La Lunda he was employing four people; now he has a force of sixteen employed, turning out the best cigars at the rate of 2000 a day. His pay roll has increased to $1000 a month, and new men are being added all the time.

There is such a call for La Lundas now that it is almost impossible to keep the supply up to the demand, and the factory will have to be greatly increased in the near future. As fast as posisble more territory will be opened. The local public has been more than enthusiastic over the new cigar, and everywhere are giving their hearty support. The La Lunda is made in five sizes, a shape and size being ready for the most finicky smoker.

When asked if he would keep the cigar up to its present high standard of quality, Niclai said, "I can't afford to do otherwise; satisfied customers means repeat oredrs; it is against my business principles to cut quality for a short-lived profit; I am in a position to buy in large quantities and for cash, and that helps some."

DIESEL ENGINES, TRIUMPH GEN.

Northwestern Electric Equipment Co. Awarded Contract for Total Lighting Apparatus.

The Northwestern Electric Equipment Co., through their representative J. M. Whalen, were awarded the contract by the City Council last Saturday evening for the total lighting equipment of the new auxiliary electric light plant; including two 225 horse-power Diesel Crude Oil Engines and two 150-Kilowatt Triumph Generators, the dynamos to be direct connected to the engines.

Six Companies submitted bids, and all of them had here able representatives, except the Western Electric Co. who mailed in their bid, neglecting to send the necessary certified check amounting to two per cent of the bid. The bids submitted were for two 150-Kilowatt generating units, each unit consisting of a 250-volt direct-current generator direct connected to an oil engine of not less than 200 horse-power, and needed accessories. Saturday afternoon bids were opened as follows:

Western Electric Co., Chicago, from Minneapolis office, $4850 for two 225 revolution per minute generators, and $4950 for two 200 revolution per minute generators, f. o. b. cars.

Fairbanks-Morse Co., Beloit, Wis., $22984 for complete equipment, generators 250 revolutions per minute.

Buch-Sulzer Bros., Diesel Engine Co., St. Louis, $39600 for complete equipment, Diesel engines, Triumph generators 164 revolutions per minute. A bid of $4670, for the electrical end only was submitted.

J. G. Robertson, St. Paul, $39660 for complete equipment, Meitz and Weiss engines, Fort Wayne generators 200 revolutions per minute. A bid of $23,825 for a steam plant was submitted, Ideal compound engines and Fort Wayne generators.

Fort Wayne Co., $6171 for two 164 revolutions per minute generators, and $4895 for two 250 revolutions per minute generators, both complete and ready to run.

Triumph Generators.

The Triumph generators which the Northwestern Electric Co. will install in the new plant are the same make as are being used in our electric plant at present, and which have given every satisfaction for the past eleven years. The Triumph is a standard generator and recognized thru out the electrical world as one of the best in the market.

Diesel Engines.

The Diesel engine is built by the Busch-Sulzer Diesel Engine Co., of St. Louis. It was invented by Dr. Rudolph Diesel of Munich, Germany, and designed to operate on lowest grade fuel oils, which has resulted in superior conomies over all other forms of prime movers. The engine operates on the Diesel Cycle. This Cycle of combustion consists in compressing a full charge of free air to a predetermined temperature, above igniting point of fuel, and then injecting oil which ignites due to the heat of compression, thereby illiminating the carburetar, vaporizer, ignitor, etc. The ngine is triple cylinder single acting four-cycle. The Diesel engine has been in succesful operation for ten years, and is considered the most economical power known today—not even excepting water power when cost of development is considered and danger of water giving out, as in the case of this city. There is 50000 horse-power of these engines in use today: a large number are being used in power and light plants; many are being use for high grade work where the requirements are exacting, especially in textile mills where a very smooth running engine is needed in order to get the proper weave in the cloth.

Will Save $7300 a year.

Mr. O. A. Schilling, representing the Diesel people, before the Conucil Saturday afternoon, assumed the absolute guarantees of all other engine builders who were capable of furnishing engines which would meet the requirements, and compared them with the absolute guarantee of the Diesel people, he proving that on a fifty per cent. load factor the Diesel oil engine would show a saving of $7.300 in oil consumption alone.

It would be a different matter at this time to furnish an exact schedule of rates for power and light, but from the information furnished by the oil engine men and what the investigating committee learned on their recent trip, the city may rest assured that they will have the most economical and satisfactory plant that could possibly be installed at the present moment.

The Council Did Well

The City Council is to be complimented on the satisfactory manner in which they have handled this electrical proposition, and it is safe to say that all of them heaved a sigh of relief when the contract was finally let Saturday evening. The public at large does not realize the time and study that it has been necessary for the Council to give this affair. The expenditure of $40,000 means quite a bit to this city, and to get that amount expended in the most profitabel way when there are several good propositions being presented by salesmen who know their business, is no easy task.

It is easy enough to be pleasant when the world moves along like a song, but the man worth while is the man who can smile when he serves on the City Council, has before him a difficult proposition of the city's that will take several days of his time, knows that he will get nothing if he does give satisfaction and h—— if he accidently makes a mistake, and has a business of his own to look after in order that he may buy shoes for the baby.

BIG MEETING AT ST. CLOUD

mmigration Dep't of Development Association is Meeting With Fine Success.

The interest of Northern Minnesota is now centering on the Development Association meeting which meets at St. Cloud Dec. 8th and 9th and preparations for which are well under way.

"Interest in the work of the association was never greater than it is now and I believe the St. Cloud meeting will be a great one in point of attendance interest and the subjects to be discussed," said Secretary W. R. Mackenzie. "The Association is now on a constructive basis, has brot the various counties into a co-operative movement for development and there is much to be done at the St. Cloud meeting."

An immigration office will soon be opened in Minneapolis for the purpose of enlightening the numerous land seekers who pass thru our state on their way toCanada of the wonderful oportunities that lie nearer at hand and the greater chances and hopes that Minnesota land have to offer. A display of agricultural products from each county will form a very interesting feature of this immigration department.

FIRE WASTE PREVENTION

People of Minnesota Will Consider This Important Question Nov. 8th.

During the past few years the people of the nation, particularly those of the Northwest, have heard a great deal about the conservation of the natural resources.

In the mad scramble for the dollar the average American citizen has grown both reckless and extravagant and the waste resulting is enormous.

In the endeavor to interest the public in the necessity of conserving the forest and he producing quality of the soil the very important question of the prevention of fire waste has been overlooked, with the result that Minnsota's ash heap has yearly been increasing by leaps and bound. Taking the year of 1910 as a basis the fire waste in Minnesota was over $3.00 for every man, women and child in the State or approximately $6,500,000. Much of this waste could have been prevented had the proper care been used. If the ratio for the first six months of 1911 holds out during the entire year the per capita loss in Minnesota will be in excess of $4.00, while the loss in the European countries is on the average about 40 cents.

A good portion of this loss is, of course, paid by the insurance companies, but comes out of the people in the last analysis. Minnesota's shameful fire waste has caused it to be known throughout the country in insurance circles, as "the burning state." During 1910, fourteen insurance companies, with a combined capital of $3,750,000.00, were compelled to withdraw from the state because of extensive losses, and ten of these were so financially embarrassed as to have to either reinsure their entire business, or merge with other companies. In 1907 there were 173 fire insurance companies of all kinds operating in Minnesota with risks amounting to $683,067,378. This did not include 147 Township Mutual Companies who carried insurance to the amount of $221,278,232. At the close of 1910 there were but 170 stock fire insurance organizations operating in the state, carrying insurance to the amount of $970,354,810. The above figures do not include 148 Farmers' Mutual Companies who carry insurance to the amount of $274,003,046.

At the last annual meeting of the National Fire Marshals' Association, held in Chicago in June of this year, a resolution was passed urging the Governors of the various states to set aside a certain day to be known as "Fire Prevention Day." Fire Marshal C. E. Keller and Insurance Commissioner J. A. O. Preus took up the matter with Governor Eberhart, who realized the importance of the move and issued a proclamation setting aside Wednesday, November 8th, 1911, as "Fire Prevention Day."

At the meeting held at the Governor's office several weeks ago, attended by the state officials interested, representatives of various civic and business bodies, and executive committee consisting of Insurance Commissioner J. A. O. Preus, Assistant Fire Marshal Asa M. Wallace, Secretary of the St. Paul Association of Commerce Joseph Beek, Secretary of the Minnesota Fire Prevention Association Louis Law, and James Matchitt, editor of Northwestern Insurance, were appointed to look after the details and arrange a suitable program for a monster meeting to be held at the Palm Room of Hotel St. Paul, St. Paul, on the afternoon and evening of November 8th.

The object of this Fire Prevention Congress is to discuss the question of fire waste from all its various phases [illegible] insurance experts will handle [illegible] from their view point. Men prominent in the work of fire prevention in other states will speak, while the question of the prevention of fires in the forests of the state will be given close attention.

What does it all mean?

It means that the time has come to put a stop to the dreadful waste, especially so when it is known and realized, that with the elimination of carelessness and incendiarism 65 per cent of the fire loss in Minnesota would come to an end. A great many invitations have been issued by the Governor to attend the Congress. Mayors of all towns and cities and all fire chiefs have been urged not only to come themselves but to send representative delegations. Mayors of nearly all cities and villages in the state have responded by ordering a "clean-up day" for November 8th, and by appointing delegates to attend the Fire Prevention Congress in St. Paul. If there are any who care to come who have not been especially invited, the Governor and the Executive Committee wish it understood they will be cordially welcome to swell the enthusiastic throng that seems assured for the occasion.

The program has been arranged after much work. Every speaker is a man of national reputation in the field he will cover and an orator whose words always stir crowds fortunate enough to hear them. The addresses will be to the point, yet varied in character. Opportunity for general discussion and asking questions will also be afforded that all who desire may participate and the more knowledge be dispensed.

TO AILING WOMEN.

A Little Sound Advice Will Help Many Sufferers In Thief River Falls.

No woman can be healthy and well if the kidneys are sick. Poisons that pass off in the secretions when the kidneys are well, are retained in the body when the kidneys are sick. Kidneys and bladder become inflamed and swollen and worse troubles quickly follow. This is often the true cause of bearing down pains, lameness, backache, etc. Uric poisoning also cause headaches, dizzy spells, languor, nervousness and rheumatic pain.

When suffering so try Doan's Kidney Pills, a remedy that has cured thousands of such cases. You will get better as the kidneys get better, and health will return when the kidneys are well. Let a Thief River Falls woman tell you about Doan's Kidney Pills.

Mrs. J. O. Christopherson, 414 St. Paul Ave., Thief River Falls, Minn., says: "I have used Doan's Kidney Pills with excellent results and they have also been taken with benefit by other members of our family. We keep Doan's Kidney Pills in the house all the time and do not think we could get along without them."

The Day of the Carver.

Carving was once a serious thing. The sixteenth century carver was a professional. He had to make the joint fit the guest. The size of his slices was the thing. Then he had to know his guests and cut accordingly. A lord, for instance, at the table, and a pike was dished up whole. Smaller fry, and the pike came on in slices. The same procedure with pig. The rank of the diners decided whether it should appear at table in gold leaf or naked, whole or sliced. With bread, too, there was a difference. New or three days old baked was at the discretion of the carver as he sized up the visitors. And as for the apportioning of the tidbits according to precedence, there was no end. The old time carver, in fact, was born and then made.—London Standard.

A Delightful Change.

An artist met one of his fellows a few days ago whom he had not seen in several years. Both are very well known men. Their greeting was delightful.

"Well, well, old man, what are you doing now?" said No. 1.

"Clipping coupons," was the easy reply, "with the same pair of scissors with which I used to cut the fringe off my cuffs."—New York Sun.

Didn't Feel Comfortable.

So great was the indignation of the American colonists in 1765 against the stamp act that the Connecticut stamp officer rode into Hartford on a white horse to deposit his resignation, with a thousand armed farmers riding after him, and said he "felt like death on a pale horse with all hell following him."

Your Money Back if You Are Not Satisfied With the Medicine We Recommend.

We are so positive that our remedy will permanently relieve constipation, no matter how chronic it may be, that we offer to furnish the medicine at our expense should it fail to produce satisfactory results.

It is worse than useless to attempt to cure constipation with cathartic drugs. Laxative or cathartics do much harm. They cause a reaction, irritate, and weaken the bowels and tend to make constipation more chronic. Besides, their use becomes a habit that is dangerous.

Constipation is caused by a weakness of the nerves and muscles of the large intestine or descending colon. To expect permanent relief you must therefore tone up and strengthen these organs and restore them to healthier activity.

We want you to try Rexall Orderlies on our recommendation. They are exceedingly pleasant to take, being eaten like candy, and are ideal for children, delicate persons, and old folks, as well as for the robust. They act directly on the nerves and muscles of the bowels. They apparently have a neutral action on other associate organs or glands. They do not purge, cause excessive looseness, nor create any inconvenience whatever. They may be taken at any time, day or night. They will positively relieve chronic or habitual constipation, if not of surgical variety, and the myriads of associate or dependent chronic ailments, if taken with regularity for a reasonable length of time. 12 tablets, 10 cents; 36 tablets 25 cents; 80 tablets, 50 cents. UNCLAIMED WEALTH OF FOREIGN AND AMERICAN HEIRS.

Well-Known "Next-of-Kin" Agency in Pittsburg Is Looking Up Money and Estates That Have Been Left.

In an effort to trace heirs who, unknown to themselves, are in positions to claim fortunes in foreign lands and this country, the International Claim Agency has an old established "next-of-kin" office at Pittsburg, Pa., and is prepared to trace claims to foreign estates. While it is not generally known, there are many fortunes awaiting American claimants, according to the data secured by this agency.

To aid in the work, the agency has issued a publication of 400 pages, containing in alphabetical order names of persons who have been advertised for in the last 200 years up to the present, including many names from the chancery courts of England and Ireland and lists of lost relatives, unclaimed bank dividends, etc. Thousands of names appear in the book which lead to clews to unclaimed estates. Correspondents have long been established by the agency in Europe to aid in the work. By writing to the International Claim Agency, Pittsburg, Pa., inclosing stamp and mentioning the name of this paper, anyone may secure one of their free booklets.

SAVED MANY FROM DEATH.

W. L. Mock, of Mock, Ark., believes he has saved many lives in his 25 years of experience in the drug business. "What I always like to do," he writes, "is to recommend Dr. King's New Discovery for weak sore lungs, hard colds, hoarseness, obstinate coughs, la rippe, croup, asthma or other bronchial affection, for I feel sure that a number of my neighbors are alive and well today because they took my advice to use it. I honestly believe its the best throat and lung medicine that's made." Easy to prove he's right. Get a trial bottle free, or regular 50c or $1.00 bottle. Guaranteed by all druggists.

COLT SHOWS.

Nearly every person, whether living in the city, village or country, takes more or less interest in the horse. It is easy to get an audience when it comes to studying horses, be it at a county fair, farmers' institute, or live stock meeting of any kind. We all have our favorites among the horses in a community, and are always ready to express our opinion as to the merits and demerits of the individuals.

Such interest should be encouraged in every community, and one of the best ways of doing it is to hold "Colt Shows" during the fall and winter months. In the State of Iowa, a number of these shows have been held during the past few years, and they have done much to improve the horses in that State.

In planning these shows, the first step is to solicit, among the farmers, stallion-owners and business men, for prizes that are to be awarded. These need not be in the form of money, but may be merchandise, machinery, or live stock of some kind. After the prizes have been assured, it will be necessary to advertise the show and appoint a committee, who should make a personal canvass of the community, to encourage the owners of colts to bring them out for the contest. Proper classification should be made; so that all colts, such as draft and light colts, will not be shown in the same class. Also, have pure-bred and grades shown in separate classes. If possible, it is a good plan to have the [illegible] separate classes, and the first-prize winners come together as champions of the show.

The Colt Shows may be held in connection with local market days, or live stock meetings of some kind. Outside, uninterested parties should be secured to do the judging; and they should in each case give reasons for placing the colts. After the judging is done, practical talks on horse-breeding, by local men and those secured to do the judging, should be given.

Colt-Shows of this kind will also do much to advertise the stallions in a community. One of the best ways of judging the value of a stallion is by the crop of colts which he has sired.

Multiplying by Machinery.

The clerical staffs of many of the big insurance companies have of late years been considerably reduced by the employment of mechanical calculators. One of these, the invention of a German, is a compact little affair resembling a music box. It may be made to perform almost instantaneously the most portentous sums in addition, subtraction, multiplication by one or two factors, division, squaring and cubing. It is required, for instance, to multiply 531,075 by 924. The first factor is set by touching the little knobs representing 531,975. To multiply by the other factor you turn a handle four times, push along a slide one place and turn the handle twice, then push the slide another place onward and push the handle nine times. The long multiplication is now done without a possibility of error so far as the machine is concerned, and the dial shows 491,544,900. In the same mechanical way may be done all the other arithmetical processes.—London Globe.

Strange Timekeepers.

To ascertain the time at night the Apache Indians employed a gourd on which the stars of the heavens were marked. As the constellations rose in the sky the Indian referred to his gourd and found out the hour. By turning the gourd around he could tell the order in which the constellations might be expected to appear.

The hill people of Assam reckon time and distance by the number of quids of betel nuts chewed. It will be remembered how, according to Washington Irving, the Dutch colonial assembly was invariably dismissed at the last puff of the third pipe of tobacco of Governor Wouter Van Twiller.

A Montagnis Indian of Canada will set up a tall stick in the snow when traveling ahead of friends who are to follow. He marks with his foot the line of shadow cast, and by the change in the angle of the shadow the oncoming party can tell on arriving at the spot about how far ahead the leader is.

Turtles Are Slow.

"Here!" called the impatient guest. The obsequious waiter came to his side, says Judge.

"Seems to me that soup I ordered is a long time getting to me."

"Yes, sir, but you must remember, sir, that you ordered turtle soup."

The Idea.

"Come, dear. Can't you hurry a little? We'll soon be too late to go to church at all."

"Oh, no, dear," she said softly while slowly buttoning her gloves: "we can't be too late. I've got on my new suit."

Official Paper of The City.

FRIDAY, NOV. 3, 1911.

Congressman Stephenson has declraed for LaFolette and against Taft. As a result, his federal appointees in this district are attempting the difficult feat of riding horses going in opposite directions at one and the same time.—Warren Register

The next meeting of the Northern Minnesota Development Association meets at St. Cloud Dec. 8th and 9th. Why not invite the Governor to repeat his Brainard speech, there especially as regards the matter of a fair representation for Northern Minnesota and what he was going to do about it.

The great Northern Railroad has issued a new map and left Red Lake Falls and Thief River Falls off, never mentioned them. The officials of the road, having lately visited both of these cities, must have been ashamed of the buildings they call Great Northern depots and disliked to call any more attention to them than was necessary.

ABOUT THAT EXTRA SESION.

Various opinions as to the advisibility of an extra session are being given by the papers of the state now-a-days and a few views may be of interest.

Our representative, D. P. O'Neill, in a letter to the Bemidji Pioneer dated Oct. 23, 1911 contains the following:

"Yes, certainly, by all means, let us have a special session of the legislature to reapportion the state. There can be no doubt about the language used by the Governor at Brainard and I for one believe he will do just what he said he would.

"I am firmly of the opinion that if the Governor would call an extra session of the legislature for the purpose of re-districting the state that both the House and the Senate would have a bill, perhaps not quite what we would demand, but a bill which would give to Northern Minnesota a much larger and fairer representation."

Speaker H. H. Dunn among other things says: "I am most emphatically in favor of an extra session— My view is that we should take up and consider those measures which the legislature apparantly favored."

Attorney Middleton of Baudette, who is to be a delegate to St. Cloud says:

"I am only too glad to do every thing that can be done to bring about an extra session.

"We must have reapportionment.

"I am unable to understand the apparent apathy of the governor.

"Quite a number of those who voted against reapportionment now would vote for it.

"I expect to attend the St. Cloud convention and will most heartily support any resolution demanding of Governor Eberhart that he redeem his pledge."

Representative Bouck, of Royalton doubts the probability of a reapportionment bill meeting with any great success at an extra session but would be favorable if he thot it possible to pass one.

Socialists in Los Angeles

The final election is set for Dec. 5, when Job. Harriman, one of the lawyers in the defense of the McNamara brothers and Socialist candidate for mayor, again will contest with George Alexander, the incumbent, Republican and good government candidate.

What Will Women Do?

The great question which confronted political workers today was what will the women do? The newly enfranchised citizens can muster a voting strength nearly equal to the men. Admittedly they hold the balance of power.

With but five small precincts yet remaining to be totalled the vote on mayoralty candidates stood:

Harriman, 19,883; Alexander, 16,218; Mushet, 8,009; a primary in favor of the Socialist candidate of over 3,000.

Women Oppose Socialist.

The Alexander forces early last night, forseeing the fight that would be made at the regular election Dec. 5, began formulating plans for a whirl wind campaign "to wipe Socialism off the map."

Committees were named to take charge of a house to house canvass for the purpose of registering all women; the "Women's Protective league," composed entirely of women who will have a vote at the December election, announced that it had pledges from 1,000 members, each of whom personally will see ten voters and ask them to vote for Alexander; stations for registeration for women will be opened in the city parks, various women's clubs and newspaper offices, and no effect will be spared to insure victory for the Good Government forces.

The Socialists, on the other hand, who admittedly had the best managed campaign ever seen in this city, will redouble their efforts to elect Harriman, continuing their efforts along the same lines employed in the primary campaign.

Showing Was Amazing.

Rising from a voting strength of a paltry 2,000 a few months ago to 15,000 or more yesterday, the Socialists showing in the primary was regarded as amazing. In the last election, Mayor Alexander received an overwhelming majority. Another fact received by political observers as an astounding election phenomenon was that that same returns, uniformly made so excellent a showing against the candidates indorsed by the "Good Government" forces which have been in power since the fall of the administration that went down with Mayor Harper in the graft investigation which culminated three years ago in the first invocation of the recall.

Little effort has been made to account for the partially expected result of the primary, beyond the statements of campaign managers and newspaper editors that the Socialistic showing was a manifestation of general political unrest and impatience locally with regard to affairs connected with the $23,000,000 aqueduct, now nearing completion, and municipal harbor, light and power railroad projects.

Wolfe is Confident.

Frank E. Wolfe, formerly managing editor of the Morning Herald and Socialist candidate for council, said today:

"The Socialists will win the coming election. We will receive 90 per cent of the vote cast for all candidates except Alexander, and we have registered three women to the opposition's one.'

To meet in St. Cloud

Efforts are also being made to raise a fund of $12,000 to maintain this bureau for the coming year and if successful this fund will probably be greatly increased another year. This money is to be raised by assessing members land one cent per acre, a plan which has already proven successful in Wisconsin, where they expect to raise $100,000 this year, having for several years had an annual income of $40,000 gained in this way: and in North Dakota where a yearly fund of $60,000 has been pledged for three years.

The money is to be raised by an assessment of 1 cent per acre against lands held by members of the Development Association, all land interests in Northern Minnesota including holders of cut-over lands, prairie lands and other large interests. Land agents and banks interested in country lands will be asked to contribute also and the railroad companies will be asked for subscriptions based on the benefits they will derive in the settlement of country tributary to their roads.

And to make the St. Cloud meeting of more general interest fewer papers will be read and more time given to discussions.

It is not too early to boost for the next Northern Minnesota development association meeting at St. Cloud.

BJORKMAN.

B. Dan Bjorkman, Public Ownership, for alderman 4th ward, when interviewed Tuesday morning submitted a signed statement as follows: To the Citizens of Thief River Falls:

I was nominated by the party for alderman of the 4th ward, but am not an aspirant for the job. Every one who knows me knows that I am a Socialist and I adhere to the principles set forth in our national and city platform. I am representing no big business, but believe that all officers are but servants of the people, wherefore they should only carry out the wishes of their constituents. I am opposed to the granting of franchises as the expense is always to come out of the taxpayer, but will give my hearty support to anything reasonable in helping the working-class, whose cause I represent. If cause it shall be my greatest pleasure found worthy to represent such a to know I had the confidence of the workers, and their cause is my cause.

EXTENSION DIVISION NOTES.

The family needs fresh air in cold, just as much as in hot weather. It is a mistake to so fasten storm-windows that they cannot be opened. Better no storm windows at all. For more disease comes from poor ventilation than from insufficient warmth. Storm windows save coal; but, unless so put up that they do not prevent ventilation, they muitlply doctors' bills.

It is worth while knowing that oats are worth approximately 33 cents per bushel, and corn approximately 63 cents per bushel for feed, when bran is worth $20 per ton. It often pays to sell oats and buy either bran or corn.

The consoildation of schools is a pertinent question to discuss and understand in your community. Its successful inaguration means better school facilities for the boys and girls better roads, and a general uplift to the community.

While getting corn for the hogs some night, after a hard day's work, remember that many Minnesota farmers avoid this unnecessary chore by turning their hogs into the field, allowing them to help themselves. This practice is worth looking into.

Every time we see a straw-pile burning, we think of the possible value of the vegetable matter thus wasted, if properly applied to some old grainfield that is becoming deficient in vegetable matter, owing to continuous grain cropping.

Co-operation, we feel, is the password for progress in many agricultural communities. Organize a Farmers' Club is one of the best possible Bulletin No. 1. A good, live Farmers' Cub is one of the best possible educational institutions you can have in your community.

How does your oat yield compare with your corn yield in pounds of feed produced? A pound of corn is worth as much for feed as a pound of oats, provided it is fed in a balanced ration. On the average Minnesota farm, corn yields 1.6 times as many pounds per acre as oats.

A few rainy days may now be spent with profit on many farm, getting things in shape for winter. Window lights could be put in; broken hinges fixed up; stanchions, stalls and floors patched; and do not forget the house. The women-folks may need a handy man for a day or so.

Do not let the stock stop growing or producing milk during the fall, for lack of feed or from expense of fed, or not at all. Keep the stock comfortable by supplying them with shelter from bad weather, and see that they have plenty to eat.

One of the best investments that any farmer can make will in view to [illegible] rest is in giving those boys and girls a good liberal education, that will enable them to compete with others and hold their own in the future. One thousand dolars and a good sized education equip a young man much better for his struggles in life than will two thousand dollars and no education.

Co-operateive grain cleaning, we beleive, will be as common in the future as is the co-oprative creamery now.

"I do not believe there is any other medicine so good for whooping cough as Chamberlain's Cough Remedy," writes Mrs. Francis Turpin, Junction City, Ore. This remedy is also unsurpassed for colds and croup. For sale by all druggists.

Like those in many another smitten region of the Southwest, the farmers in the neighborhood of Tulsa, Oklahoma, lost their crops by the drouth of last summer. But, acting under the advice of business men, they have organized themselves into a sort of "credit-union," and by giving a combination note are able to secure from the banks all the money they need, payable after next season's crop is harvested. That is a deal more sensible and independent way than pettioning the Legislature for a loan.

Training an Elephant.

In training the elephant to perform tricks advantage is taken of the fact that the feet of the animal are peculiarly sensitive and he dreads any injury to them. Many of his tricks are based upon this principle. Thus he is made to place one foot upon a low pedestal: then the other foot is tapped gently, and he raises this and places it beside the other—to get it out of harm's way. The hind feet are treated similarly in turn, the front feet being hit every time they are placed on the ground. In this way all four feet are finally placed upon the tub. The trick of inducing an elephant to partake of a meal is very simple. Animals will naturally eat anything placed before them, and it is only necessary to open a bottle of "pop" once or twice and present it by hand when the animal may be trusted to find out for himself how to get at its contents. In all such cases the essence of the training consists in infinite patience, kindness and constant repetition, showing the animal over and over again how a thing is done in precisely the same way and then forcing him to do it himself.—Scientific American.

The Old Man's Plea.

He got eight years in Sing Sing, but nevertheless the plea for mercy of Joseph Amos Washington Bruen was one of the finest prose poems ever uttered in the general sessions of New York.

The old man addressed the court as follows:

"'Deed, yo' honah, I can't say much. Mah record am sure against me. I hab served moh time than sixteen years in prison for de same offense. All I have to remark (an' I hope yo' honah will not be too stern) is dat I just simply can't keep away from a hencoop nohow when I heah dem pullets callin'."

Rudyard Kipling expressed the very same idea when he wrote those two familiar lines:

For the wind is in the palm trees, an' the temple bells they say:
"Come you back, you British soldier; come you back to Mandalay!"

The chicken habit once formed is as tenacious and irresistible as the Burma girl habit.—Boston Globe.

Can't Beat the Head Waiter.

"You can't get ahead of a head waiter," said a man who spends a great deal of time at one of the New York hotels. "Of course the tips at a hotel like this mount up, and, as there are several restaurants, if you give $15 or $20 to the head waiter of each one of them it is too much. I sweetened one head waiter, but neglected to give the autocrat of another restaurant anything. Soon I found that it was very difficult for me to get a table in that restaurant. The head waiter would always be looking another way or a table that I fancied had been engaged. I got even by giving my waiters extra big tips, and it soon got so that when I entered the restaurant half a dozen upraised fingers would beckon me. But soon the head waiter was on to my game, and it got so that almost every table offered me was claimed by the head waiter on the ground that it was reserved."—New York Sun.

Pullman's Little Joke.

S. S. Beman, the architect, had the most to do with the building of the town of Pullman, although acting on certain suggestions from the founder of the colony. When plans had been completed and the perfunctory work of execution was under way the architect said to the car company chief:

"Now that we are well started, Mr. Pullman, I want to ask you if you have given any thought to naming the town."

"A great deal," said Mr. Pullman. "I think it is only fair that you should have recognition, and I have decided upon a composite name that will immortalize you and myself at the same time. We will do this by taking the first syllable of my name and the last syllable of yours."—Chicago Post.

Browning and a Cabman.

The gondoliers of Venice are supposed to know their Tasso and Ariosto. The following little incident leads to the supposition that Browning's "Ride to Ghent" may possibly be found in the poetic repertory of the London cabman. A neighbor one day saw Mr. Browning alight from a hansom. The cabby looked at the fare in his open palm with an air of dissatisfaction and [illegible] good poet, but you're a bad pay master."—Mrs. Andrew Crosse in "Red Letter Days of My Life."

His Calling.

"What are you doing now, Wiggsthorpe?"

"Settlement work."

"Settlement work? You don't look the part."

"That's what I'm doing, just the same; I'm collecting bills for old Spotcash."—Exchange.

An Easy Task.

Lover (mournfully)—Have you learned to love another? Flirt (who had just broken off her engagement with him)—Oh, no, George. I didn't have to learn. The man is very, very wealthy, and the love came spontaneously.

"Music Hath Charms."

"What on earth d'you keep clapping for? That last singer was awful!"

"I know, but I liked the style of her clothes, and I want to have another look at them."—London Opinion.

DEFENSE NOTES EXCEPTION

Objects to Judge's Rulings in McNamara Trial.

Los Angeles, Cal., Oct. 31.—Judge Walter Bordwell accused the defense in the McNamara murder case of trying to circumvent his ruling and rejected two challenges against veniremen which formed the basis of his suppositions. He also refused the defense the privilege of challenge against a juror who said he would not convict a prisoner in a capital case on circumstantial evidence alone, holding that his challenge was available only to the state.

Under these rulings the jury box contained at the close of court three men passed for cause by both sides in addition to the four qualified when the session opened. To both of the court's main rulings Attorney Clarence S. Darrow took exception in behalf of his client, James B. McNamara, who is on trial for the murder of Charles J. Haggerty, a victim of the Los Angeles Times explosion one year ago.

EMINENT COUNSEL IN STEEL TRUST CASE

Government Intends to Employ Able Assistants.

Washington, Oct. 31.—Attorney General Wickersham is expected soon to announce the names of the lawyers who will assist Jacob M. Dickinson, the government's special counsel, in the suit for dissolution of the United States Steel corporation. The attorney general intends that the government's lawyers will not suffer by comparison with the counsel for the defense."

In the meantime the department of justice is organizing its prosecution. Returns are made daily as subpoenas and copies of the complaint are served on the defendants.

Chairman Stanley of the congressional committee which has been investigating the United States Steel corporation telegraphed to his representatives here that he will come to Washington immediately after the election in Kentucky next Tuesday and plan for an early resumption of the committee's inquiry.

One of the first things the Stanley committee expects to take up will be the steel corporation's relations with transportation companies.

SHOT TO PROTECT HER HONOR

Assertion of Mrs. McRee in Testifying in Own Behalf.

Opelousas, La., Oct. 31.—In the little red brick courthouse of St. Landry parish, crowded as it has been never before, Mrs. Zoe Runge McRee, member of one of the oldest families in the state, faced her accusers and gave her version of why she killed Allan Garland, member of a family equally as prominent as her own.

She said she shot "to protect her honor," but her only explanation of why each bullet struck the young Tulane student in the back was that she was so excited she did not know whether Garland turned to flee as she shot. She said she got the pistol when Garland insulted her and fired when he advanced on her, saying "You cannot scare me."

TAFT CONCEDES DEFEAT LIKELY

Intimates People May Turn Republicans Out of Power.

SPEAKS AT CHICAGO DINNER

President Hints That There Is Danger of His Party Being Beaten at the Polls in the General Election Next Fall—Supporters Present Ascribe His Remarks to Weariness After Long Tour of Speechmaking.

Chicago, Oct. 31.—President Taft surprised a large audience at the dinner of the Hamilton club by what most of his hearers construed as an admission of the possibility of Republican defeat in the coming national election. He was speaking to what had promised to be an enthusiastic audience.

Republicans present hastened to ascribe the president's utterances to weariness after his long tour of speechmaking and especially after the three days' hard "campaign" in Chicago. It was his last public utterance in Chicago before leaving for Pittsburg. He said:

"Now we are at—some people think—the crisis in the Republican party with reference to its continuance in the guidance of the nation. I am hopeful that the good people of the country, who know a good thing when they see it, have only chastened us in an off year, in order that we may be better hereafter, but with no intention of shifting from shoulders that are fitted to bear the burden of the present problems and carry them to a successful solution to those which are untried and which have new theories of action that we do not believe in and that we don't believe the people believe in.

Refers to One Consolation.

"However, if so be it that they desire to make a change, we shall loyally support the new government under any conditions, with the hope it will inure to the benefit of the country, but with the consolation that if after one trial the people think they ought to go back to the old party that has served them so well in the progressive days of the nation they will do so—we can bear that, my friends; that is all."

Following his address the president retired to his hotel for rest. Though he professed no weariness the three days' steady strain had told on him and it was a tired man who led the presidential party out of Chicago over the Pennsylvania railroad to Pittsburg.

The address before the Hamilton club, in which the possibility of defeat found expression, followed the laying of the corner stone of the new home of the Hamilton club, one of the leading Republican clubs of the Middle West. A surging crowd in the street strove so energetically for a glimpse of the president he was unable to speak for several minutes preceding the actual laying of the stone.

The corner stone ceremony followed a trip through the stock yards and a visit to the national dairy show at the Dexter pavilion. The remainder of his day was spent at his hotel in receiving politicians and friends.

CLAPP SPEAKS AT BANQUET

Booms La Follette for President at Rochester, Minn.

Rochester, Minn., Oct. 31.—Declaring that in La Follette is the greatest constructive statesman of the time Senator Moses E. Clapp at Rochester made his first public declaration in his home state for his Wisconsin colleague for the presidency.

The last speaker of several at the banquet of the progressives of the First district Senator Clapp merely echoed what the others before him had said, pledging their allegiance to La Follette. Toned down somewhat by the criticisms of his recent Chicago speech and his association with the politicians who congregated during the Taft visit last week the senator did not "explosivista" very strongly and though he used strong language in his characterization of the party leaders in general, he made no direct reference to the president.

SUIT AGAINST [illegible] STEEL TRUST

Government Brings Action to Have Billion-Dollar Corporation Declared Illegal.

ASKS ITS DISSOLUTION

Action Is the Most Sweeping Anti-Trust Move Made by Department of Justice.

Trenton, N. J., Oct. 27.—The government's long planned suit to break up the so called "steel trust" was begun here in the United States circuit court. It was the most sweeping anti-trust action ever brought by the department of justice.

The government asks not only for the dissolution of the United States Steel corporation, but for the dissolution of all constituents or subsidiary companies which are alleged to have combined in violation of the Sherman law to "maintain, or attempt to maintain, a monopoly of the steel business." There are thirty-six subsidiary corporations named as defendants.

J. Pierpont Morgan, John D. Rockefeller, Andrew Carnegie, Charles M. Schwab, George W. Perkins, E. H. Gary, John D. Rockefeller, Jr., Henry C. Frick, Charles Steele, James Gayley, William H. Moore, J. H. Moore, Edmund C. Converse, Percival Roberts, Jr., Daniel G. Reid, Norman B. Ream, P. A. Widener and William P. Palmer are named individually as defendants.

The United States Steel corporation, Carnegie Steel company, Carnegie company of New Jersey, Federal Steel company, National Steel company, American Steel and Wire company of New Jersey, National Tube company, Shelby Steel Tube company, American Tinplate company, American Sheet and Tinplate company, American Steel Hoop company, American Bridge company, Lake Superior Consolidated Iron mines, all of which were organized under the New Jersey laws, and the H. C. Frick Coke company, Tennessee Coal and Iron and Railway company and the Great Western Mining company are named as corporate defendants.

Iron Ore Lease Illegal.

The steel corporation's lease of the Great Northern railway's ore properties, which the directors of the steel company formally decided to cancel, is alleged to be illegal. This action of the directors was taken but a few hours before the filing of the bill. The government acknowledges that it was advised of the steel corporation's intention in this respect, but states that under the terms of the lease no cancellation would be effective until Jan. 1, 1915, and there is no limit upon the amount of ore that can be taken out in the meantime.

Sensational allegations fairly topple over each other in the government's petition, which is an equity proceeding praying for injunction to estop continuance of the alleged monopoly and such other relief as the court may grant.

The steel corporation's acquisition of the Tennessee Coal and Iron company during the panic of 1907 is declared illegal and scathingly criticised. The petition declares that E. H. Gary and Henry C. Frick misled former President Roosevelt when they told him "that but little benefit will come to the steel corporation from the purchase."

"The president," it says, "was not made fully acquainted with the state of affairs in New York relevant to the transaction as they existed. If he had been fully advised he would have known that a desire to stop the panic was not the sole moving cause, but that there was also a desire and purpose to acquire control of a company that recently assumed a positive position of potential competition of great significance.

Took Advantage of Situation.

"It is certain that the corporation availed itself of the embarrassment of Moore & Schley (New York brokers who had large holdings of Tennessee stock) at a most critical period and the hammering of the Tennessee stock and the threatening of a general financial calamity, to acquire the control of a competitor taking on a formidable aspect.

"The corporation thus greatly strengthened its control of the country's iron ore supply, its predominating position in the South's iron and steel trade eliminated a competitor and unlawfully acquired a power which is a menace to the welfare of the country, and should be destroyed."

Reference is made to the Gary dinners, although not by name, as meetings which accomplished more than written pools or agreements, which frequently were broken.

Interlocking directorates through which those in power in the steel corporation held positions of influence on the directorates of other powerful corporations are mentioned as "a method more refined, more euphonious; but none the less more effective than pools."

Mr. Croaker

By MARTHA V. MONROE

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

"I wouldn't be John Croaker's wife for anything," said Mrs. Busby to Mrs. Emmons.

"Why not?"

"He's well named. He's a croaker, true enough. Besides, he's a grumbler, always snarling. The nicest man in this town is Ernest Schoefield. He always has a pleasant word for every one, is always smiling, and"—

"I have no use for him."

"Why not?"

"I prefer Croaker. Somehow I never feel sure of Schoefield's nice sayings. When Croaker growls at me I know what I'm getting."

"I reckon that's because you're kind o' queer yourself."

Mrs. Croaker had trouble at times with her husband. When she asked him for $5 to buy some needed article he would say, with a grumbling tone: "You can't get anything but the cheapest for $5, and there is no economy in cheap things. If you're going to get it at all, get the best." Then he would hand her double the amount she asked.

A little daughter, Alice, the only child of the Croakers, would occasionally get a pleasant word from her father, but she was the only one who ever succeeded in doing so. Andy Schoefield, a son of the Schoefield mentioned by Mrs. Busby, was a schoolmate of Alice's, and the children were growing up to be lovers. Andy's father didn't like the match and warned his boy against it. As for Croaker, he simply croaked as to the horrible future in store for the couple, since neither of them would have anything on which to begin life.

"Why, Ernest Schoefield is rich," protested Mrs. Croaker.

"How do you know?" snarled her husband.

"Why, everybody says he is, and he's just bought a $3,000 automobile."

"Oh, he has, has he? Has he paid for it?"

When Andy Schoefield became of age and Alice was nineteen it was evident that their hearts were set upon each other. It was about this time that Mrs. Busby and Mrs. Emmons met one morning at the greengrocer's.

"Isn't it awful about Mr. Schoefield?" said Mrs. Busby.

"What's awful?"

"Why, haven't you heard? He's failed and stuck all his intimate friends. And such a nice man too!"

"Well, Mrs. Busby, you know I don't fancy these people that are so nice to everybody. Their niceness is usually only skin deep."

"They say he was living beyond his means."

"Just so. That kind o' persons usually do. It's their disposition to look on the best side of everything, so they don't see the dark side. If they'd keep an eye on the dark side they'd come out better in the end. The bright side don't need watchin'."

"And just think how hard it is on the young lovers, Andy Schoefield and Alice Croaker. Everybody said what a nice thing her being engaged to Andy was. Mr. Schoefield gave out only a day or two before he skipped that he was goin' to give the couple a house."

"Reckon that was to keep up confidence."

"Well, I'm sorry for Alice. I should think she'd want to get married if only to get away from that crusty old father of hers."

"Oh, I don't think Mr. Croaker's so bad. I kind o' like to have him spar at me once in awhile. I know he ain't foolin' me, and that's more than I know of these people who are always givin' me soft sodder. Good mornin', Mrs. Busby."

Mrs. Busby went away muttering: "The reason she likes old Croaker is she's one o' the same kind herself."

The Schoefield failure threw the Schoefield and the Croaker families both into a painful condition. First there was the disgrace attached to Andy's father running away to get rid of criminal proceedings against him; second, Andy hadn't a cent laid up; third, to mention marriage under the circumstances to Mr. Croaker was considered by Mrs. Croaker and Alice to be equivalent to shaking a red rag before a mad bull.

However, Andy had a position paying him $20 a week, and on this the two resolved to be married. Mrs. Croaker broke the news to her husband, expecting some violent expressions, and she got them.

"They're going to be married on $20 a week, are they? That's about enough to pay house rent."

"They can board at first, and if you can spare, say, $100 for clothes for Alice she won't need to spend anything in that way for a year or two."

"A hundred dollars! That's all rot."

"Well, fifty then."

Mr. Croaker went off to his den, where he kept his desk, and, coming back, handed his wife a check for $1,000.

"Why, pa, what does this mean?"

"Trousseau," grunted the old man and went away grumbling about the folly of young people trying to bite off more than they could chew.

A third meeting occurred between Mrs. Busby and Mrs. Emmons.

"Mornin', Mrs. Emmons. Have you heard about that $10,000 house that crusty old Croaker gave his daughter when she was married?"

"No; did he? I always said I'd rather have that man hit me than another man talk soft to me."

As We Speak It.

A German who had come to America to master our language was being shown behind the scenes of a vaudeville theater by one of his American friends.

"That man," said the American, indicating an actor with a wave of his hand, "is taking off his makeup to make up for another take-off."

The Solicitor

By CELIA ATKINSON

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

John Gardner was down on his luck. He had been well born and well educated. Then one misfortune after another came upon him and the family to which he belonged just as he was ready to make a start in life and threw him, so to speak, on his beam ends. He went about looking for a position, but since he had had no experience in any department of business he received no better offer than to solicit orders for a patent gas burner.

Gardner, who had not yet worn out his good clothes and was afraid of meeting some of his old friends who would know what he was doing, kept his samples down in the bottom of his pocket. He had sufficient pluck, however, to drag himself from one house to another, and whenever he was received by any one whom he was sure he had never seen before would produce a gas burner and proceed to expatiate on what a wonderful light it would make and how little gas would be burned.

One morning he rang the bell of a residence, and the door was opened by a young girl. He didn't mind soliciting of old women, old men or servants, but girls troubled him. He was about to ask if some one he was trying to find lived there, but changed his mind, concluding that as short a way as any to make an excuse to go on would be to produce a sample. The girl would say she had no use for it and that would end the matter.

"I am canvassing for a patent gas burner," he began, when the girl, much to his surprise, said, "Step inside." He did so, and she led the way to a drawing room. Then, asking him to be seated, she waited for him to proceed with his harangue. There was nothing left for him but to do so.

"This gas burner," he said, "is arranged to separate the gas into minute streams, so that it will mingle freely with the oxygen of the air, producing a brilliant light and consuming a minimum of gas. Instead of the enormous gas bills run up by using the ordinary form of burner, the consumer finds himself or herself indebted to the company for a bagatelle."

"Are you quite sure," interrupted the girl, "that the company will not at the end of the month be indebted to the consumer?"

Gardner looked at her with a constrained smile, but, seeing no sign of pleasantry and scarcely knowing what he was saying, staggered on.

"We scarcely claim that for it, but we are willing to guarantee that the monthly gas bills will be reduced by 50 per cent of what they are when the ordinary burner is used."

"At what price do you sell your burners?"

"At 10 cents each."

"I will take a hundred of them. I suppose you will put them on for me."

"Large orders like that are usually put on by some one from the factory."

"I am opposed to allowing Tom, Dick and Harry the freedom of the house. I shall expect you to put them on yourself."

"Certainly, if you wish it. Will tomorrow at this hour be convenient for you?"

"Yes."

Gardner bowed himself out, astonished. The most that was required of him was to introduce the burner. It was not expected that he would make sales of more than a few burners at a time. But here were a hundred ordered at 10 cents apiece. That would be $10, of which his commission would be 60 per cent, or $6. He was quite elated.

The next day he called with the burners and was received by the young lady, who informed him that her mother was indisposed and it was necessary that the house should be kept quiet. The burners, therefore, could not be put on that day, but if he would call the next afternoon at 3 o'clock the work might be done. She intimated that no haste was necessary either in the burners being put on or his proceeding with his soliciting. She asked him into the library, where she introduced the subject of books, upon which she discoursed with as much volubility as he had used in demonstrating burners. When he departed he was a good deal puzzled.

But he was more so when the next afternoon he called to put on the burners. A phaeton was standing at the door, and when he went inside the young lady, attired for going out, was putting on her gloves.

"I think," she said, "that I'll not have the burners put on this afternoon. To tell the truth, I am a stockholder in a gas company, and your burners consume so little gas that I fear a complication."

"What complication?" asked Gardner, opening his eyes.

"Why, I am afraid that as a stockholder I shall become indebted to myself as a consumer."

The two stood looking at each other for a few moments, when a smile broke over the girl's face.

"I knew you," she said, "from the moment you rang the doorbell the other day. You are John Gardner, and I met you not very long ago at Mrs. Tucker's. I have heard of your misfortunes and admire your pluck in taking hold of the world even if your first grip is nothing better than a gas burner. I'm going to ride and shall be happy to have you go with me."

Six months later Gardner married the girl and a fortune.

He Knew.

"It's hard to collect money nowadays."

"Been trying to collect some?"

"No, oh, no! But a lot of people have been trying to collect from me."

He Knew.

"It's the first $1,000 that's hard to get," explained the eminent millionaire.

"I know that," responded the mere man. "I've been trying to accumulate it for the past forty years."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

WON AT FOOTBALL

By CARL SARGENT CHASE

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

"You are too young, my dear, to marry, by several years, and so is Billy, who graduated only last year and is at the foot of the second lieutenants."

The words were spoken by Mrs. Baxter, wife of Major Baxter, instructor at West Point, to her daughter, Annette, aged seventeen years and eight months and engaged to Lieutenant Billy Dolman of the [illegible]th infantry.

"Besides," continued Mrs. Baxter, with a teasing sparkle in her eye, "Billy is coaching the football team for the annual game with the middies and has all he can do to fit them for the struggle. He has no time to devote to preparation for matrimony."

"I wish you weren't so devoted to our boys winning, mamma," said the daughter.

"And I wish Billy to have his mind on his coaching exclusively."

"Perhaps if he knew that you had consented to our marriage it would make him so happy that he would pull the boys through. He thinks about your refusal all the time."

"I'll tell you what I'll do," said Mrs. Baxter after some thought. "If Billy's team wins I'll consent to your wedding the minute the game is over."

"May I say that to him?"

"Yes, you may, and that if he loses you must wait a year."

Annette rushed off to the telephone, called up her lover and announced the conditions.

"Mother is demented about our boys winning the annual game this year, and that has induced her to yield what she has yielded. I never dreamed that she would ever give us a chance. She has persistently said that I shouldn't marry before I am twenty."

Billy was so excited over the news that he told his chum, who told his other chum, and Annette told her bosom friend, who told her other bosom friend, and the result was that within a few days every one knew "as a great secret" that if Billy Dolman brought the army team up to an efficiency that would enable them to beat the middies he was to win a wife. If not he would have to wait a year. Besides the waiting there's many a slip twixt the cup and the lip. Then, since all the post knew it, Billy told the team, adding that his cup of joy or misery was in their hands.

All the world loves a lover, and the spirit the announcement infused into the team was something remarkable. Every man went into more steady training than before, and not a man shirked a moment of practice when the team was being coached. Billy worked with them like a Titan. Indeed, so hard did he make it for them that every man who was not physically up to his work got out and gave place to a better. The result was that when the last few days before the game came round Billy was conscious of having as good a team as could be turned out of the material at his disposal.

Annette one afternoon during the training went out to view the practice game, but her appearance was marked by a cheer, which brought the blush of maidenly modesty to her cheek, and she did not venture on the field again.

Then came the day of the fight, which that year took place at West Point. The president of the United States, the chief of the general staff and hosts of others in authority were spectators. The middies marched on to the ground headed by their band, while the cadets kept step to the strains of their own martial music. Annette, conscious that she, being the prize of the day, would attract unbounded attention, refused to be present, but the captain of the army team sent word to her that if she did not come to cheer his boys he would not answer for the consequences. This brought her to terms, and when Lieutenant Dolman escorted her to her seat she was received by a huzza from the army team and the waving of handkerchiefs from the spectators.

In the first half the middies made one touchdown, distinguishing themselves by brilliant play. The army men showed as much vigor and determination at the end of the half as at the beginning. In the second half that esprit born of the feeling that the fate of a pair of lovers depended on their efforts began to tell on the army men, while the elan of the earlier part of the game shown by the middies began to give way. Billy Dolman kept himself constantly before their notice. And from her seat Annette Baxter waved to them. When time was called for the game to close the score stood 12 to 4 in favor of the army.

The army team before leaving the field went in a body to where Annette had been sitting to cheer her, but the bird had flown. Headed by Lieutenant Dolman they went to Major Baxter's quarters and demanded the girl. When it was found that they were about to be put off Mrs. Baxter announced that she was ready to keep her agreement and that the wedding should take place that evening.

And so it was that in the presence of the team, to whom leave was given to attend, William Dolman and Annette Baxter were married. There was a considerable stir about Major Baxter's quarters during the evening by those who couldn't get inside, and after the ceremony the bride and groom, responding to calls, went outside and received hearty cheers from all who were interested in the game that had been won.

A Thanksgiving Package

By SHEELA ESTHER DUNN

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

"We're too poor, John," said Mrs. Hardwick to her husband, "to have a Thanksgiving dinner this year. Besides, we've nothing to be thankful for. The loss of our little Molly has taken all the thankfulness out of me."

John said what he could to comfort his wife, but there is little comfort in such partings, and a happy family circle had been broken by the loss of little Molly, the baby. It had occurred as many misfortunes occur from poverty. This is the way it happened:

Mrs. Hardwick was taken ill when the baby was but six months old. John was away, and there was no one to attend to her or the household, and more especially the baby, who needed more attention than any of the family. A neighbor came in to take charge and concluded to send Molly away till the mother should have recovered. Mrs. Hardwick had an aunt living at the next station on the railroad, and since the aunt could not leave her home it was decided to send the baby to her in the care of an express messenger. A label was tied [illegible] with the address [illegible] the shipper and the consignee [illegible] express car [illegible] to its destination.

Unfortunately an accident occurred on the railroad that upset all these calculations. A man passing the scene of the accident, hearing a cry from some bushes beside the track, sought the cause and found Molly. Near by lay her bassinet. She was alive and apparently unhurt. A child falls without resistance and is therefore much less liable to injury than an adult. Besides, in this case the fall was supposed to have been broken by the bushes. The finder took up the child and its bassinet and carried it home to his wife. The bassinet had fallen into a ditch, and the address on it had been so discolored by the water that it was unintelligible.

Now, Molly had fallen into the hands of a couple who had no children and had given up all hope of having children. Not knowing where to send Molly, they concluded to keep her, at least till they could find her parents, and if not found they would adopt her.

After the accident the Hardwicks learned nothing of their child. The express messenger had been killed, they could not learn where the baby was at the time of the accident, and she was never found. But this was not remarkable, for on one side of the railroad was a stream, and the body might have been thrown from the car into the water and carried away by the current.

At any rate, there was not the slightest probability that Molly was alive, and her parents mourned her as lost. Mrs. Hardwick recovered from her illness, and the family affairs were set to rights, all except the return of little Molly.

The day before Thanksgiving, pitying friends sent the Hardwicks a dinner for the occasion. But the mourning mother declared that she had not the heart to cook it. Thanksgiving day being a holiday, John stayed at home, but there was no rejoicing. The children found it difficult to make a holiday when their parents were so dismal. At noon the little ones began to feel hungry, and, yielding to their importunities, their mother consented to roast a turkey that had been sent them. She had hardly got it in the oven when there was the sound of a heavy truck stopping before the house. A man ran up the steps and kicked at the door. When it was opened the cause of his kicking was apparent. Both of the man's hands were in use. In one he held a bassinet, in the other a book.

"Sign for this," he said.

There was a simultaneous exclamation of surprise and joy from the family as Molly was handed in. Looking up at her mother, she smiled and cooed. Mrs. Hardwick seized her and clasped her to her breast.

"Sign for this," repeated the man, holding out the book in which he took receipts for express matter.

Mr. Hardwick hurriedly scratched his name, and the expressman, running down the steps, mounted his wagon and drove away.

And so it was that the Hardwicks' holiday was made both a day of rejoicing and of thankfulness. When they sat down to dinner the baby in its bassinet was placed on the table, and while its parents and brothers and sisters ate turkey Molly pulled lustily on her bottle.

An explanation came in time. One day the couple who had taken Molly in heard from a friend of the Hardwicks of their loss, and it became apparent that they were in possession of the missing child. This occurred the day before Thanksgiving, and a pleasant surprise was arranged for the parents. The baby was taken to an express office, where it was given in charge of a delivery man, who was instructed to carry it to its home.

That day was remembered as the Thanksgiving of their lives. At any rate, they had more to be thankful for than ever before or afterward. Little Molly was often referred to as the express package, and the sobriquet stuck to her. When she grew old enough she was told the story of her strange adventure and never ceased to wonder that one so young could have gone through so much.

Imperial Edicts Establish Constitution Immediately and Extend Pardons to Political Offenders.

Peking, Oct. 31.—The demand of the national assembly for a complete constitutional government has been granted by the throne. An imperial edict was issued apologizing for the neglect of the throne in the past and granting an immediate constitution with a cabinet from which nobles shall be excluded. A second edict extended pardon to political offenders connected with the revolution of 1898 and subsequent revolutions and to those compelled to join in the present rebellion.

The lines around Peking are tightening. The legation quarter is preparing for emergencies and in some cases temporary fortifications have been erected by bags of sand.

Its effect in Peking already is good. The fear of the people, which was great when it became known that the capital was threatened with an attack unless the government acceded immediately to demands of far-reaching importance, somewhat had subsided, although 600,000 Chinese continue to fear a massacre, while 100,000 Manchus are in dread of a Chinese attack.

PLAN ATTACK ON WUCHANG

Imperial Chinese Forces to Follow Up Victory at Hankow.

Hankow, Oct. 31.—The imperial forces are preparing to follow up their victory over the rebels last week by an attack on Wuchang, which the revolutionists have protected by elaborate emergency fortifications, and Hanyang, which is regarded as of the utmost importance on account of the arsenal there.

Admiral Sah Chen Ping has notified the foreign consuls that he was about to begin a bombardment of Wuchang and asked that all foreigners be ordered to leave at once.

The loyalists are in undisputed possession of the native city of Hankow, including the powder factory. They are also in control of the railway. Their position here is advantageous for a direct attack against the arsenal in Hanyang.

RAIL PRESIDENT A SUICIDE

Lowry W. Goode of Cairo and Norfolk Road Ends Life.

Boston, Oct. 31.—The suicide of Lowry W. Goode of New York, president of the Cairo and Norfolk railroad, was announced by the police. Although Goode ended his life early Wednesday morning the fact was withheld.

Goode, who had been in ill health for some time, came to Boston last Saturday to consult physicians. He did not receive much encouragement from them, however, and became despondent.

THREE KILLED IN WRECK

Spreading Rails Probable Cause of the Disaster.

Houston, Tex., Oct. 31.—Three men are dead as the result of the wreck of a freight train on the Trinity and Brazos Valley railroad, near Karen, about thirty-eight miles north of Houston.

Spreading rails are assigned as the probable cause. The train was heavily loaded with excursionists returning from the state fair at Dallas, and thirty of them were slightly injured.

French Schoolboy Knowledge.

[illegible] why?

"The period of the history of France that I prefer is the war of 1870. Bismarck said to Napoleon III., 'Es-tu pret?' 'Yes,' says the other. 'I have not a gaiter button wanting.' Then Napoleon III. tells McMahon to come. But McMahon, who was on the tower of Malakoff, replies, 'J'y suis, j'y reste.' I detest war because it is a barbarism."

As the Paris Journal remarks, it is sad to think these lads, who are on the point of becoming apprentices, will probably never open a book again and in a few years will be electors.—Paris Cor. London Telegraph.

Origin of "Plagiarist."

One who appropriates—that is, steals—the literary work of another to use it as his own thought, the child of his own brain, is guilty of plagiarism, as everybody knows, yet few are acquainted with the derivation of the word or know that the plagiarist is literally a child stealer. Among a certain class of criminals in Rome in the time of the earlier Caesars there existed the damnable custom of stealing children and selling them as slaves. According to Roman law, the child stealers, when detected, received as a part of the penalty for their crime a severe flogging. As the Latin word plaga signifies a stripe or lash, the child kidnapers were termed "plagiarii"—that is, deserving of stripes. So both the crime and the criminals received their names from the castigation inflicted.

Poor Hand In a Bible Class.

A woman of Louisville, Ky., who enjoys a game of cards, recently visited a friend in Indianapolis. Sunday morning came, and the hostess invited her visitor to accompany her to Sunday school. It is the practice of the teacher of the Bible class of which the hostess is a member to ask each member of the class to read a verse from the Bible and comment on it. The visitor from Louisville had not been informed of the teacher's custom. However, the teacher seemed to think that visitors as well as regular members should participate, and when the member next to the visitor had read her verse and made her comment the teacher smilingly looked toward the visitor. The visitor appeared to be disconcerted for a moment, and then she hastily said, "I pass."—Indianapolis News.

Roman Bricks.

When the preparations for rebuilding the Campanile, in Venice, were undertaken the archaeologists were afforded an opportunity to make some interesting studies of the bricks. It was found that they had been used in arches, fortifications, the tops of walls and in other ways before they were built into the campanile and that they were not Venetian but Roman bricks. These ancient bricks were made in slices, for in many the layers could be seen undisturbed. It is said that bricks made this way can bear a greater weight than modern bricks. The bricks examined were of the first century. One of them bore the imprint of a horseshoe, which may prove that Romans used a horseshoe like ours, although it is generally believed that their horseshoes were strapped on, not nailed.

Loss of Weight In Rowing.

A well known physician in New York city who has long been identified with aquatics, says that the average individual loss of weight in a four mile pull, whether in a race or a row against time, is two or three pounds. Under peculiarly trying conditions of heat the individual loss may reach five or six pounds. On the other hand, says this physician, many oarsmen go through a four mile pull with the loss of only about a pound in weight. This lost weight is fully recovered by the next day. Proper training is so arranged in these days that a four mile race comes only when the oarsmen are thoroughly rested and at the top of their training weight, so that the loss of weight rarely indicates that the individual is "stale," or below good training condition.

Goldsmith's Obituary Notice.

It would be difficult to find a more quaint announcement of death than that published in an old newspaper in 1774, at the time of Oliver Goldsmith's decease:

"1774, April 4. Died, Dr. Oliver Goldsmith. Deserted is the village. The traveler hath laid him down to rest; the good natured man is no more; he stoops but to conquer; the vicar hath performed his sad office; it is a mournful task from which the hermit may essay to meet the dread tyrant with more than Grecian or Roman fortitude."

Dead Leaves as Fertilizers.

According to tests made in France, dead leaves possess a high value as fertilizers. They are extensively used by the market gardeners about the city of Nantes. Pear leaves have the highest quantity of nitrogenous, oak leaves come next, and the leaves of vines stand lowest in value.

The Secretive Jap

By ARTHUR W. BREWSTER

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

In America we have what we call self made men—that is, men so anxious to get on in the world that, beginning at the bottom round of the ladder, they climb till they reach the top. These men do this for themselves and often practice the greatest selfishness to attain their ends. What they do to advance their own interests a Japanese will do from patriotism, or perhaps, to state it more correctly, for his ancestors. Fancy an American making a sacrifice for his ancestors!

The Japanese have drifted into our navy as servants and have monopolized the field. When I was in command of the United States warship M I visited Japan and, being in need of a body servant, brought away with me a man exactly five feet high and any age between sixteen and forty. No one could tell how old he was, and he gave no information on the subject himself. His name was so unpronounceable by an English speaking person that my junior officers reduced it to Zip. He was very smart. I could see that at once. He learned everything on sight. When he came to me he had never shaved a man, and yet he had done the work but twice before he gave me the best shave I ever had.

There was one thing about Zip that I didn't like—a propensity to occupy my cabin. When I went out of it in the morning I left him there to put it in order. Considering his quickness, I would have expected him to do the work in ten minutes. Instead it required all the morning. Whenever I had occasion to go there the little Jap was busy as a bee, buzzing from one thing to another so rapidly and so deftly that I wondered how he managed to keep busy for so long a time. True, one day after having returned several times during the morning I found him looking over a book. Curious to know what he was reading, I glanced at it and found it to be a novel.

"Don't waste your time with that sort of reading, Zip," I said. "Go to the galley and ask for a cookbook. If you want better wages study cookery. Some chefs get very high wages."

Zip thanked me for the advice, and after that whenever he had time on his hands he was always to be found with a cookbook on his knees. But on one occasion I saw something to cause me to suspect that he was wasting his time, after all, for when I came upon him unawares he slipped the book he was reading under one that had been beneath it. It occurred to me that he had more love for fiction than for cookery.

Zip remained in my service three years, when our ship again entered Mississippi bay and he left me. I offered him higher wages, but he said that it was not the wages he wanted, but a sojourn on shore. He thanked me for my kindness to him, especially for suggesting that he study cookery. His intention was to apply for a position as cook to some wealthy Japanese.

One day while in port I received an invitation to dine with an officer of the government. He was in the marine department and a very important branch at the time, for the Japanese were then preparing, though I did not know it, to fight the Russians. I accepted the invitation and found when I arrived a number of persons prominent in naval matters. After we were introduced the host led the way to his dining room, where we seated ourselves and waited for the first dish to be brought in. I was placed on the right of the host, who sat at the head of the table, and noticed that the seat on his left, opposite me, was vacant. While I was wondering who would occupy it a door opened, and the cook, in white jacket, apron and cap, entered the room, holding aloft an immense platter, on which was a fish.

What was my surprise to see my old body servant Zip.

"Well, Zip," I said to him, "you've not lost much time in securing a situation, I see."

Zip smiled and set down the platter; but, instead of retiring, he threw off his jacket, apron and cap, appearing in the uniform of an official in the naval service and took the vacant chair beside the host.

"Captain, permit me to introduce my son," said the latter. "He went with you several years ago to prepare himself to succeed me in our naval department. He tells me that he has picked up a great deal of valuable information on the subject, which he is now ready to offer to the shades of his ancestors."

"Pardon me, captain," said Zip, "for having imposed upon you. It seemed to me when I entered your service that it was the only practical way to acquire the knowledge I needed. We Japanese are a very secretive race, and I naturally supposed you Americans to be the same. But three years' cruising with you had taught me differently. I surreptitiously studied your books when you were not occupying your cabin and many a night studied till morning from one of them I had purloined."

"You are quite excusable," I replied. "We all make different standards for ourselves. Ours is not like yours. But I should think your national secretiveness would be of immense value in war."

The very next year after this the fight between the Japanese and the Russians came on, and, in my opinion, this Japanese secretiveness did more for the latter to win than any other one cause.

A Legend

By AMBROSE L. TURNER

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

Several hundred years ago everybody believed in a personal devil whose business it was to mingle with human beings and tempt them from virtue.

Hans Bewner was a suitor for the hand of Gretchen Staebel. Gretchen's father was much respected in the community for his probity and piety, and young Hans was so religiously inclined that he thought of being a priest. But so deep was the love between him and Gretchen that he realized that it would wreck her happiness as well as his own if he entered a church where celibacy is imposed on the clergy, and he gave up what he really preferred. Nevertheless he was considered to be well nigh a saint.

One evening Hans and Gretchen and their relatives and friends were gathered at the Staebel home to celebrate the betrothal of Hans and Gretchen. In the midst of the festivities a knock was heard at the door, and a young man, strikingly handsome, was admitted, who said that he was a traveler on his way to Munich and begged to be permitted to pass the night in the house. Hospitality of this kind was usual in those days, and the young man, who gave his name as Herman, was not only promised a night's lodging, but was invited to take part in the festivities.

This stranger soon became the life of the party. Brilliant sayings fell from his tongue that astonished and delighted the company. He suggested different methods of amusement and at last, pulling from his pockets cards similar to the playing cards in vogue today, offered to show those assembled a game. All were pleased at learning some novel amusement and assented readily. Herman proposed first to show three of them how to play the game, after which the rest might divide into sets of three, each three playing separately.

Those chosen to be taught the game were Hans and Gretchen. The teacher dealt the cards and showed them how to play one hand and then another and by this time they knew enough about it to play it. Those looking on then proceeded to arrange themselves at tables, and presently the whole company were deeply immersed in the amusement introduced by the handsome stranger.

Herman was extremely deferential to Gretchen. Every now and again he would show his white teeth in a smile under his exquisitely cut lips and mustache, the carefully waxed ends of which pointed upward. Moreover, his eyes were constantly meeting hers and seemed to produce upon her a marked impression. At first she attempted to turn hers away, but she soon lost the power to do this. Indeed, she seemed like a bird charmed by the eyes of a serpent.

It was not long before Hans noticed that his betrothed was being fascinated by the stranger. But, being a mild mannered man, more devoted to saying his prayers than to quarreling, he held his peace, hoping that no great harm was being done and on the morrow Herman would have journeyed on and been forgotten. But Gretchen seemed not only attracted by the stranger, but to have been seized with a sudden aversion for her lover. When Hans called her attention to a mistake she was making in her play she gave him a sharp answer. When he protested at some unfair advantage taken of him in the cards by Herman she abused him, taking the latter's part.

It soon came about that the game was rather between Hans and Herman for Gretchen than in the cards. Herman became bolder and bolder in his attentions to her, and she seemed to have been bewitched by him. He ridiculed Hans for his stupidity in the play, and Gretchen supported him in his strictures. And all the while he was darting love glances at her, which she returned in kind.

During this time the others had become so absorbed in the game the stranger had introduced that they knew nothing of what was going on between him and Hans and Gretchen. They were suddenly made aware that something was wrong by Hans loudly cursing the stranger and attempting to thrust a dagger into his breast. But Herman easily turned away the blow by raising his arm, and all three rose and stood, Hans glaring at Herman and Gretchen glaring at Hans. Such was the tableau when the door was opened and the priest entered.

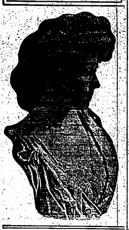
Pausing, he gazed in a mild surprise at the scene before him. Herman's back was toward him, so that he could not see his face. But Herman, noticing that all eyes were turned toward the door, looked around. His eyes fell upon the rosary worn by the father and the suspended cross. Instantly the look of injured innocence his face had worn deserted him. A door near him stood open, and, flinching, he withdrew through it and out into the night.

The moment he was gone Gretchen fell fainting into Hans' arms.

No one doubted that the stranger was Satan in human form, come to corrupt both Hans and Gretchen and that he had been driven away by the sight of the cross. The legend has been handed down for centuries among the descendants of the pair, and by some of them it is believed to this day that their progenitors were really visited by the devil.

MISS FOLA LA FOLLETTE.

Senator's Daughter Becomes Wife of George Middleton.



COMEMONY A QUIET AFFAIR

Miss La Follette Married at Parents' Home in Washington.

Washington, Oct. 31.—Miss Fola La Follette, daughter of Senator La Follette of Wisconsin, was married here at the home of her parents to George Middleton of New York, a playwright. The wedding ceremony was private, Paul Kester, another dramatist, and Miss Mary La Follette being the attendants.

Rev. U. G. B. Pierce, pastor of All Souls' Unitarian church, of which President Taft is a member, performed the ceremony. Dr. Pierce also is chaplain of the senate and a close personal friend of Senator La Follette.

MUST ENFORCE SHERMAN LAW

President Denies Political Motives In Trust Action.

Chicago, Oct. 28.—In a speech here, which was regarded as having a direct bearing upon the government's latest trust prosecution against the United States Steel corporation, President Taft denied in vigorous language that the administration was being influenced by political motives.

"I would rather cut off my right hand," he exclaimed, "than to do anything to disturb the business of this country, especially with a motive of cultivating political success."

The president said he wanted it to be understood for all time that he intended to enforce the anti-trust law to the letter.

"Statements as to what I may be responsible for in bringing about business troubles, however regretful I may be that it is so, cannot turn me from the duty that lies straight before me," continued Mr. Taft.

STOPS RAISE IN STEEL RATES

Interstate Commerce Commission Suspends Tariffs.

Washington, Oct. 29.—Cancellation of the commodity freight tariffs on iron and steel articles by the rail carriers operating from Pittsburg, Buffalo and other Eastern territories to Western destinations, particularly points in Illinois, Iowa and Missouri, involving an immense traffic, was suspended by the interstate commerce commission.

Tariffs filed with the commission place the iron and steel articles under class rates, which are much higher than the commodity rates.

FORECASTS FEDERAL RULE

Supreme Court Decision on Use of Safety Appliances.

Washington, Oct. 31.—Complete control of all the railroads of the country by the interstate commerce commission and virtual elimination of the state commissions for such control is foreshadowed in an opinion handed down by the supreme court of the United States. The court held that hereafter all locomotives, cars or other equipment used on any railroad which is a highway of interstate commerce must comply with the federal safety appliance act.

AN INCENTIVE TO MARRIAGE

By DOROTHEA HALE

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

There is something about the portal of matrimony that seems to require new conditions. A set humdrum state is not likely to be conducive to wedlock. This is especially true of those who are passing out of the heyday of youth. If a man growing into bachelorhood or a woman into spinsterhood wishes to change their condition their best chance is to take an ocean voyage at a season when they will meet other travelers. Probably there are more marriages concocted on shipboard in proportion to the size of the passenger list than in any other community. But after a couple have mutually resolved to cast their lot together let them not take any more such trips separately or what has been accomplished may be undone.

William Martindale had come to his thirty-fifth year without being mated and was looking forward to a lonely old age with horror. Not being very closely tied down to business he resolved to take a trip abroad in order to relieve that ennui which begins to show itself in bachelors and spinsters while they are crossing life's equinoctial line. Miss Susan Eldridge, aged thirty, had given up trying to make up her mind to marry some one of the single men she had long known and concluded that if she could not be interested in a household she might at least enjoy a change of scene.

Mr. Martindale and Miss Eldridge met on a steamer running from New York to Naples. They left the American coast in chilly weather and found the contrast on reaching the balmy atmosphere of the gulf stream delightful. They sat on deck most of the day and occasionally in the evening, rising and falling with the swell, listening to the swish made by the meeting of the waves and the vessel and each other's chat, now watching a bird sailing above and wondering how it dare fly so far from land, and found it all delightful.

"What an interesting woman!" remarked Mr. Martindale to himself. "If I had before met a girl like that I would by this time have been the father of a family." "Had the young men I have known so long," remarked Miss Eldridge, "had a tenth part of the soul this man possesses I would not now have the prospect before me of finishing my life an old maid."

On the Mediterranean trip the steamer usually stops at the island of Madeira. Mr. Martindale and Miss Eldridge went ashore together and entered a garden filled with tropical plants redolent of flowery perfumes. When they came out of that garden they were engaged.

The rest of the voyage was like sailing in the heavens on a balmy moonlight night. The critical fashion in which they had previously viewed members of the opposite sexes from a matrimonial point of view was replaced by an ideal appreciation of each other induced by an atmosphere entirely different from any to which they had been accustomed. They landed at Naples, strolled together through the exhumed streets of Pompeii, sat on the cliff overlooking the Mediterranean at Sorrento and drove together to Amalfi. And it seemed to each that the other resembled some divinity perpetuated in marble in the galleries they frequented.

They separated at Rome to meet later in America, where they were to make arrangements for their wedding.

The intervening time had passed. Mr. Martindale had arrived at home, and Miss Eldridge was sailing up New York bay. She paced the deck with a brow on which lowered a mental disturbance. Mr. Martindale, she knew, was on the dock waiting for her. Why did she not wear a happy expression at the expected meeting?

And Mr. Martindale—why did he walk through the long dock house with a perplexed look on his face and shudder as he caught a glimpse of the ship on which stood his fiancee? They met. Each strove to put on a smile of welcome, expression of heaven born love. The effort was a failure. Each retained a secret which must be sooner or later broken to the other.

"I can endure this no longer," said Miss Eldridge as they rolled over the stony streets in a carriage. "I could never act a part. I must confess at once."

"Confess?"

"Yes. I thought I loved you. I was mistaken. On the return voyage I met the man who at once I felt was born for me and for whom I was born. Forgive me for the wrong I have done you. I couldn't help it."

A long sigh—a sigh of relief—escaped from Mr. Martindale.

"Your confession," he said, "has taken a great load from my mind. I, too, on my return voyage met a girl who charmed me and, I blush to say, won me from you."

For a moment that amour propre, that dislike for being supplanted, to which we are all subject, kept her silent, but when she thought of the complication she had escaped she said [illegible]

[illegible] as seasickness, though much pleasanter. Unfortunately all persons who desire to be mated cannot try it, because it is expensive.

Ocular Defects In Artists.

It was said of the late Edwin A. Abbey that his nearsightedness had much to do with his close attention to detail, one of the characteristics of his art. An illustrator, who does work in black and white, speaking of Mr. Abbey's conscientious drawing in of details, wondered how much ocular defects accounted for certain aptitudes of well known artists.

"A cynical person told me the other day," he said, "that he half believed every impressionistic painter was nearsighted and drew what he saw with his glasses off. It sounds sensible.

"And consider me. I am completely color blind. I cannot even tell blue from yellow, a failing which is rarer than red-green color blindness.

"Yet I would not see colors if I could. When I draw, you see, I put in precisely the effects I get in nature, and they tell me that shade gradation is the chief merit of my work. I lay that to 'color blindness.'"—New York Sun.

When They Fined the Servants.

There must have been a servant problem even in the specious times of Elizabeth, if we may judge by a list of rules drawn up by a baronet of that era for the guidance of his domestic helpers and recently brought to light by an English writer. The baronet evidently liked his house kept in order, and if it were not made absolutely spotless on Friday after dinner everybody responsible had to pay threepence. He liked punctuality, and sixpence was the fine for meat that was not ready at 11 or before for dinner and at 6 or before for supper, while the table had to be laid half an hour before those times, on pain of twopence. Oaths were a penny each, and it was equally expensive to leave a door open which was found shut; while to teach any of the children any "unhonest speech" was fourpence. The fines were duly paid each quarter day out of the wages, and with fine vagueness the baronet winds up, "They shall be bestowed on the poor or other godly use."

The Doctor's Revenge.

It is always a pleasure to hear or read of arrogance rebuked; hence this little tale, which might be headed "The Doctor's Revenge." An elderly lady whose characteristics entitle her to the present name of Mrs. Portly Pompous had a pet monkey which suddenly became ill. She had the assurance to send for a prominent physician to treat the little beast. When the doctor was introduced to his patient he was very much enraged, but he did not betray himself. He took the sick monkey's pulse and asked the usual questions. Now, in the room was a little boy, Mrs. Portly Pompous' grandson. The doctor approached the boy, examined his pulse also and then said solemnly to the lady: "Madam, your two little grandchildren are suffering from indigestion. Give them only light food, with plenty of exercise, and they will come out all right."—Boston Transcript.

BACKE MAYOR. SOCIALISTS ELECT FIVE. TARRANT JUDGE

Several Surprises Sprung in Tuesday's Election. Socialists showgreat Strength but Loose Mayor by Sticker Handicap.

Lars Backe was elected Mayor of this city last Tuesday having a plurality of 31 votes. N. W. Tarrant became our future Municipal Judge by a plurality of 21 votes. The Socialists elected five aldermen out of six. The elected being Fred Roth, at large; C. C. Gulrud, 1st ward; Arthur Tanem, 2d ward; Frank Mousley, 3d ward; B. Dan Bjorkman, 4th ward A. H. Akre at large being the only Independent elected.

It seems the old saying "The surest way to reach a man's heart is thru his stomach proved true again in as much as Fred Roth the baker received the largest number of votes cast for any one candidate except Ed. Evenson for Treasuer and he had no opposition.

It seems to be almost the unanimous opinion about town that had the Socialists candidate for Mayor been regularly on the ticket instead of using the sticker he would have been elected by a fair plurality. In addition to this Mr. Sedlacek had the handicap of having been in the race only five days.

The total vote stood as follows:

Mayor:
Backe	82—73—49—78——282.

ANOTHER RURAL TELEPHONE LINE

Germantown Farmers Incorporate. Will Build Line This Fall.

The progressive farmers about Germantown have incorporated for the purpose of building a telephone line of their own.

This line will have central connections at Germantown and it is also planned that it will have direct connections with Thief River Falls, by way of Thorwick in the near future.

Prominent among the incorporators were Louis Hamrey, Nick Bundhund, Henry Roller and August, Emil and John Ristau. These gentlemen were in the city on Monday for each a load of poles and wire, with which to commence the construction of the line and incidentaly engaged Irving E. Quist to string the wire and install the telephone as soon as the work of setting the poles, which will be done by the farmers themselves, has been completed.

This is another move that speaks volumes for the progress of the country to the east and it may safely be said that the Germantown country is no longer a new country. It has been settled for more than fifteen years and now the roads and ditches are in fine shape and every foot of the ground is tillable. A small but cozy farm home adorns almost every quarter section. School houses and churches adorn every locality and the only thing that is lacking to make this as beautiful progressive and happy a community as there is in Minnesota is a railroad and it is to be hoped that before long these worthy pioneers will realize what they have all these years longed for, a railroad thru the midst of their country.

THIEF RIVER FIVE FOSSTON 0

Under Heady Generalship of Iverson Locals Win First Game On Home Grounds.

Last Saturday afternoon, at the fair grounds, a small but enthusiastic crowd witnessed a victory of the local High School tem over the Fosston High School team, the final score being 5 to 0. This was the first game played on the local grounds this season, and served to show the public that our High School has at present a team that can hold its own with any team of like weight. The teams were quite evenly matched with respect to weight, except that Thief River's line was a few pounds heavier. The locals made good gains thru Fosston's line, but Fosston was unable to return the compliment. Both teams resorted to considerable open playing, especially Fosston, who, however, were not sufficiently practiced to make consecutive gains by their kicks and forward passes. The game was slow on both sides until the last quarter, when they gingered up and gave as fine an exhibition of fast-played modern football as one would care to see. They played 10-minute quarter, which allowed the boys to keep fresh all the time, and come thru the contest little the worse for wear; in fact, all the boys were able to take a lively sprint off the field.

The Game.

With a west wind blowing, Thief River choose to defend the west goal and kicked to Fosston. This quarter was all for Thief River, they soon getting the ball on downs, and then steadily advancing it by plays thru the line and around the end for the first and only touchdown of the game. Owing to an error in the formality gone thru in signaling for the catch the locals were not allowed to try for a goal.

The second quarter neither side had an opportunity to score, and at the close the ball was in Fosston's posession on Thief River's 25-yd line.

In the beginning of the third quarter Fosston took a brace and tried their best to score, using the forward pass freely, but the best they could do was advance the ball to Thief River's 10-yd line.

In the beginning of the fourth quarter, with the ball in Fosston's posession on Thief River's 10-yd line, Fosston attempted a forward pass, and Iverson caught the ball. Thief River fumbled the ball on the second play and Fosston received it. In a desperate effort to score, Fosston advanced the all to Thief River's 1-yd line but were held in their tracks and lost the ball on downs. When the train whistled the ball was in the field, and Fosston's hopes of scoring had vanished completely.

Iverson.

Iverson, quarterback and captain of the local High School team deserves considerable credit for the admirable and efficient manner in which he handled his players, and it was his superior generalship over that of his opponent which was largely the determining factor in winning the game. He exhibited some real thinking ability and at all times had thorough command of the situation.

ABOUT POSTAL SAVINGS BONDS

Bonds To be Issued January 1st 1912. Must make Application Before Dec. 15.

Description of Postal Savings Bonds.

1. Depositors of the Postal Savings System may exchange the whole or a part of their deposits on January 1, 1912, for United Sates registered or coupon bonds in denominations of $20, $100, and payable semiannnally, and redeemable at the pleasure of the United States after one year from that date of issue, both principal and interest payable 20 years from that in United States gold coin.

2. Postal savings bonds, are exempt from all taxes or duties of the United States, as well as from taxation in any form or under State, municipal, or local authority.

Conversion of Deposits.

3. Applications for the conversion of deposits into bonds on January 1, 1912, must be received before December 15, 1912, by the post-master at the depository office where the certificates were issued. The postmaster will supply an application form which must be made out in triplicate. The depositor must indorse and surrender with his application postal savings certificates covering the amount of the bonds desired, for which the postmaster will give him a receipt. When the postmaster receives the bonds applied for he will notify the depositor and will deliver the bonds on presentation of the receipt for the certificates surrendered.

5. Postal savings deposits converted into bonds are not counted as a part of the maximum of $500 allowed one depositor, and there is no limitation on the amount of available postal savings bonds which may be acquired finally by a depositor. The exchange is considered as taking effect on January 1, and a depositor who has applied to convert into bonds all or part of the maximum balance of $500 may deposit an additional amount in January, though the bonds may not yet have been delivered.

6. Postal savings bonds can be procured only by the conversion of postal savings deposits and will not be issued to persons who are not depositors. They may be sold or assigned to any person, however, by the holder, and when a registered bond is asigned a new bond will be issued in the name of the owner.

Registered And Coupon Bonds.

Coupon bonds are preferable for a depositor who intends to hold them for a sohrt time only and who has ample facilities for their safekeeping. These bonds are payable to bearer, and the title will pass by delivery without indorsement. Interest on coupon bonds is collected by means of interest coupons, which are detached by the holder as they become due.

Registered bonds are preferable for persons intending to hold them for a considerable period, and they differ from coupon bonds in the following respects:

(a) They have inscribed upon their face the names of the persons to whom they are issued.

(b) They are payable only to the persons to whom issued or their assigns.

WAYNE RICHARDSON RETURNS

Does not Fancy Coast Cities Climate. Believes there will be Financial Reaction.

Attorney Wayne Richardson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ira C. Richardson of this city returned to his parental home last Saturday and in the future will practice law with his father.

Mr. Richardson needs no introduction to the people of this city and surrounding territory. He grew to manhood and graduated from the common schools here after which he went to Crookston where he finished the High School work. Later he studied at the Minnesota "U", and finally graduated from the North Dakota "U" Law Department.

Since his admittance to the bar he has practiced in Portland, Oregon and Yakima, Washington but has finally concluded to return here and take up his practice with his father and in the future it will be Richardson & Richardson.

When interviewed by a Press reporter, Mr. Richardson expressed himself as follows regarding the West: "I don't like the coast cities. They are almost without exception over-rated, overboomed and over-advertised and in my opinion there will be somewhat of a rebound from the great migration to the coast and the greater part of this will ultimately land in the central states.

"Seattle has done some wonderful building and grading. But the grading has cost such immense amounts that I know of one instance where a lot in that city was purchased at $900 and then was assessed for grading to the amount of $950 and the result is that the city now owns the lot. For reasons similar to this one many men in the West are land-poor.

"Work is well paid but is rather scarce and hence thousands of men can be found strolling around cities like Seattle looking for work especially during the winter months.

"Portland is the most beautiful of the western cities. It is located one hundred miles from the ocean on the Willamette river and yet the tide can be distinctly seen every day.

"The climate is peculiar. In summer the sun is very hot but the shade is cool and the nights are very cool. The winters are not severly cold, the coldset weather being about 16 degrees above zero. There is very little frost in the ground as will be evidenced by the fact that the city water mains are laid only three feet below the surface.

"The rainy season begins about September 15th and lasts until some time in April. During this entire period there is almost a continuous rain or a "gray haze", generally known as the Oregon Mist with once in a while a little flurry of sleet at mid-winter. During the months of July and August, it never rains and the hot sunny days are somewhat oppressive."

NEW HOTEL ASSURED FOR THIRD STREET HORACE AVE.

Excavating Was Begun Yesterday Morning For Sixty Room Modern Three Story Hostelry. Provencher At The Head.

Julien Provencher is busier than ever. Yesterady morning he began the excavating for the basement of the New Hotel which he will erect next spring on the corner of Horace Avenue and Third Street.

The proposed building will have a 50 foot front on Third Street and 130 foot front on Horace Avenue.

The structure will be three stories high and built of the best brick. Will have sixty good modern rooms with all the modern conveniences even to a telephone in each room. Baths and other luxuries will be found thruout the building.

A well equipped kitchen and a servants department of rooms will be some of the conveniences that will make this place attractive to good help which is very essential.

The steam plant and heating apratus will be the best that money can buy. The lobby will have a full tile floor and will be furnished with the very best of furniture and will have in connection one of the best sample rooms in this part of the state.

The bids for erecting this building will be received up to December 10th at which time the contract will be let to the best bidder in order to give him ample time to prepare for an early start in the spring. Here is hoping that Mr. Provencher will have no trouble in completing his plans in this estimable project.

MUCH INTEREST IN "GOVERNORS' SPECIAL"

Will Explain Excellent Opportunities Awaiting Settlers In the West.

Boise, Idaho, Nov. 10.—From all indications the tour of the east by the special train known as the western "Governors' Special," which is scheduled to leave St. Paul, Minn., on the evening of November 27th on an extensive tour of the cities of the east, will present the greatest opportunity for the western executives to combine business, and the welfare of their respective states with pleasure, that has ever been presented.

While the purpose of the trip is ostensibly, to return the courtesies that have been extended to the different sections of the west, through the numerous visits of eastern commercial organizations, and to promote a better understanding between the two sections of our country, the opportunity that will be presented of influencing the tide of immigration that has been flying into western Canada, to turn to the American west.

On account of the creation of the great development projects that have been completed in different sections of what has heretofore been known as the "arid west", a new era of progress has resulted. Harvests in all sections of the west have broken all former records this season. While the east has suffered in many districts from droughts, that while they have not resulted in total crop failures, have caused much concern to the eastern agriculturists.

On this account the tour of the special, taking place when it does, will assuredly be the means of calling the attention of the easner to the marvelous opportunities that await the settler in the west.

Once the tide of immigration has settled back to the old channels—to the American west—the west will receive a new impetus to its progress and development.

While on the tour, the governors of the west, practically all of them are contemplating making the trip, will have unexampled facilities for focusing attention on their sections, for invitations have been received from each city on the specials' itinerary, asking them to attend banquets, meetings of business organizations, and even to make addresses at out of door gatherings, where they will have opportunities to deliver the message of the new west to the people of the older east.

Among the principal events that the "Governors' Special" party will attended, are the session of the national Rivers and Harbors congress at Washington and the gathering of governors from the southeastern states, which will convene in Baltimore. Washington is being visited at the special invitation of President Taft, who on the occasion of his recent western tour, recognized the movemept officially and extended a formal invitation to the special's party to call upon him at the White House.

In each of the ten states participating, the work of gathering comprehensive displays of each state's resources is progressing enthusiastically, and when the special visits the east during the coming month, every section of the west will be ably represented both by exhibits and missionaries of the new west.

Railroads make Rates for big Land Show

Every railroad leading into the Twin City has announced that special excursion rates will be put into effect Dec. 11th on account of the Northwestern Land Products Show which is to be held in St. Paul from Dec. 12 to 23. A fare and one third for the round rip will be the rate and excursion tickets will be sold at points within wo hundred and fifty miles of the Twin City. Tickets will be good to either St. Paul or Minneapolis and will be good for return to and including Dec. 24th.

This is the first time that a reduced rate has been granted for any land show and officers of the Northwest Development League say that the rate was only secured because of the public nature of the show to be given in St. Paul. Most of the land shows have been private enterprises, but the S. Paul or Twin City show as it is called, is an enterprise given by the seven Northwest states and the territory of Alaska.

TO AILING WOMEN.

A Little Sound Advice Will Help Many Sufferers In Thief River Falls.

No woman can be healthy and well if the kidneys are sick. Poisons that pass off in the secretions when the kidneys are well, are retained in the body when the kidneys are sick. Kidneys and bladder become inflamed and swollen and worse troubles quickly follow. This is often the true cause of bearing down pains, lameness, back ache, etc. Uric poisoning also cause headaches, dizzy spells, languor, nervousness and rheumatic pain.

When suffering so try Doan's Kidney Pills, a remedy that has cured thousands of such cases. You will get better as the kidneys get better, and health will return when the kidneys are well. Let a Thief River Falls woman tell you about Doan's Kidney Pills.

Mrs. J. O. Christopherson, 414 St. Paul Ave., Thief River Falls, Minn., says: "I have used Doan's Kidney Pills with excellent results and they have also been taken with benefit by other members of our family. We keep Doan's Kidney Pills in the house all the time and do not think we could get along without them."

TROPHIES FOR BEST SOIL PRODUCTS.

Growers of choice grains, grasses, fruits and othre soil products in the American Northwest will be rewarded for their trouble in furnishing samples to their states, sectional or Commercial Club exhibits at the St. Paul Land Show according to an announcement made by the Land Show management, stating that forty handsome sterling silver trophy cups, valued at $4,000 have been offered by the St. Paul Association of Commerce and some enterprising business firms.

To secure one of these cups the Northwestern Land Show does not require the exhibitor to go to the trouble nor expense which is usually necessary to win a prize. All the grower has to do is to furnish the sample to those in charge of the state exhibit or the Commercial Club which has charge of the display of a particular section at the show to be held in St. Paul Dec. 12 to 23.

Cup for the best state exhibit, open to Minnesota, North and South Dakota, Montana, Idaho, Washington Oregon and Alaska.

Cup for the best sectional exhibit from American Northwest.

Cups for best half bushel Minnesota wheat; for best bushel of potatoes grown in Minnesota; for best ten ears of corn grown in Minnesota and the best bushel of oats grown in Minnesota.

For North Dakota cups are offered for the best bushel of wheat and the best half bushel of flax.

In South Dakota the cups are for the best half bushel of wheat and the best ten ears of corn.

Chas. W. Clark of Montana has offered ten cups for various Montana products and the St. Paul Association of Commerce will give a cup for the best half bushel of oats grown in the Gallatin Valley.

Cups are offered for the best bushel of apples grown in Washington or Oregon and for the best sample of alfalfa grown in either of these states.

In Idaho a cup is offered for he best five boxes of commercial apples.

The Famous "Green Man of Brighton."

In October, 1806, an individual was to be observed at Brighton, England, who walked out every day dressed in green from head to foot—green shoes, green gloves, green handkerchief, and other articles to match. This eccentric person lived alone, knew no one, and in his house the curtains, the wall paper, the furniture, even the plates and dishes and the smallest toilet articles, offered an uninterrupted sequence of green. Having started on his career, there was obviously no reason to stop, and with full consistency he carried this scruples so far as to eat nothing but fruit and vegetables of the same green color. The consequences were extremely disastrous. One fine day the green man jumped from his window into the street, rushed forward and performed a second somersault from the top of the nearest cliff.

A GREAT DISCOVERY.

Certain Ingredients That Really Promote Hair Growth When Properly Combined.

Resorcin is one of the most effective germ destroyers ever discovered by science, and in connection with Beta Napthol, which is both germicidal and antiseptic, a combination is formed which destroys the germs which rob the hair of its natural nourishment, and also creates a clean, healthy condition of the scalp, which prevents the development of new germs.

Pilocarpin, although not a coloring matter or dye, is a well-known ingredient for restoring the hair to its natural color, when the loss of hair has been caused by a disease of the scalp.

These ingredients in proper combination, with alcohol added as a stimulant and for its well-defined nourishing properties, perfect perhaps the most effective remedy that is known for scalp and hair troubles.

We have a remedy which is chiefly composed of these ingredients, in combination with other extremely invaluable medicinal agents. We guarantee it to positively cure dandruff and to grow hair, even though the scalp in spots is bare of hair. If there is any vitality left in the roots, it will positively cure baldness, or we will refund your money. If the scalp has a glazed shiny appearance, it's an indication that baldness is permanent, but in other instances we believe baldness is curable.

We want every one troubled with scalp disease or loss of hair to try Rexall "93" Hair Tonic. If it does not cure dandruff and grow hair to the satisfaction of the user, we will without question or quibble return every cent paid us for it. We print this guarantee on every bottle. It has effected a positive cure in 93% of cases where put to a practical test.

Rexall "93" Hair Tonic is entirely unlike, and we think, in every particular, better than anything else we know of for the purpose for which it is prescribed. We urge you to try this preparation at our entire risk. Certainly we know of no better guarantee to give you. Remember, you can obtain Rexall Remedies only at our store—The Rexall Store—J. P. Our little girl was delicate and her back pained a great deal. The kidney secretions were unnatural and proved that a kidney medicine was needed. Nothing brought relief until Doan's Kidney Pills were obtained at Curtis' Drug Store. This remedy improved the cihld's health from the first and finally effected a complete cure."

AVOID HARSH DRUGS.

Many Cathartics Tend to Cause Injury to the Bowels.

If you are subject to constipation, you should avoid strong drugs and cathartics. They only give temporary relief and their reaction is harmful and sometimes more annoying than constipation. They in no way effect a cure and their tendency is, to weaken the already weak organs with which they come in contact.

We honestly believe that we have the best constipation treatment ever devised. Our faith in it is so strong that we sell it on the positive guarantee that it shall not cost the user a cent if it does not give entire satisfaction and completely remedy constipation. This preparation is called Rexall Orderlies. These are prompt, soothing, and most effective in action. They are made of a recent chemical discovery. Their principal ingredient is odorless, tasteless, and colorless. Combined with other well-known ingredients, long established for their usefulness in the treatment of constipation, it forms a tablet which is eaten just like candy. They may be taken at any time, either day or night, without fear of their causing any inconvenience whatever. They do not gripe, purge, nor cause nausea. They act without causing any pain or excessive looseness of the bowels. They are ideal for children, weak, delicate persons, and aged people, as well as for the most hearty person.

They come in three size packages, 12 tablets, 10 cents; 36 tablets, 25 cents; 80 tablets, 50 cents. Remember, you can obtain them only at our store — The Rexall Store.

"What I always like to do," he writes, "is to recommend Dr. King's New Discovery for weak sore lungs, hard colds, hoarseness, obstinate coughs, la rippe, croup, asthma or other bronchial affection, for I feel sure that a number of my neighbors are alive and well today because they took my advice to use it. I honestly believe its the best throat and lung medicine that's made." Easy to prove he's right. Get a trial bottle free, or regular 50c or $1.00 bottle. Guaranteed by all druggists.

The Useful Verb "To Get."

There is no word, long or short, in the English language capable of performing so much labor in a clear, intelligible sense as the verb to get. And here is an old time specimen of its capabilities:

"I got on horseback within ten minutes after I got your letter. When I got to Canterbury I got a chaise for town, but I got wet through before I got to Canterbury, and I have got such a cold as I shall not be able to get rid of in a hurry. I got to the treasury about noon; but, first of all, I got shaved and dressed. I soon got into the secret of getting a memorial before the board, but I could not get an answer then. However, I got intelligence from the messenger that I should most likely get one the next morning. As soon as I got back to my inn I got my supper. When I got up in the morning I got my breakfast and then got myself dressed that I might get out in time to get an answer to my memorial. As soon as I got it I got into the first chaise and got to Canterbury by 3 o'clock, and about tea time I got home."—Ave Maria.

Wellington's Subtle Retort.

Wednesday, 19th October, 1836—Lord Fitzgerald made us laugh at dinner today with a story about John Wilson Croker, whose pertinacity of opinion is well known. He was laying down the law after dinner to the Duke of Wellington and, according to custom, asserting the superiority of his own information on all subjects, having even flatly contradicted the duke, who had mentioned some incident that had taken place at the battle of Waterloo. At last the conversation turned upon the use of percussion caps for muskets of the army when Croker again maintained a directly opposite opinion to that which was urged by the duke, who at last good humoredly said to him, "My dear Croker, I can yield to your superior information on most points, and you may know a great deal more of what passed at Waterloo than myself, but as a sportsman I will maintain my point about percussion caps."—Thomas Raikes' Journal.

Wisdom is knowing what to do next. Skill is knowing how to do it, and Virtue is doing it.

Winter is at hand. If your work does not continue during the quiet months that are about to follow at least do not stop thinking.

Crookston elected a Socialist mayor and three aldermen. Ten important Ohio cities elected socialist mayors. Massachusetts elects a Democratic Governor and other important straws show whither the wind bloweth. Wonder if the Standpat republicans now believe there is a progressive movement at work.

Governor Eberhart has promised to come to the St. Cloud Development Association meet to make a speech. It will likely be an explanation of the speech he made at Brainard nearly a year ago. It is too bad that we common mortals cannot just understand what the Governor means but cause him the inconvience of an explanation.

Cyrus J. Northrup, President emeritus, of the State "U" is being mentioned for Congressman at large. We don't see much use for all this talk about Congressman at large. We will have a special session of the state legislature and redistrict the state so we will have a congressman from the Tenth District.

Two weeks ago flax was worth $2.24 in Thief River Falls. Yesterday it was only $1.73. A drop of 51 cents. Is that due to supply and demand or to speculation. The farmer who works hard all the year and expects to market his produce in the fall certainly should be protected against speculators who work hard only a couple of hours each morning.

City election is over. It had cheers for some and disappointments for others. Yet after all we know each other better than before. The different classes have spoken in no unmistakeable terms. The future lies before us like an open book. He who would know its mysteries may, if he will only delve in deep enough and study conditions earnstly and seriously enough.

For pains in the side or chest dampen a piece of flannel with Chamberlain's Liniment and bind it on over the seat of pain. There is nothing better. For sale by all druggists.

CO-OPERATION, CITY AND COUNTRY.

Whatever advantages the city may claim over the country, either as a place of residence or as an arena for business enterprise ,are mainly due to the fact that in the city the principle of co-operation has found a larger development. The co-operation may be often involuntary, and in many cases the principle has been perverted to the enrichment of corporate and other monopolies; but it nevertheless so permeates all municipal life as to constitute the largest factor in the making of the city. The improved road-ways and sidewalks, the water supply and sewer systems gas and electric lighting and heating facilities, the trolley lines, telephone service, parks, libraries, picture galleries, hospitals, express deliveries cheap amusements and superior school advantages—all are the fruits of a varied application of the "co-operative plan." For co-operation of men to unite in doing or maintaining something which none of them, individually, would be able to do or maintain. The mere fact of a city makes him, however involuntarily, a cooperator in all its works of public service. Their maintenance is a part of the "cost of living" there.

The growth of co-operation has been more rapid in the cities because of the multiplied contracts among the number of people there brought together, which have practically forced them to join hands for the general advancement, along some lines; and along others, has made it easy for the corporate and monopolistic beneficiaries of co-operation to levy the tribute charged for the use of their several conveniences— conveniences which the multitude was not yet reay to install from its own resources. But today contracts—stimulated by the presence of the telephone, the trolley, the aily mails, and all that they imply—are as numerous in many a country district as they were in the city of "ye olden time" before the advent there of the agencies named. And the multiplication of contracts stirs the progressive spirit in the country as it has done in the city. And that spirit can find no outlet like that afforded by the development of co-operation.

MANY WAYS

Everyone has his own way of doing business. Our way is to issue checks in payment of all bills thereby doing away with the careless habit of carrying large sums of money on our person.

You have a receipt in every instance and the check and pass book costs you nothing. TRY OUR WAY . . . . . .

First National Bank
Thief River Falls, Minnesota.

How many are the avenues of beneficient endeavor which center at Co-operation's door! Yet how few of those avenues have we, until recently, tried to penetrate! We have made some beginnings with co-operative elevators and grain-selling; with creameries and egg-selling associations with live-stock shipping and stock-breeding associations; with fruit-growers' and market-gardeners' unions. But nine-tenths of the business in the several named, except in the case of the creameries, is still handled on a non-co-operative basis; and this in the face of repeated demonstrations of the effectiveness of co-operation in securing larger returns to the farmer.

The extension of co-operation along these lines may well engage a large share of the new spirit now kindling. So, also, may the "Good Roads" movement, than which few co-operative undertakings promote more. Such extension will make easier the application of the co-operative idea to the purchaser and use of costly farm machinery; to the creation—where neighbors are sufficiently near—of a permanent supply of running water; to the common raising, for shipment by the carload, of a single kind of hogs, a single type of horses; to the establishment of free government news schoolhouses or churches; to the beautifying of country roads with shade-trees and side-lawns; to the establihment of a free government news service, which shall enable the country daily to compete with the city sheet, and thus restore the independence and dignity of journalism; to the lightening of the burdens of the farmer's wife by the establishment of the co-operative laundry. These are but a few of many avenues through which by co-operation, our people may attain to higher and better living.—C. R. Barns, Extension Division, Minn. College of Agriculture.

at the Northwestern Land Products Show to be held in the St. Paul Auditorium from Dec. 12 to 23.

The band is to give four concerts daily, two in the afternoon and two in the evening. This is the organization which has been furnishing the principal music at the Minnesota State Fair for years and is considered one of the best musical organizations in the northwest. Besides the regular band concerts, some of the best soloists of the organization as well as others coming especially to St. Paul for the show, will present a number of solos daily. The entertainment features at the Land Show will be numerous and all of the highest class, the band concerts alone being worth a visit to the show.

HOW MUCH CAPITAL HAVE YOU?

Many farmers do not realize the extent of their investment; or that during the past few years land values have been increased by the use of improved machinery and more rigid live stock requirements; that the capital invested in their farms has increased enormously. According to preliminary figures from the last census, the average investment in Minnesota farms, without consideration of seed, cash, and minor items, is $11,385. A great many of our farms, that are of average size, in the southern part of the state, will show average valuations of $18,000 to $25,000. In fact, most farmers have as great an investment in their business as the average country business man has invested in his business. The amount of capital, and the form in which it is invested on the farm, should be carefully considered by the farmer who wishes to make the greatest profit.

Capital may be invested in forms which are relatively unproductive, This is true principally where capital is invested in buildings which are too expensive for the use to which they are put, in stock which is unproductive; or in machinery and equipment which is either used insufficiently or is not properly cared for.

Capital, to be productive, must earn current rates of interest. These rates will average from 5 to 6 per cent in this state. This means that the average farm must not only pay the cost of operation, but in addition pay $684.10 in interest, before the owner can figure that he has received any thing for his own labor or the labor of his family. While a great many farms are not earning interest at this rate for their owners and paying them wages in addition, it is because of the fact that they are either improperly organized or not well farmed. As the capital invested in the farms increases, methods of farming must be so changed as to give an increased earning power equivalent to the additional capitalization. Most farmers in Minnesota could increase their earning power by using additional capital in the purchase of productive live-stock. At the present time, the farms show too large a percentage of their capital invested in land, and not enough in stock and equipment for caring for it.—Thomas Cooper, Minn. Agricultural College.

GET MANURE ON FIELDS, IF POSSIBLE.

There is often time, during the late fall and the early winter, to clean out the yars and sheds before stock is put in for the winter. Experience goes to show that there is less waste of the fertilizing elements of manure when it is taken directly to the fields from the yards. When spread in the fall, remaining frozen through the winter, there is very little loss of fertility, and time is saved in the spring in preparing the land for a crop. While it is advisable to plow in the fall the land intended for corn, there is often land that cannot be reached on account of pressure of other work; and frequently a piece of land is reserved, for fodder or ensilage corn, that is not plowed until spring. Such a piece offers splendid opportunity for dressing with manure from the yards and also in hastening the spring work by having the manure hauling reduced to the minimum. It is a mastake to allow the manure to lie in the yards from early fall until after the crop is in the next season, or until it is harvested. Economy of labor and conservation of the manurial elements demand that the manure be spread upon the land as fast as it accumulates about the barns and yards. This practice should be followed so far as the growth of crops and the climatic conditions will allow.—Andrew Boss, Agriculturist Minn. Exp. Station.

JOHN AOS INSTALLS KEROSENE-GAS SYSTEM.

The John Aos store has solved the heating problem by instlling a kerosene gas heating system. The kerosene tank is located in the store room at a high enough elevation so that the kerosene runs by gravity through a small pipe down into the heating stove, that was used before with millwood as fuel. The kerosene is heated in its passage through a coil of pipe in the stove, and is thus vaporized, after which it is ignited, the resulting gas flame striking a sheet-iron spreader. This kerosene heating system was installed with very little trouble and expense, and means that a hot fire can be started in about three minutes. Aside from the matter of greater convenience, Mr. Aos says that he will get just as much heat, more evener, and with a less cost for fuel than under the old system of burning coal and wood.

Marriages.

WEDMER—BAKKE.

Tuesday afternoon occurred the marriage of Miss Theodora C. Wedmer to Mr. M. O. Bakke, both residents of this city, the bride having lived here since childhood. The wedding was a very quiet one, only the immediate family being present.

The young couple will make their home here. The Press unites with their many friends in extending congratulations.

THOEN—IVERSON.

Last Saturday evening Rev. I. T. Aastad officiating, Miss Hilda Thoen and Mr. Peter Iverson were united in marriage at the Parsonage in the presence of [illegible] friends and relatives only.

The Press extends congratulations.

The Making of Chipped Glass.

Sheets of glass that are covered with a shell-like raised pattern are in use for screens, partitions, electric light fixtures and other purposes. This chipped glass, for the pattern is often really chipped out of the surface, involves a process that is interesting. The sheet of glass to be treated is placed under a sand blast in order to give it a grain. This ground surface is next treated with a solution of good glue, and the glass is placed in a drying room on a rack, where it remains for some hours. Next the sheets of glass are removed to the chipping room, where they are placed on edge back to back, with the coated surfaces outward. This room is heated by steam coils, and when the heat is turned on the glue reaches its utmost degree of desiccation and curls off the glass in pieces from the size of a dime to that of a silver dollar, but it adheres so closely to the glass that in its effort to get free it tears a piece off the surface, the result being a beautiful pattern.—Harper's Weekly.

The Logical Name.

"What a queer name for a child," said the woman who had just moved next door. "Are you sure they named it Breeze?"

"Yes, indeed, and it is a most natural name for the child," was the reply.

"I suppose it's the outcome of a cheap joke on the father's part," sighed the new neighbor. "When the child is naughty he is likely to suggest a spanking Breeze."

"Not at all, though I'll mention that to him," said the other. "You see, the family name is Storm. Before she was married the mother's name was Wind—Augusta Wind. Upon marriage her name became Storm, of course, making it Wind-Storm. Now, when the little girl was born they were puzzled about selecting a name. They could not agree until some one said a little Wind-Storm might be called a Breeze. The little one is just like her mother, and a little Gusta Wind is"—

But the new neighbor wouldn't stay to hear the rest of it.—New York Press.

John o'Groat's to Land's End.

The distance in English miles between John o'Groat's, in the extreme north of England, to Land's End, in the farthest south, is about 480 miles as the crow flies, though by the ordinary lines of travel, of course, the distance is something more than that.

About Postal Savings Bonds

Assignment of Bonds.

8. Registered bonds are assigned by the use of a form printed on the back, properly dated and acknowledged. When the assignment is made by mark, it must be witnessed by at least one person other than the officer before whom it is made. A ledger account is opened in the Treasury Department at Washington with each holder of one or more registered bonds, and when such bonds are assigned they should be transmitted by the new owner to the Secretary of the Treasury (Division of Loans and Currency) for transfer on the books of the department. Registered bonds can not be exchanged for coupon bonds. Coupon bonds may be converted into registered bonds, without charge, at the request of the hoder.

Assignment By Minors.

9. Under the regulations of the Treasury Department a minor can not assign registered bonds without the consent of a duly appointed guardian or trustee, evidence of whose authority must be submitted. A minor has the right to convert his postal savings certificates into registered bonds, but if he should desire to assign the bonds during his minority he must comply with this regulation. This difficulty does not exist in the case of coupon bonds, which are trans ferred by mere delivery.

Payment of Interest on Bonds.

10. Interest on registered bonds is paid by checks drawn at the Treasury Department in favor of the registered holder. These checks are sent by mail to the post office address of the holder, and the holder of a registered bond should notify the Secretary of the Treasury (Division of Loans and Currency) of any change in his postoffice address at least 15 days before the interest falls due. Checks for interest on registered bonds, as well as interest coupons detached from coupons bonds, are payable on presentation at the United Sates Treasury or at the office of any assistant treasurer of the United States. Interest checks and coupons covering interest on postal savings bonds may be cashed by postmasters under the same conditions as other Government paper.

Bonds Lost or Destroyed.

11. Payment on registered bonds that have been lost or stolen may be stopped by notifying the Secretary of the Treasury (Division of Loans and Currency) at Washington. If coupon bonds are lost the Government does not undertake to protect the owner against the wrongful holder, but recognizes the bearer only. The owner has recourse only to such means as he could use to recover any other valuable property. When bonds either registered or coupon, have been destroyed wholly or in part, or defaced, a claim may be filed with the Secretary of the Treasury under certain prescribed conditions for their replacement. Such claims will not be allowed for coupons which have been detached from coupon bonds.

Information Relating to Ownership.

12. United States bonds are issued, transferred, and redeemed under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe. Requests by holders for additional information after the delivery of the bonds should be addressed to the Secretary of the Treasury (Division of Loans and Currency), Washington, D. C.

COMMISSION FORM ADOPTED.
Vote in Three Cities West of the Missouri Favors It.

Knasas City, Mo., Nov. 8.—Commission form of government won in two cities west of the Missouri river in yesterday's election. Chanute and Manhattan, Kan., while a third, Sacramento, Cal., appears to have voted for the change. In both Chanute and Manhattan the proposition carried in every precinct. In the campaign at Manhattan no fight was made against the commission form.

To date this makes 154 cities and towns now under either direct commission form or some modified style of that system. Of this number 139 have direct commission form without modification.

Proved His Case.

Mother—The whipping you had yesterday does not seem to have improved you. Your behavior has been even worse today. Willie—That's what I wanted to prove. You said I was as bad as I possibly could be yesterday. I knew you were wrong.

SCHOOL NOTES.

* * * * * * * * * * *

As a matter of interest to the taxpayers, it ought to be stated that all school supplies of every nature whatsoever are purchased by the board of education from dealers in this city. Benhard Knudson, one of he board members, is purchasing agent, and no employee of the board, nor even a board member, is authorized to buy anything for the schools unless on the signed order of the purchasing agent on a blank provided for that purpose. Textbooks and occasionally an article not carried by local dealers are necessarily purchased abroad. An examination of the purchasing blanks will also disclose the fact that the business is divided as equally as possible among the dealers.

The kindergarten rooms in the Knox and Central will be placed on half day sessions next Monday. The crowded condition of these rooms compels this action. The Central enrolls 59 and the Knox 55. Under the half day session plan the children will receive more assistance and actually work longer time than at present, as the first division of older pupils will remain in school from 9 to 12 o'clock, and the younger children from 1:30 to 4. They will also have the undivided attention and time of the teacher. If the approaching cold weather cuts down the attendance the rooms will return to whole day sessions. The legal school age is from 5 to 21, but the board of education, in accordance with a custom prevailing in many towns, requires beginners to be at least six years of age. Parents are insisting on entering children of five years of age and over. It is an impossibility to discriminate.

The football boys won a hard fought victory last Saturday over their old time antagonists from Fosston. The game was marred by no unseemly actions on either side and was a good exhibition of modern football with enough of the old mass plays thrown in to give it spice. The expense of bringing the Fosston players here and the small gate receipts compelled the team to "pass the hat around" to meet the deficit.

The teachers were pleasantly entertained last Saturday evening by the Misses Emma and Clara Backe at their residence on south Main Avenue. This hospitable home is annually thrown open to the school faculty and the event is always regarded as one of the most pleasing experiences of the whole school year.

Parents sometimes report that their children have no home work to do evenings. Every child in and above the sixth grade has home tasks to perform, which requires from thirty minutes to two hours, according to the grade. The parents may rest assured that where no advance work is attempted there is something wrong. These tasks are assigned as there is not time in school for all the recitations and the performance of the advance work as well. The excuse that many children spend their evenings on the street and still are making passing marks will not hold, as nearly all of this class of students are failing in one or more studies every month and they will eventually fail of promotion and leave school, as have all their predecessors.

Every person over 15 years of age who for various reasons cannot attend school but a few months each year ought to enroll in the short course as soon as possible. There are no expenses of any kind connected with the course and students may enter and leave each day to suit their convenience if they have home tasks to perform.

The enrollment by buildings to date is as follows: Knox, 250; Central, 361; Washington, 310; Lincoln, 194, total, 1115.

The total expense of the sewing and cooking departmens in the high school for all material used during the months of September was $21.98; for October, $13.28. The supplies were purchased from seven different firms in this city and were used by 63 girls in the high school and 44 in the eighth grade. This makes the per capita expense for these two departments about 16 cents a month.

With a reliable timepiece on duty now in the Knox, it is possible to keep the bells of the schools correct.

Janitor Runnestrand spent the last few days in Fargo on business.

LAND SHOW WILL GIVE MANY PRIZES

St. Paul Associaton of Commerce Offers Silver Trophy Cups.

BEST EXHIBITS WILL WIN

Business Interests of the Twin City and Those Interested in the Development of the American Northwest Contribute Prizes Worth Thousands of Dollars to Encourage Exhibition of Products at Land Show in St. Paul December 12 to 23.

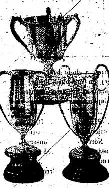
Exhibitors from every state at the Northwestern Land Products Show in St. Paul Dec. 12 to 23, will be given an opportunity to compete for more than fifty valuable silver trophy cups offered for the best displays, twenty of the trophies being given by the St. Paul Association of Commerce.

This announcement was made by the management of the Land Show and the Association of Commerce this week. Accompanying the announcement is the statement explaining how the trophies are offered.

"As the Land Show in St. Paul is an enterprise given by the states of the American Northwest, individual competition is almost eliminated by necessity," says the statement. "The trophies are therefore offered to the commercial clubs, communities or states first. Another class of prizes is offered for the growers furnishing the best samples to their state or sectional exhibits. It is not desired that any individual make an exhibit at the Land Show except as the samples are furnished those who are collecting and preparing the state and sectional exhibits. The name of the grower may appear on each of these samples. The trophies in this class, of course, will go to the grower furnishing the samples, but competitors must make entries with those in charge of the state or community exhibits in their own states and not through the Land Show management."

The offering of [illegible] trophies is a par with other [illegible] land show. It is perhaps the list of trophies ever offered by a Land Show.

These states and their individual contributors, commercial clubs and communities will have the opportunity to win the cups: Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota, Montana, Idaho, Washington, Oregon and Alaska.



Three of the Association of Commerce Trophies.

Here is a partial list of the trophies offered:

The St. Paul Association of Commerce will give silver trophy cups for the best state exhibit and for the best sectional exhibit.

In Minnesota the following cups are offered: For the best half bushel of winter wheat; for the best ten ears of corn; for the best bushel of potatoes, and for the best bushel of oats

For North Dakota two prizes are offered, a cup for the best bushel of wheat and another for the best half bushel of flax.

South Dakota exhibitors will be given cups for the best bushel of wheat and for the best ten ears of corn.

For the best half bushel of non-irrigated and for the best half bushel of irrigated winter wheat some Montana growers or exhibitors will receive cups.

Idaho is offered a cup for the best five boxes of commercial apples.

Oregon and Washington growers will have an opportunity for friendly competition, as a cup is offered for the best bushel of apples grown in either Washington or Oregon, and another cup for the best sample of alfalfa. There is a cup for the best half bushel of wheat shown from Central Oregon, and for the best collection of processed fruits from either state.

Besides the cups offered by the Association of Commerce, the Great Northern railroad offers a cup in each state for the grower furnishing for the state exhibit the best collection of samples. The Sioux City Tribune is offering a handsome silver cup for the best showing made from an acre of alfalfa in South Dakota.

Many other prizes are offered by the Land Show and business firms of St. Paul and Minneapolis, announcements of which have been made to the state commissions collecting the exhibits.

PAPERS FREELY PUBLISH NEWS

Chinese Government Removes Muzzle From Press.

LONG STORIES OF MASSACRE

Rigorous Censorship Disappears and Details of Hankow Atrocities Are Made Public—Journals Blame Imperialist Leader for Both Hankow and Shanghai Outbreaks—Animosity Towards Manchus Increases.

Peking, Nov. 7.—The removal of the rigorous censorship hitherto imposed on the Chinese press is a notable sign of the times. The Chinese papers publish with the greatest freedom long accounts of the Hankow massacres, giving the details and attributing the blame to the imperialist leaders for both the Hankow and Shanghai outbreaks. As a consequence of these publications there is increased animosity towards the Manchus.

The United States and Great Britain have decided to take effective measures for the protection of their people in China, in event of danger to foreigners, which, however, does not yet appear probable.

It is suspected that the regent's brother, Prince Tsai Saun, has left the country, as he has not been seen for three days. He obtained a month's leave from his post as acting minister of the navy.

A private letter from an officer of Yuan Shi Kai's staff says that the rebel leader, General Li Yuen Heng, makes twenty-five demands, the most important of which is that the imperial household shall proceed to Jehel, with the entire court, including the eunuchs, and shall remain there, receiving in turn adequate pensions from the new government, which is to be republican.

A special secret meeting of the national assembly decided to telegraph Yuan Shi Kai, explaining the fearfully involved condition of the political situation at Peking, which required the immediate presence of the premier. Otherwise the assembly would be unable to tide over the difficulties. A member of the assembly explains that this is a fair warning and that, if Yuan does not comply, another premier possibly may be appointed.

Consular reports from Mukden say many Chinese are fleeing into the country, believing the Manchus will retreat to Mukden and massacre the Chinese inhabitants.

The only demand the people have made lately which the throne has not granted is the punishment of officials responsible for the Hankow slaughter. Noting this the Chinese in Peking consider it a further proof of the throne's weakness, that it has not dared to antagonize any faction or party.

ANNULS GREAT NORTHERN GRANT

Court Cancels Title to Valuable Copper Property.

ALLEGED FRAUDS IN PATENT

Land Is Located in Washington State and Worth Six Million Dollars—Patent Was Granted to the St. Paul, Minneapolis and Manitoba, a Subsidiary of the Hill Line—Land Now Reverts to Government.

Seattle, Nov. 7.—By a decision handed down in United States district court here by Judge Hanford a patent granted by the government to the St. Paul, Minneapolis and Manitoba railroad, a subsidiary company of the Great Northern, to a tract of copper land at Reiter, on the Skymosh in Snohomish county, was canceled. A deed given by the railroad company to the Cascade Power company was declared void. The land is worth $6,000,000.

The decision is the outcome of a suit brought on July 24 by the Bunker Hill Smelting company, as an intervening claimant, and the United States government. The rights of the smelting company are not affected by the present decision.

The suit resulted from a dispute over the value of the land for mineral purposes.

The suit charged that Thomas A. Benton, agent for the railroad company, as late as 1905 took up the land in lieu of claims previously held by the company in the Dakotas and other states.

The complaint set forth that in 1907 the land, through fraud practiced by the defendant, was clear listed and patented. The fraud, it was charged, was contained in affidavits made at the time the patent was obtained that the land was nonmineral.

In contradiction of the sworn statement that the tract in contention contained no minerals it was set forth that the Bunker Hill company, prior to 1905, had acquired mineral claims in Snohomish county and had done $15,000 worth of work upon them.

The land now will revert to the government.

Mr. Benton has denied there was any fraud. He has said when the land was released there was no evidence it contained mineral.

PROVINCE SECURES BONDS

Important Railway Securities Case Decided in Alberta.

Edmonton, Alta., Nov. 7.—Justice Stuart of the supreme court of Alberta handed down a decision granting the province the right to collect from the Alberta and Great Waterways railway $7,400,000, the proceeds from the sale of the company's bonds guaranteed by the province. In its decision the court states that the legislature did not go beyond its powers in repudiating the bonds.

The Alberta and Great Waterways Railway company was organized by W. R. Clark of Kansas City. The government guaranteed the bonds, which were sold to J. P. Morgan & Co. of New York.

Later, after a political turmoil during which the cabinet resigned and a special election was called, the legislature repudiated its guarantee. The proceeds of the bonds now are in Canadian banks.

RYAN LETS ALASKA LAND GO

Files Relinquishment on Controller Bay Tract.

Washington, Nov. 7.—Richard S. Ryan, alleged author of the famous "Dick to Dick" letter, which started the Controller bay investigation during the extra session of congress last summer, relinquished all claim to the [illegible] six-acre tract on Controller bay, Alaska, known as the Canyon creek line terminal tract.

Mr. Ryan is president of the Controller Railway and Navigation company. The claim which he relinquished lies between the claims of J. J. Ryan and A. L. Scheer, which, it is conceded, were taken in the interest of the railway and navigation company, of which Mr. Ryan is head.

CAUSES WHEAT MARKET BREAK

Rumor That Federal Agents Are Probing Alleged Corner.

WHIRL OF EXCITED SELLING

Markee Declines on Reports That the Government Will Begin Action for Alleged Conspiracy.

Chicago, Nov. 3.—Any man or set of men who buy so much grain that the price is held out of line or out of reach of buyers may be considered as acting in restraint of trade. That is the basis upon which, in the opinion of President J. C. F. Merrill of the Chicago board of trade, Washington agents are working in the investigation of an alleged corner in wheat centered at Chicago and extending from Duluth and Minneapolis to the seaboard.

"I know that the federal agents who were in La Salle street Tuesday went to the Northwest markets," said President Merrill. "This makes it look as if the department of justice at Washington considered there was some understanding between big wheat owners here and at other centers. So far as the board of trade as an organization is concerned, all is serene."

Rumors were current that a former stenographer of the weighmaster's office of the board had given evidence to the government. According to reports in circulation 60 per cent of the country's wheat supply is controlled by an illegal combination of speculators and 17,000,000 bushels of the total holdings of the clique are in Chicago grain elevators.

Threats that warehouse receipts for millions of bushels of wheat in store here might be seized as evidence in a conspiracy trial had a paralyzing effect on change. In the last few minutes of trading the market broke nearly 2 cents from top figures and closed in a whirl of excited selling, within one-quarter cent of the lowest point of the day, 95⅜ cents for December.

CLEARS MOROCCAN TANGLE

France Cedes Germany Territory in Northern Congo.

Paris, Nov. 4.—The contents of the Franco-German accord, officially given out, show that Germany recognizes the right of France to establish a protectorate in Morocco, while both nations engage to obtain the adhesion to this accord of the other signatories to the Algeciras agreement.

France, as compensation for the German recognition of her protectorate in Morocco, cedes to Germany about 250,000 square kilometers in Northern French Congo, touching the German Kameruns. The territory ceded is inhabited by about 1,000,000 negroes and has a commerce value at $2,400,000 annually.

France and Germany agree to submit to The Hague tribunal all difficulties arising from the operation of the accord.

Regulars Offer Little Resistance to Occupation.

COURTESY SHOWN FOREIGNERS

Chinese Soldiers Join Revolutionists and Police and Firemen Appear to Be in Full Sympathy.

Shanghai, Nov. 4.—Except for the foreign concessions Shanghai is in the hands of the revolutionists who captured the city. There was practically no resistance, only a few shots, being fired. All the Chinese soldiers have joined the revolutionists and the police and firemen are apparently sympathizing with them, for they are wearing white badges.

After taking over the arsenal the rebels burned the taotai's yamen in the native city. Every courtesy is shown foreigners. The soldiers, police and firemen are continuing on duty. Shops are closed.

While the action of the rebels was expected the movement was made quietly. After a slight disturbance in the northern section of the city notices were posted throughout the native city announcing that "the military government of China" had taken over Shanghai. It warned the populace against disorder.

The arsenal, where recently here had been the greatest activity preparatory to assisting the up river forts and providing ammunition for Admiral Sah, was called on to surrender by the revolutionaries The chief officials disappeared, but a few other officials continued to hold it, without, however, any show of force. A few shots were fired, but the revolutionaries warned the officials remaining that they intended to take the arsenal even if they had to fight for it and the officials quietly evacuated.

It is understood that one reason for the revolutionaries taking Shanghai was that two Norwegian vessels had been loaded at the arsenal during the last two days with ammunition for Admiral Sah. These vessels succeeded in getting away.

CAPTURE TWO MORE TOWNS

Chinese Rebels Also Secure Three Government Gunboats.

Shanghai, Nov. 7.—Three Chinese gunboats, forming a part of Admiral Sah Chen Ping's fleet, which put in here for provisions, went over to the rebels.

Chingkiang, in the province of Kiangsu, has fallen. The city is a treaty port, second in importance only to Shanghai. The population is about 150,000.

Changchow, capital of the province of Chekiang, was taken by the rebels after a brief but spirited resistance.

TO EXHUME OTHER BODIES

Chicago Woman Accused of Poisoning Policeman.

Chicago, Nov. 4.—Mrs. Louise Vermilya formally was charged with the murder of Policeman Arthur Bissonette by poisoning him with arsenic, after the report of toxicologists who had examined the viscera of the dead roomer at the widow's home had been made known. Coroner Hoffman announced that he will have exhumed the bodies of at least two of the other eight persons who have died in her home during the last eighteen years.

Professor Walter L. Haines, Dr. Ralph W. Webster and Dr. E. R. Lecount reported to the coroner they found more than enough arsenic in the liver and other organs of Bissonette to have caused his death.

The Larch in Labrador.

The soil and atmosphere are so cold and dry in faraway Labrador that scarcely any vegetation thrives at all. The larch is a species of pine tree which is found in all northern countries, but its growth is so stunted in Labrador that a specimen found on the most southern part of that dreary land was but nine inches in height and the trunk was but three-eighths of an inch in diameter. A careful examination of the miniature tree revealed its age to be at least thirty-two years, for there were that number of ring growths shown in its small trunk. The very cold currents pouring down from the north and the fact that Labrador has less sunshine than Alaska, together with several inland climatic conditions, make the summer seasons shorter and colder than are those of Alaska.—Exchange.

The Smoky City.

A Pittsburg man once submitted a Pittsburg story to a New York magazine and got a wire from the editor:

"Will accept story if cut out libel."

So the Pittsburg man hurried over to New York and asked the editor whom he had libeled.

"You have libeled your native city, sir," was the reply. "Why," said the editor, turning over the manuscript, "don't you say here on page 23 that the heroine clutched the air desperately?"

"Yes. Go on."

"And then two paragraphs further down you say she washed her hands. Well, that"—

The editor frowned angrily at the author.

"That, sir, is a foul and disgusting libel on Pittsburg's air."—Detroit Free Press.

Told Him His Fate.

Family secrets will out. It has been the ambition of an Overbrook mother to marry her daughter to a young civil engineer who is on the road to brilliant success. But the young man, much in love with the daughter as he is, has not fully decided whether to ask her to marry him.

Visiting at the home the other evening, the young man encountered little Bobbie. "Are you going to marry sister?" asked the lad.

Much embarrassed, the visitor stammered that he didn't know.

"Well, you are," returned Bobbie, with emphasis.—Philadelphia Times

Fighter of the Family.

The tough little boy with the red air and freckled face pushed up against the neat little boy and said impudently:

"My sister can lick your sister."

The neat little boy did not argue the matter.

"And my big brother can lick your big brother."

The good little lad winced.

"And my ma can lick your ma."

The quiet lad shifted from one foot to the other.

"And my pa can lick your pa."

There was a flash of pink shirt waist, the sound of some hard object coming in contact with a spongy substance, and the quiet little lad stood triumphantly over his adversary, quietly waiting for him to push his nose back into the center of his face where it belonged.

"But just remember this," he observed quietly, "you can't lick me."—Youngstown Telegram.

VIEWS BANK COMBINE WITH MUCH CONCERN

Attorney General Says Money Trust Exists.

Washington, Nov. 4.—Attorney General Wickersham's report of his investigation of the National City bank of New York virtually charges the National City company, a subsidiary corporation, with being an embryo "money trust," controlled by the National City bank for holding stocks in other financial institutions in contravention of the national bank law.

Secretary MacVeagh does not agree with the attorney general and President Taft will take up the case when he returns to Washington. In the meantime the department of justice has been continuing its consideration of the case. The attorney general has stated publicly that he viewed with some concern the combination of banking capital in New York.

It seems to be generally understood in official circles that the government hopes to oppose successfully the connection between the National City bank and its company.

Getting the Bank's Help.

Financial ability is not alone the power of getting moneyed men's ears and interesting "big capital." The bank is the bulwark of small business. Given an enterprise that has a legitimate excuse for being and available assets, if it is backed by men of integrity, it can always command the support of its bank for working capital. Yet it is astounding how many small businesses start without even conferring with a bank or banker. This is a mistake. The man who wants to finance a small concern successfully should get acquainted with his bankers, keep them in touch with the business and afford them every opportunity to analyze its condition. There is no finer security than the confidence of your bank, and the cost of getting capital in this way is very small indeed compared with the cost of underwriting more or less inflated issues of stock.—Business.

Never.

"Never" is a word which is wrongly defined in the dictionary.

In that book we gather the understanding that "never" means not at all, forevermore.

But—

Each day in our broad land young women vow that they will never forgive young men.

Men lift their right hands to high heaven and swear that they will never take another drink.

Husbands promise never to forget to write every day.

Wives promise never to make another extravagant and foolish purchase.

Candidates aver that they will never run for office again.

Women say they will never speak to some one any more.

In all these cases "never" means any length of time from one hour to four days.—Life.

"Pshaw! What are you giving me, youngster?" cried the reporter. "Don't be too funny. Your mother hasn't got three legs."

"I didn't say she had," retorted the wicked boy. "The legs belonged to a table which mother fell against. She wasn't hurt at all."

SOME WIVES WANTED

By M. QUAD

Spring had just opened at Strawberry hill diggings when something occurred to put us all in a happy frame of mind. Deacon Turner, who had left us in the fall to pass the winter in the east, returned to camp. He brought with him a grand scheme, and a public meeting was called that he might unfold it. I can clearly remember him as he stood on the head of an empty pork barrel to address the 250 miners assembled. He was tall and angular and serious. Whenever a man died within twenty miles of us his comrades sent for the deacon to conduct the funeral services, and the deacon did it in such a nice, smooth way that everybody enjoyed the occasion. I also remember his opening address. He said:

"Feller Citizens—Let us git right down to bizness. This 'ere camp, numberin' 250 men, is a-cryin' out like the children in the wilderness fur—what? Whisky? No; you ar' two bar'ls ahead. Meat? No; thar's plenty of meat. Punkin pie and feather beds? No; we hain't no use fur luxuries. What our hearts is achin' fur is 250 wives to soothe our weary souls. [Tremendous applause.] No place is home without a woman. No man kin be happy without a wife. [Whoops and yells.] Paradise wouldn't be much shucks without women. [More yells.] When our work for the day is over we hev no homes to go to, no wives to welcome us, nobody to smooth us down and comb our hair and sing soothin' songs to rest our weary limbs.

"Why hain't we got wives and homes?" demanded the deacon as he raised his right arm and extended it toward the east.

"'Cause we hain't gone at it to git 'em. Away off thar in the east are 250 women a-cryin' out fur husbands and homes. [Long continued applause.] I kin almost hear 'em holler. They want 'em, and they want 'em bad."

The most intense excitement prevailed when the deacon stepped down. He had been east where there were women. He must know that they were pining to come. He was followed by Judge Pearsall, who had two or three wives back in the States, but who feelingly declared that he wanted one of the drove of 250. Then Colonel Taylor, who had run away from his second or third, mounted a barrel and shed tears as he drew a picture of a happy home at Strawberry hill—a home made happy by the presence of a wife. Two or three others had something to say in the same strain, and then Deacon Turner unfolded his plan. The camp was to raise as large a fund as possible, and the deacon was to return to the States, collect the 250 females and conduct them by the quickest route to Strawberry hill. We were playing in luck just then, and the smallest contribution was $5. I believe the deacon took away with him in cold cash nearly $2,000. Every man's name went down on the list, according to the amount he paid, and the following schedule was posted on the trader's front door:

"Twenty-five dollars gits the pick of the lot.

"Twenty dollars gits a reg'lar widder.

"Fifteen dollars gits a grass widder.

"Ten dollars gits a gal.

"Five dollars gits an old maid or whatever is left over.

"No departure from these rules under any circumstances."

The "schedule" seemed perfectly fair and was accepted by all. The deacon left us in May, and we could look for him back in September at the latest.

It was three months to a day before the lookout posted on the hill signaled to us that a caravan was in sight. Had a barrel of powder exploded in camp the excitement could not have been greater. Everybody got into his vest at once, and, according to program, we marched to the hill.

By and by the cavalcade appeared. Deacon Turner appeared first. Behind him, seated on a mule, came a female—a woman, one lone woman. That was all! She was fifty-five years old, wrinkled, gray haired and almost toothless, and she didn't look supremely happy.

"Whar's the other 249?" demanded 100 voices in chorus, while a score of men ran to the top of the hill.

"I'll explain later on," replied the deacon as he continued his way to the camp.

He did. After he had tucked the old woman away in a shanty he came out to us and said:

"Boys, 'low me to introduce my wife."

"But whar's our wives?" yelled the crowd.

"Boys, we didn't figger jest right," continued the deacon. "When I got east I found that women had ris like all git out and could git married quicker'n lightnin'. I didn't want to cum back empty handed, and so I paid that ar' critter in thar (pointing to the tent) $1,400 to marry me and cum along. The balance of the fund was used in travelin' around. I'm sorry, but if women has ris no one is to blame fur it."

We got the deacon under a tree and a rope over a limb, but wiser counsels prevailed, and his life was spared. His "critter" died in about two weeks after she struck camp, and as a result we forgave him and let him stake out a new claim. He was never the same to us again however. He had left us 249 short, and we could never get over it.

PRESIDENT SEES IMMENSE FLEET

Mr. Taft Has First Real View of American Navy.

New York, Nov. 3.—President Taft has had his first real view of the American navy. It has so happened that since he entered the White House the fleet, which was so greatly admired by his predecessor, Colonel Roosevelt, has been on widely scattered duty. And while the president reviewed two divisions of the Atlantic fleet in Provincetown harbor in 1911, and a little more than two weeks ago in San Francisco stood on the quarterdeck of the flagship California of the Pacific fleet, he never until now has come into his own as commander-in-chief of the fighting forces of the country.

From the bridge of the presidential yacht Mayflower Mr. Taft reviewed the gray armada which for nearly a week has swung at anchor in the Hudson river, awaiting his inspection. As the little white Mayflower picked her way in and out among the giant craft of the battleship line the guns roared in salute.

The yacht, with the president's blue crested flag at the main truck, sailed gracefully along the seven-mile column of fighting ships, turned at the end and headed again down the river.

Late in the afternoon the entire fleet, ninety-nine vessels in all, got under way and passed in review of the president while the Mayflower lay at anchor off the Statue of Liberty.

MANY BIG GAME HUNTERS

Thirty-nine Licenses Issued Which Gives Permission of Killing 39 Deer and 39 Moose.

Thirty-nine big-game licenses have been issued by county auditor Fasel, for the deer and moose season which opened November 10th and will close December 1st. Each hunter is allowed one deer and one moose. The license, which costs $1, must be carried by every hunter who shoots big game, whether he shoots in his own county or not. Reports of killing are not coming in very fast, owing to the very bad weather the opening of the season. Many hunters started out but returned to await more settled weather.

The first license, No. 5551, was issued October 30th to John Arthur Lund, Wanke, Minn. John left the following description of himself: Age 21, height 5 ft, 9 in., weight 162 lbs., eyes blue, hair light. The men range in age from 21 years, Lund and Aspelund, to 55 years, Ed. Emerson; in weight from 145 lbs., Aspelund, to 250 lbs., John Vorachek and O. A. Westen. Olaf Hanson has the distinction of being the tallest man. his height being 6 ft. 3.

Licenses have been issued to the following men in the order named:

Was A Splendid Success

Minnesota's First Annual Fire Congress has been held and marks an epoch in the idea of conservation about which one hears so much of late.

The gathering which assembled in St. Paul Wednesday of last week was thoroughly representative, as every county in the state and most of the cities and villages sent delegations of their best citizens to participate in the movement which is looking toward the reduction of the state's ash heap.

Governor Eberhart sent letters to the Mayors of the towns and cities in the state with the request that they select delegates to attend the conference. As these men bore their own expense, many of them coming from the furthermost corners of the state, is proof sufficient that the question of fire waste prevention is all important.

The idea of Fire Prevention Day was suggested at the annual meeting of the National Fire Marshal's Association held in Chicago last June, when Fire Marshal Doyle of Illinois introduced a resolution asking the Governors of the United States to set aside a certain day to be known as "Fire Prevention Day." Fire Marshal Keller took the initiative in this state by laying the matter before Governor Eberhart and the splendid demonstration of last week is the outgrowth of Mr. Keller's request.

The first steps to prevent fire waste

Dredge Work Is Stopped

The first snowstorm of the season swept down upon us last Friday and it has been real Minnesota winter ever since.

As a result of the sudden setin of winter all the walking dredges in the country and most of the floaters have discontinued work and an army of about 350 men has been cut down to below the 100 mark. Those remaining at work will be employed in the local shops and offices and as teamsters, all being busy preparing for next season.

In the meantime there will be a standstill in the construction work until Father Sol again sends its beaming days to drive Jack Frost out of our midst.

The progress of the ditch work during the past season has been very sitasfactory and with one more year like this one the ditch work will be practically completed in this territory.

GOVERNORS RECEIVE MANY INVITATIONS

Governors Hawley, Hay and Johnson Seem To Be Favorites With Ladies' Clubs.

Boise, Idaho, Nov. 17.—That the western governors who will shortly tour through the east as the guests of the "Governors' Special" will be busy during each waking moment on the trip, becomes evident from the schedule of the entertainments provided for the visiting governors during their stay in Chicago, on the first day of the special's trip. Though there will be at least nine western governors, each one a star attraction, it has been found difficult to meet the requests of the numerous organizations in each city to be visited, asking that one or more of the executives attend gatherings held by the different organizations in honor of the visit of the party. Many of the requests have come from equal suffrage organizations, who want the governors to publicly make known their views on the question of equal suffrage.

Governors Hawley of Idaho, Hay of Washington and Johnson of California seem to be favorites with the ladies' clubs, though they are not averse, so it would seem, to have the other governors express their opinions at the suffrage meetings.

The special's stay in the "Windy City" will give the exeutives a good idea of the way in which their time has been alloted during the rest of the trip. Arriving in Chicago on the morning of the 28th, the party will go to the hotel provided for them, where an informal reception will be in order until noon. The Minnesota Club has arranged a luncheon in honor of her most prominent citizen—Governor Eberhart. Other luncheons have been provided for the visitors by several of the commercial organizations and the land show management, which will furnish a lunch, and will then take the party to the land show at the Colliseum, where a specially arranged program has been provided. In the evening, the party will be devided, as there are two big banquets on the program, at which several of the governors must make addresses. One will be the annual banquet of the Cook County realty board. Governor James H. Hawley of Idaho, is the star attraction for that affair, as he recently accepted a special invitation from that body nors are also scheduled for addressnors area lso scheduled for addresses. The Chicago Association of commerce will tender a banquet in honor of the gubernatorial party, at which those of the govrnors who are not on the program at the former affair, will attend.

The special will be accompanied from St. Paul to Chicago by staff correspondents of the Chicago Tribune and the Record Herald. It is also assured that the train will be accompanied for the full trip, by an associated press correspondent. On board the special from time to time will be correspondents of various papers who will meet the party at the preceding cities, so it is assured that the trip will be fraught with plenty of publicity for the west.

JANUARY TERM OF COURT

List of Grand and Petit Jurors Chosen For First Regular Term in Pen. Co.

The list of grand and petit jurors for the first regular term of court to be held in Pennington county has been made out and verified. The men chosen will appear at the court house at 10 o'clock, January 22d. The five county commissioners sent in a list of 72 names for grand and 72 names for petit, commissioners in the odd numbered districts sending in 14 names and in the even numbered 15 names for each jury. These names were certified to the clerk of district court by the county auditor and chairman of the county board. Each name was written on a card, and the total number of names, 144, put into a box. The board for drawing the names was comprised of the clerk of court, sheriff and justice of the peace. 23 names were drawn for the grand jury and 24 for the petit.

The business of the grand jury is to examine accusations against persons charged with crime, and if they see just cause, then to find bills of indictment against them, to be presented to the court. One thing that will come before the present grand jury is the passing on the legality of the Pennington county buildings. The jury has the power to accept the buildings as they are, or order the county commissioners to see that suggested changes are made, if changes are necessary.

The petit jury consists of twelve men, selected from the twenty-four men qualified to serve on that jury, and their business is to try the cases that actually come before the bar of the court. It is the jury whose selection often causes much trouble and delay.

The jury lists are as follows:

Grand Jurors.

Catching Bobs Must Stop

Since the sleighing season opened, many children have started catching on bobs. This is not only an inconvience to the public, but is very dangerous for the children themselves. The practice must be stopped at once. If not stopped it will be necessary to take the offenders to jail. This is the only course left open to me, and will be strictly adhered to. Parents and citizens at large should aid the police department in warning the children of their own personal danger and the penalty connected with bob-catching. Plenty of examples could be cited where children have been injured and teams frightened, due wholly to allowing them to catch at random every sleigh that comes along.

PROGRESSIVES TAKE LEAD

Taft's Suggestions Turned Down In Massachusetts and Ohio.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 16.On August 26, 1911, The Associated Press sent the following dispatch from Hamilton, Mass:

"President Taft began the presidential campaign of 1912 today, his friends believe, in a speech that breathed defiance and condemned the insurgent republicans and democratic combine to revise several schedules of the present tariff at the special session of Congress, just closed.

"The President singled out Senator LaFollette, of Wisconsin, Speaker Champ Clark and Chairman Underwood of the House "Ways and Means" committee as leaders of the attempted revision and charged them with 'playing politics.' Several times re referred by name to Mr. LaFollette but mentioned the other insurgent senators merely as 'LaFollette associates.'"

At the time the speech was delivered the Republicans of Massachusetts were formulating plans for their state campaign. Addressing himself to the state campaign in particular, the President said:

"You have a state election immediately before you into which, it seems to me, national issues ought to enter. We have just finished an extra session of Congress and the matters considered were of such importance to the Commonwealth of Massachusetts that I do not see how the people of the state can withhold an expression of opinion on them.

The President then told of his vetoes of the cotton, woolen and farmers free list bills and in making a final appeal to Massachusetts for vindication said:

"Under these conditions, men of Massahcusetts, it seems to me that the slogan of your party should involve a national cry and not be confined to mere state issues."

Acting upon the President's suggestion, United States Senator W. Murray Crane wrote a stand-pat platform for Louis A. Frothingham, the Republican candidate. The campaign was made an national lines, with the tariff predominating. Frothingham was defeated and Governor Foss, a downward revisionist, was re-elected.

From the point of view of the Progressives one of the most notable victories of Nov. 7th was scored in Ohio. A constitutional convention is to be held in that state shortly and the Progressive candidates pledged themselves to a constitutional amendment providing for the initiative, referendum and recall. On Nov. 7th the Progressives thus pledged were elected by an overwhelming majority and Ohio is now assured of a constitution which will give the people popular government.

In Cincinnati the "Boss" Cox machine ticket went down to defeat. This is particular interesting in view of the President's efforts in behalf of that ticket. Before going to Cincinnata

Ditch Bonds Are Sold

J. A. Duffy cashier of the Merchants State Bank of Red Lake Falls was the successful bidder for $85,000 worth of Pennington county drainage bonds at a recent meeting of the board of County Commissioners.

These bonds bear interest at the rate of 5½ % per annum and will run for 6 to 20 years before maturity.

This is only a small fraction of the Ditch Bond issues of Pennington county and other parties who may desire bonds will have an opportunity of getting some in the near future.

Sends A Good Display

The first of the week Mr. Shaw sent his entire display of cereal and grasses to St. Paul to be put on exhibition during the Land Show to be held at the Capitol next month.

These samples have been collected by Mr. Shaw during the season and are a very creditable display for Pennington county even tho it was gotten up by an individual rather than by the county.

The display will subsequently be used to help decorate the Governor's Special on their trip thru the Eastern States during the latter part of the winter.

Mrs. Torgerson came down from her home at Greenbush Wednesday and remained as the guest of Mrs. K. Dock for a few days.

Frank E. Weiland is building a residence at Grygla which is fast becoming a city in apearance and size.

DWELLING HOUSES ARE SCARCE

What Are We Going To Do With People Who Want To Come Here To Live.

This is the one vital question that confronts our real estate men today.

People are leaving our thriving city almost every day, simply because they are unable to rent a house to live in. Where will the mill put its men when they resume operations, someone must build homes for these people and it is quite evident that our home people cannot do it or will not.

Thief River has lost approximately 500 inhabitants in the last three months on account of not having a place for them to live.

Almost every business man living on the Soo and G. N. Rys., north of here and in some of the smaller towns south desires to move here so that their children can take advantage of our splendid schools. Good many of the railroad men working out of here are living at Adams, Federal Dam, Mahnomen, Glenwood and in other instances they leave their families at Minneapolis or Enderlin, simply because it is almost impossible for them to rent a desirable residence. All of these people are good tenants; they are good pay and it is not necessary to give the collector 10 % for collections.

Now besides these people we have numerous people moving in here from the Dakotas and Canada. Of course, the majority of these people will settle on land tributary to our city, so much the better, we want them and we cannot afford to lose them. If these people cannot stay here, it is certain they are going somewhere else to locate on land.

Labor is not high; residence lots are low, far lower than they should be, and there is no doubt but what tenants can be obtained.

Who is going to make the investment and how are we to get someone to make the investment?

It seems very effective work along these lines.

"CITIZEN."

President Sets Day of Prayer

The people of this land having by long sanction and practice set apart toward the close of each passing year a day on which to cease from their labors and assemble for the purpose of giving praise to Him who is the author of the blessings they have enjoyed, it is my duty as chief executive to designate at this time the day for the fullfillment of this devout purpose.

"Wherefore, I, William Howard Taft, president of the United States of America, designate Thursday, the

NEW CARS FOR SOO LINE

Half Million Dollars Spent For New Cars Combining Comfort And Beauty.

The Soo road is trying hard not to look superior and proud and complacent. To date it has found that a considerable of a job however. The Mogul engines out along the right of way snort just a little more contemptuously than before and the fussy little low-browed switch engines that go bustling about the yards are straining their boiler plates to keep from yelling aloud with triumph. The youngest office boy is becoming a braggart and a boaster, and the high officials who have their being in mysterious inner offices are holding their cigars at just a trifle higher angle than before.

Now, the reason for all this pomp and circumstance is a story worth the telling.

The Soo has a new train. A lot of him. Thirty-five cars of him, and just to prove that the Soo knew its business in getting its crack, de luxe, splendiferous cars from one Barney & Smith, of Dayton, O., listen to the telling of the joys of these cars. For, behold! they are cars as is cars, and their like runneth not in the land nor in the cities of the land.

In the first place they are of steel. And that is STEEL. You could not dent one with a trip-hammer. Underneath are two long steel bridge girders that run from end to end and are welded. And you could bump those girders into a flat car loaded with scrap iron and the flat car would be carried away in the jaws of a wrecker, but those cars would go serenely on unharmed. You see the vestibules are also of steel. And the siders are of steel, and so are the roofs and the floors, and the sides are bolted with large aggressive belts that make the cars look as if they were going to battle and argue with machine guns. For the timid traveler the apearance of these cars is a joy and a concilation, and fear is not.

But listen! This is the exterior that is massive and beautiful, but owing to rain, weather and small boys that like to scratch things with nails, the out-sides are not like unto the insides.

When one goes into the average sleeper, parlor car, diner or observation car he gropes his way down a tortuous aisle that is filled with the spirit of darkness, and when he finally stumbles into the car proper he feels like a prisoner. The roof comes low and the aisle is narrow and the decorations are oppressive. It is the air of a million-dollar hotel as they

Indians Want Whites Moved

Red Lake, Minn., Nov. 13.—The Red Lake Indians want the white men, and certain White Earth Indians removed from the Red Lake reservation. This was the action taken at a council of their tribe, held here by Special Indian Agent Wadsworth. The Indians assert that obnoxious persons are continually stirring up trouble, influencing the Indians against the authorities, and gobbling up their tribal lands. Another object of Mr. Wadsworth's visit was to settle a long outstanding claim of some of their members, for gardens formerly taken for school use. This matter was satisfactorily adjudicated and the claimants are in a fair way to get pay for their lands. In the two days council, not a word of complaint was heard against Superintendent Bishop. The inspector said this was unusual in his experience and in view of the fact that six months ago the Indians were after the superintendent's scalp, is considered still more extraordinary.—Bemidji Pioneer.

TO AILING WOMEN.

A Little Sound Advice Will Help Many Sufferers In Thief River Falls.

No woman can be healthy and well if the kidneys are sick. Poisons that pass off in the secretions when the kidneys are well, are retained in the body when the kidneys are sick. Kidneys and bladder become inflamed and swollen and worse troubles quickly follow. This is often the true cause of bearing down pains, lameness, back ache, etc. Uric poisoning also cause headaches, dizzy spells, languor, nervousness and rheumatic pain.

When suffering so try Doan's Kidney Pills, a remedy that has cured thousands of such cases. You will get better as the kidneys get better, and health will return when the kidneys are well. Let a Thief River Falls woman tell you about Doan's Kidney Pills.

Mrs. J. O. Christopherson, 414 St. Paul Ave., Thief River Falls, Minn., says: "I have used Doan's Kidney Pills with excellent results and they have also been taken with benefit by other members of our family. We keep Doan's Kidney Pills in the house all the time and do not think we could get along without them."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

MUST DISPOSE OF BRUSH.

Under the new law it is made the duty of everyone cutting timber for any purpose to dispose of the slash. This applies to people doing any kind of logging, clearing land for farms, cutting out roads, etc. It is part of the effort being made to prevent forest fires and is going to be enforced. Rangers will be on duty in the winter as well as in the summer to see that brush is properly disposed off. The manner in which slash must be handled will vary more or less with the character of the woods, so that it will be well to get in touch with the ranger before cutting begins.

Contractors and people letting contracts for cutting timber are directly affected by this brush disposal law and the measures being taken to carry it out.

THE EXTRA DOLLAR.

It requires approximately seven dollars per acre to grow a crop. This includes interest on the investment, cost of seed, wear and tear on farm machinery, labor, etc. By adding one dollar's worth of labor to each acre, there is little question but that the average profits should be doubled. As much profit should be realized from the one additional dollar's worth of labor as is now realized from the seven dollars worth of unavoidable labor and investment. Consequently if farmers would devote one-third of their land to growing corn and alfalfa neither of which interferes with the time and labor employed in farming wheat, and put one-third more labor, thus made available on only two-thirds as many acres of wheat, they would grow more wheat than where they spread their energies over one-third larger acerage. The corn and alfalfa fed to live stock would insure them a large additional income, and one that is not often adversely influenced by climatic conditions, while the fertility deposited upon the farm resulting from feeding the corn and alfalfa to livestock would vastly improve the productiveness of the soil

PRIZES FOR INVENTIONS

Substantial Rewards for Those Who Devise Humanitarian Appliances.

The inventors of guns and those who have exercised their talents in improving destrucive war materials have often been richly rewarded in this and other countries. But, if anyone in our own country has received a reward for the invention or perfection of apparatus to lessen the sufferings of sick and wounded in war, no one has ever heard of it. Naturally, therefore, progress in this direction has not been as notable as it might have been. To their honor, be it said, that this condition of affairs has never operated to deter the medical officers of our army and navy from doing, without hope of material reward, all in their power to improve existing apparatus and to invent new appliances. Conditions in other countries have been similar to ours.

Some years ago, in order to better conditions in this respect, the Dowager-Empress of Russia, Marie Feodorovna, established a prize fund consisting of 100,000 roubles (approximately, $50,000.00). This is for the purpose of encouraging inventors having for their purpose the amelioration of the sufferings of sick and wounded in war. Every five years, on the occasion of the quinquennial International Red Cross Conferences, the interest on the fund, amounting to about 20,000 roubles, or $10,000.00 is disbusred in prizes. The first awards were made in London, in 1907. No Americans competed, nor was the exhibition given much publicity in this country. Next year in May, the Internaional Red Cross Conference will be held in Washington, D. C., when the following prizes will be offered:

One 1st prize of 6,000 roubles (approximately, $3,000).

Two 2nd prizes of 3,000 roubles each (approximately, $1,500).

Six 3rd prizes of 1,000 each (approximately, $500).

The subjects of the competition will be:

1. Organization of the methods of evacuation of the wounded on the battlefield, comprising as complete an economy as possible in litter bearers.
2. Portable (surgeons') wash-stands for war.
3. Methods of packing dressings at the aid stations and in the ambulance.
4. Wheeled stretchers.
5. Carriage of stretcher on mule-back.
6. Easily portable folding stretcher.
7. Transport of the wounded between war vessels, hospital ships and the shore.
8. The best method of heating railroad cars by a system independent of steam from the locomotive.
9. The best model of a portable Roentgen apparatus, permitting utilization of X-rays on the battlefield and at first aid stations.

No particular prize is allotted to a special subject; but the best exhibition, as decided by the judges, irrespective of the subject, will be aawarded the maximum prize, and so on. Though this is a new field of endeavor for most American inventors, the substantial monetary rewards should result in many exhibits being entered by them. They have not fallen behind the inventors of other countries in fashioning the destructive agents of warfare, and now that an opportunity is given them to compete with other countries in minimizing the horrors of war, it is certain they will not be found wanting.
